

Cliff Residents Protest Housing

Petitioners Hit Access Route, Construction

A delegation of Cliff residents sought the assistance of the Floyd fiscal court at its meeting Tuesday in halting the development of a proposed apartment complex in their area. In presenting to the court a petition bearing the signatures of 72 area residents, Mrs. Betty Lafferty told the court that the construction of Cliffside Apartments and a proposed access road would cause unnecessary relocation of several residences and would raise the flood level in the surrounding area.

Originally proposed as an industrial site in 1972, the site in question was selected in 1977 for the apartment complex, to be developed by Prestonsburg Housing Authority. Designed as a walk-up townhouse structure, the federally-subsidized complex would contain 95 apartments.

The fiscal court entered into an agreement with the housing authority last July to maintain the access road after its construction. Recently, however, responsibility for developing the site has been transferred from the Prestonsburg Housing Authority to the Church Housing Association.

Professing itself surprised and bypassed by this transfer, the court ordered County Attorney Arnold Turner, Jr., to notify Church Housing Association of the court's intention to re-evaluate its attitude toward the proposed development.

"We do not want this development to interfere with people who have lived in the area all their lives," said Judge-Executive Yvonne S. Jones. She suggested that, if the access road is not relocated, the court should consider withdrawing its support for the project. According to Mrs. Sam George, whose house and trailer lie in the path of the proposed road, local residents are opposed to the project, regardless of who the developer is.

Oldest of Grocery Stores Here Sells, To Be Office Bldg.

Prestonsburg's oldest grocery business, Cooley's Self-Service Grocery, has been closed for conversion to an office building after its purchase last week by Mr. and Mrs. John T. Hill.

Remodeling of the Porter Addition store building will include addition of a second story, preparation of offices, elevation of the ground floor and the razing of a small building nearby to provide parking space. The work is expected to require three months.

The store had been owned and operated by Mr. and Mrs. Bill Cooley since 1968 when its founder, Otis Cooley retired. Bill Cooley, however, had been a part-owner of the store since his return from Army service in World War II. His brother, Otis, founded the business in 1935. The present structure was built in 1952.

The Hill Engineering Company, which is owned by John Hill, will be one of the occupants of the reconstructed building.

Four-Day Radiothon Chapter's Last Hope

In a last-minute effort to save Floyd Chapter of the American Red Cross, Radio Station WPRT will stage a four-day radiothon beginning today (Wednesday) and continuing through Saturday.

The radiothon is planned as an effort to raise the $8,000 needed to assure continued service of the Red Cross Chapter.

David Stephens, Jr., WPRT manager, said his station decided to undertake the fund-raising effort because loss of the chapter will be permanent as of July 15—next Monday—unless the $8,000 needed to pay outstanding bills and to continue its services is forthcoming.

"This section has lost enough. We can't afford to lose the Red Cross," he said.

Floyd Chapter has been in existence 51 years and its services have never been interrupted. But Sallye L. Clark, chapter chairman, warned recently that it will "close forever on July 15, due to the lack of interest and support of the people of Floyd County."

The chapter has served through two world wars, the Korean Conflict, the Murder Theory Not Confirmed By KSP Probe

A relative of John Maynard Hall, 49, of Printer, whose body was found the morning of July 4 on the Hunter Branch road, near McDowell, said Monday he is convinced Hall was murdered, but Kentucky State Police have not yet reached that conclusion.

Suspicion of murder arose when these facts became known:

When Hall's body was discovered on the roadway at 9:50 a.m., rigor mortis had already developed, but two persons who passed the spot two hours earlier told officers no body was at the place where Hall was found.

State Detective Danny Stumbo agreed this week it is obvious that the victim was dead when his body was placed in the roadway after 7:30 a.m. when Mr. and Mrs. Joe Roberts passed the spot and saw nothing amiss. Approximately two hours later, Claude Martin and his mother found the victim's body.

But Stumbo is not ready to term the death a murder. He will await results of an autopsy. The only marks on the body were superficial abrasions about the face, Coroner James J. Carter said.

An alternate theory to that of murder is that Hall's body may have been placed in the roadway in an effort to conceal some other crime.

The victim was a son of Anthony and Eliza Hall, of Dema. Survivors, besides his parents, include his widow, Mrs. Marie Conn; one son, Stevie, of Printer; two stepsons and two stepdaughters, Mrs. Katie Hamilton, of Printer, Mrs. Patty Carroll, Jeffersonville, Ind., Carmel Conn, of Pyramid, and Delano Conn, of Printer; five brothers and five sisters, Irvin Hall, of Allen, Tony Hall, Jr., of Bevinsville, Clifford Hall, of Dema, Tommy Hall, Howe, Ind., Olvin Hall, Wheaton, Ill., Mrs. Martha Sparkman, of Dema, Mrs. Sina Thornton, Norwalk, O., Mrs. Freda Hayes, of Hindman, Mrs. Vivian Gayheart, Stroh, Ind., and Mrs. Mary Sue Triplett, of Bevinsville. He also leaves eight grandchildren.

WITH A PUFF, A HISS, AND A CLANG, a steam locomotive draws away from West Prestonsburg station last week, on its way to Elkhorn City, the next leg on its journey from Lexington to Spartanburg, South Carolina. The train carried passengers on an excursion organized by the Blue Grass Railroad Club of Lexington.

Assessment Totals Rise by $67 Million

Floyd county's assessment of all types of properties stands at $335,120,521—up from last year's assessment by $67,055,169.

Despite the higher value set on property, Property Valuation Administrator Lovel Hall pointed out that Kentucky law provides that the taxes on property may not in any year reach a total of more than 4 percent above that of the preceding year. As a consequence, the higher valuation, he said, will require a rollback in the tax rate to keep the total within that range of gain. New property, assessed for the first time, is not included in the increase limitation.

Real estate values rose this year approximately $15,000,000—from $110,203,996 in 1978 to $126,718,642 this year. Most of this gain was in the values set on residential lots and improvements (up from $65,501,205 to $72,417,424) and commercial and industrial property, which increased from $27,047,853 to $36,307,053. Farm lands and improvements stood fairly stable, up from $15,986,541 in 1978 to $16,307,053 this year. The value of oil, mineral and timber rights showed a drop—from $1,673,397 to $1,618,819. Mobile homes were included in the real estate total.

The total assessment of unmined coal rose this year to $33,051,650 from $14,257,189 in '78.

Other assessment items showing strong gains this year are:

Motor vehicles, $64,344,194, up about $12 million; merchants' inventories and manufactured goods, $21,755,753, an increase of about $7 million; drilling, mining and construction equipment, $20,119,526, about $4½ million above 1978.

The assessment total on aircraft was up from $1,162,100, to $2,121,300, but watercraft showed a drop—$1,109,300 in 1978 to $1,058,900 this year.

Father, Daughters Reunited

Two young New Jersey women were reunited with their father in Allen last week, years after they were convinced he was dead.

Venisa Fields, 19, was only six months old when her parents were divorced. At the time, her mother was pregnant with Vicki, now 18. For their father, the two-year-old marriage he had entered on his discharge from the army in 1960 was broken beyond mending. He moved to Florida, looking for work. It was June 14, 1960.

Two years later, Elmer Fields thought that he and his former wife, Louann, might try again to make their marriage work. He called from Florida and drank in the news of his two little girls in Ocean, New Jersey, but it became clear there would be no reconciliation.

In 1965, according to members of the family, Fields' brother, then stationed at Fort Monmouth, N.J. prior to army service in Vietnam, made contact with the family in nearby Ocean and, for reasons best known to himself, told them that Elmer had died. At the same time,

This Town...That World

Trust completely any long-range weather forecast, if its range is no more than three hours long.

I offer that advice after having read in a national magazine of some repute last month that the July precipitation in Kentucky would be normal. Also after splashing my way in and out of the daily rain.

NAME WITHHELD

Although the man signed his note to us, he will, for practical reasons which will become obvious, remain anonymous. He wrote:

"Please renew my mother-in-law's subscription before I'm boiled in oil."

The most interesting headline I've read recently was, "How To Tell When Someone Is Lying"—it was in the National Enquirer.

THE DIFFERENCE

The finer shades of meaning of certain words continue to plague us. The other day, somebody asked the difference, if any, in "cogitate" and "ruminate." Both connote meditation, pondering over a matter. But, going back to the word, "ruminant," we had the bright idea that if you ruminate you are chewing a cud. Maybe a chew of Brown's Mule would serve as a substitute.

A SERIOUS MATTER

In re Sky-Lab and its imminent descent it was suggested this week that we might do a parody on Chicken Little and the report which he bruted around to the effect that the sky was falling. But this thing could have results which would make any attempt at levity a most tragic and unfortunate thing.

I doubt if anybody has not had his or

Supt. Denies Blame For Asbestos Debt

Although the J. L. Seagull Co., contractor on the removal of asbestos from Prestonsburg High School, is quoted as blaming Supt. of Schools Pete Grigsby, Jr. for non-payment of the balance due on the work, Grigsby this week declared the situation is not his fault or that of the Floyd County Board of Education.

"Governor Carroll sat across this (the superintendent's) desk and promised $35,000 from the state; we followed the directions given us March 12 as to how to get the money, have written twice to the proper officials—and have not one line on paper in response, although we have had a telephone call or so," Grigsby said this week.

Seagull has been paid only $35,000 of the $87,000 which it claims to be due, and that amount was contributed by the Floyd Fiscal Court. Besides, there's $6,000 due the architect, Marvin Crider, Jr.

"I don't know what's going on, but we're tired of waiting," Seagull Vice-President James F. Stump said. And, he added, whatever happens the school board is responsible for payment, whether the state's $35,000 is received or not, because it was the board chairman who signed the asbestos removal contract.

Grigsby said the latest word he has had from Frankfort is that "we should be getting the $35,000 in the next week or two."

That would leave $17,000 yet due Seagull, plus the $6,000 architect's fee,

'Junk' Food Check Seen For County

Control Is Already In Effect in Floyd, Superintendent Says

Commenting on the move initiated last week by the U.S. Department of Agriculture to ban the sale of so-called junk foods to pupils before the last meal for the school day is served, Supt. of Schools Pete Grigsby, Jr. said Monday that this has, in effect, been the policy of the Floyd Board of Education for the last several years.

Mr. Grigsby explained that vending machines which dispense foods and soft drinks are operated under the control of the principals of the individual schools to support or finance extra-curricular programs such as bands, cheerleaders, clubs, etc., and that an "internal" audit of each is made annually.

"If the board's policy that food and drink from these machines are not to interfere with the lunch and breakfast programs at these schools is being violated, we do not know about it," he said.

He added: "If somebody is not in compliance with the board's order, we'll be 'bird-dogging' them."

"If there is any way we can enhance our breakfast and lunch programs, we certainly will do so," the superintendent said. One incentive for such action, apart from benefits to pupils, he said, stems from the fact that the greater the participation in the lunch and breakfast programs, the greater the subsidy benefits from USDA.

Grigsby said that the school system's lunchroom supervisor, Blanche Dingus, has gone a step farther than a program offering breakfast and lunch. She has added a "milk break" for pupils.

Candy, cakes, soft drinks—all heavy in sugar content—have been classified as "junk foods" available to students.

Rail Line Opens Into Johns Cr.

Everything went according to schedule when a train ran for the first time on the Chessie System's new Johns Creek reroute Monday of last week. Twice a day, four diesel locomotives haul 75 coal-laden gondola cars along the 8½ miles from Crawford station on Johns Creek to Coal Run on the Big Sandy.

After the track is settled, and the miners' vacation is over, it is expected that four 85-car runs will be made daily, said John Collinson, trainmaster at the C. & O. Shalbiana depot.

The new track, which winds its way from the Big Sandy at Coal Run, up Stonecoal Creek and down Millers Creek to Johns Creek, has much gentler curves and grades than the one it replaced. The steep grades and reverse curves of the old line meant that eight engines—five

Congressman's Son, New Knott Lawyer, Files Damage Suit

A $150,000 damage suit filed here last Saturday was the first to be lodged in this county by Carl Chris Perkins, new Knott county lawyer, who is the son of Congressman and Mrs. Carl D. Perkins. Perkins' client, Wade Hall, named Cledis Sloane in the suit, claiming that the collision of Sloane's pickup truck and Hall's auto on KY 7, near Wayland in May, 1978 was the result of Sloane's carelessness and negligence. Plaintiff asks $30,000 for pain and suffering, $125,000 for diminished earning capacity, $23,000 for medical expenses and $2000 for medical bills. Perkins is associated with Grayson Johnson in the practice of law at Hindman.

Handicapped Sought By Head Start Staff

The Floyd County Rural Child Care Head Start Project is recruiting handicapped children to take part in the program. By enrolling, the children may use the full range of Head Start services provided under a Congressional Mandate providing 10 percent of Head Start enrollment nationwide for the handicapped.

Rural Child Care Head Start Project staff workers are trained to work with handicapped children and their families. The program also works with other agencies in the community to provide the full range of services a handicapped child may need.

The mixing of handicapped and non-handicapped children is expected to give all the children a valuable experience in learning to understand and respect differences among people.

For more information, or to enroll a child, call 886-3548 or come by the Rural Child Care Head Start Project Floyd County Office located in the Floyd Co. Rescue Squad Building in Prestonsburg.

Action That Was Overdue

The U.S. Department of Agriculture last week issued a regulation to bar, after January 1 next, the sale of junk foods in schools at any hour before the day's last meal was served to pupils.

It was something that should have been done, years ago. During all this time while nothing was being done about the matter of selling sugar-laden foods such as candy, pies, cakes, soft drinks and the like to school children, the schools have had the services of dieticians, nutritionists, health coordinators, lunchroom supervisors, cooks to prepare wholesome foods and at the same time teach the young that sweets and junk foods are harmful.

That is a contradictory situation—teaching health and good eating habits on the one hand, and on the other promoting the opposite.

Perhaps it is true that some of the school programs are dependent upon the revenues gained from the sale of such foods. These are good programs, but they carry a heavy price if they must depend upon the allure of cakes and pies for children before meals.

At least one authority has said that hyperactivity of children may be increased by their sugar intake and by the artificial dyes in some junk foods. Could it be that these sugar-filled foods which youngsters are getting at school are contributing to the disorder that besets so many schools, these days?

Some Kentucky schools have already eliminated the sale of junk foods altogether. Every school system would be wise to consider the same action.

he told Elmer that Louann had remarried and the children had been given up for adoption by a Pennsylvania family.

The truth was that Elmer Fields had returned to Allen, his birthplace, and married Eleanor Williams—by whom he would have another three daughters, Leticia, now 15, Traeie, 13, and Lisa, 11—and that Venisa and Vicki were still in New Jersey, living with their grandparents.

For years, Fields tried to find his daughters, enlisting the help of the Pennsylvania State Police in his search, but the trail grew cold. There seemed little chance that the father and his daughters would ever again be together.

As the girls grew up, however, Louann Fields toyed with the notion that they might one day get to meet their half-sisters whom she knew to be living in Kentucky. On June 14, this year—19 years to the day since she and Elmer had separated—she acted on her notion. Calling the only Fields listed for Allen, she contacted Elmer's aunt, learning to her astonishment that her former husband was still alive.

From that point on, it was just a matter of time. Excited telephone calls and some helpful maneuvering by the Red Cross followed before father and daughters were giddily embracing last week at Huntington airport.

For Venisa, in basic training at the Orlando, Fla., naval base, an enigmatic telegram from her mother had hinted at "good news that will change your life." That, she thought, could only mean one of three things: "Some guy wants to marry me; I've come into a lot of money—or my father is alive."

"I was almost hysterical," she recalls, when she learned the truth, "laughing, crying, in shock." The Navy, however, remained unmoved, refusing her request for leave until they had documented her father's chronic heart and lung ailments. But, after "19 years of regret," a few days' delay could hardly spoil the occasion for Elmer Fields.

"I've been in 19 different countries. Must have met millions of people. Made 178 parachute jumps, some as high as 21,000 feet," he reminisced last week, "but this has still been the greatest thrill of my life."

In a subsequent action, the court tabled a request by the Department of Housing and Urban Development for approval to add 17 housing units for the elderly and handicapped on the site of the Briarwood Apartments in the Mayo Addition. The court decided to ask a representative of the petitioners to appear in person to argue the merits of the proposed addition, which would also be under the auspices of Church Housing Association.

In other business, the court heard a report from the county attorney on his investigation of an alleged sewage problem at Auxier. An April report by the Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection, following its investigation of the wastewater treatment plant constructed by Colonel Thomas Montgomery to serve the Jeff Wells subdivision, indicated that the plant had been made operational as of that date, Arnold Turner, Jr., said in his report.

Since there still appeared to be some drainage from the treatment plant onto a nearby road, Turner told the court he had asked Floyd County Health Department Administrator Earl Compton to take samples of the effluent to determine whether it contains sewage or other components hazardous to the health of area residents.

The court asked the county attorney to notify Montgomery that he had 15 days to restore, according to county road department specifications, a section of road along which he had recently laid an effluent pipe in an effort to correct the sewage problem. Residents abutting the road have complained that it was so poorly restored that they are unable to drive onto their properties.

Floyd County Surveyor Elmer Rice appeared before the court, accompanied by his attorney, Greg Stumbo, to ask that his office be fully equipped with new furniture. The court had previously voted to provide him with a used desk, chair and file cabinet in a section of the circuit clerk's office.

Stumbo argued that Kentucky law requires that records of all surveys within the county be filed with the county surveyor and that the county provide its surveyor with the books and clerical assistance required for his duties. Surveys conducted by the county surveyor are the only ones admissible as evidence in court, Stumbo added.

Judge Jones asked Stumbo to prepare an estimate of the costs of the office equipment requested by his client, and the court voted to take the matter under advisement.

Ky. Third State Invited to China; Share Coal Interest

Commerce Commissioner Carroll Knically will lead a 13-member delegation of Kentuckians to China July 26 for 17 days in an attempt to sell Kentucky coal-mining equipment.

Kentucky is only the third state invited to China since formal diplomatic ties between the United States and China were established in January. The first state was California, followed by Ohio.

Kentucky's invitation came after discussions between Gov. Julian Carroll and Chinese officials early this year and as a result of last year's meeting between the Commerce Department and the Chinese Coal Society.

"We're in the best possible position to get in on the ground floor and develop early trade relations with China," Knically said. "We expect tangible results from this first mission in the form of direct sales of Kentucky-produced mining equipment."

Other members of the delegation include William Savage, the Commerce Department's international trade division director, and Cary Blankenship, the division's economist. Blankenship, who is helping coordinate the trip, said China needs the equipment to mine its "massive reserves."

"This is a real feather in Kentucky's hat," Blankenship said.

He said the first week will be spent in Peking for talks with the ministry of coal industries and state corporations. Then the delegation will visit Shanghai and a central China mining operation similar to those in Kentucky.

Four companies are sending two representatives each. They include American Mine and Tool Co., Madisonville; National Mine Inc., Ashland; Ortner Freight Car Co., Covington; and Thompson Bit Services, Henderson.

"We can't guarantee they'll make sales and the companies know it," Blankenship said. "They're taking a chance because they think it's a good investment."

Two representatives from the University of Kentucky also will make the trip with hopes of exchanging visiting scholars with the Peking Coal Scientific Research Institute.

The first state unemployment insurance law was in Wisconsin in 1932, according to the Department of Labor booklet "Labor Firsts In America".

Jarvis-Case Vows Exchanged

Miss Vonda Jarvis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jake Jarvis, of Banner, and Mr. Anthony Ray Case, son of Mrs. Mary Louise Case and the late Estil Case, of Drift, were united in marriage at 2 p.m. June 23 at the Drift Freewill Baptist Church. The double-ring ceremony was performed by Rev. Clinton "Buddy" Jones.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a floor-length gown of white polyester organza over taffeta. Venise lace trimmed the bodice, sleeves and neckline. The A-line skirt had an attached full length chapel train, and a pillbox-style cap held her lace-edged cathedral veil. She carried a cascade bouquet of white roses with blue and yellow stephanotis and baby's breath.

Mrs. Lydia Jane Tackett was Matron of Honor. She wore a floor-length blue gown, blue picture hat and carried a bouquet of blue and white roses. The Best Man was Sonny Tackett. Mrs. Diana Case attended the guest book.

The ceremony was ended with a prayer by the Reverend Jones. The reception was held immediately following the ceremony.

Jury Gets Akers Case After 9-Day Hearing

The damage suit brought by Everett Akers, Sr., against Triple Elkhorn Mining Co. and RDK Coal Co. went to the jury late Tuesday. After deliberating for 2½ hours, however, the jury declared itself deadlocked. At least nine of the 12 jurors must agree for a verdict to be rendered in the case. The suit, which has been tried before Pike Circuit Court Judge Reed Anderson, sitting as special judge in circuit court here, enters its 10th day today (Wednesday).

In the suit, Akers alleged blasting damage to his residence and 578-foot TV antenna as the result of Triple Elkhorn's stripmining in the area and RDK's deep mine beneath the TV tower.

John A. Andrews, a structural engineer from Texas and said by some to be "the world's foremost expert" in Cable TV systems, was questioned closely by attorneys for both the plaintiffs and the defense this week. Originally called as a witness and then dismissed by the plaintiffs in the trial's second day, Andrews was recalled to the stand Monday. Plaintiffs' attorney Bing Irvin Bush sought the opportunity to cross-examine Andrews after the engineer's sworn deposition had been introduced as evidence by defense attorneys last Thursday.

In his deposition, Andrews had testified that his inspection of the Akers tower showed its overall condition to be "fair to good." While the tower is about seven inches out of plumb and twisted several degrees, these variations are within acceptable tolerances, Andrews said. The engineer denied seeing any evidence of blasting damage to the tower, its anchors or guy wires. Questioned by defense attorney James Todd, Andrews testified that the tower was in no immediate danger of falling, that its malalignment did not affect its stability, that its foundation and anchors are adequate for their intended purposes, and that he had seen no evidence of subsidence due to blasting.

Under cross-examination by Bush, Andrews distinguished between the condition of the tower and the condition of the ground beneath it. He noted that auger mining had occurred at a point "close to the underside" of one of the TV tower's concrete anchors. The stability of the anchor, Andrews said, is dependent on the integrity of the earth beneath it. Andrews further testified that the tower "cannot be made structurally sound." He would recommend, he said, that the tower be condemned.

In response to a question by defense attorney D. B. Kazee, Paul Combs, general manager of Triple Elkhorn, maintained that the company's blasting logs showed no blasting on the late afternoon of May 31 this year, when Mrs. Adis Akers had claimed blasting vibrations had caused a crack to appear in a bedroom ceiling in the Akers residence. Combs further testified that the mining operation had never been cited by federal or state inspectors for blasting violations.

William J. Barrows, a civil engineer who had prepared a map of the RDK mine beneath the TV tower, testified that a 40-foot-square pillar of coal had been left under the tower base, that no mining had been done underneath the tower anchors, and that no augering had been done near the anchors. Cross-examined by Bush, Barrows admitted that his last inspection of the mine had taken place relatively early in the course of RDK's 12-month mining operation. Bush was able to establish that the augering might have come to within 105 feet of one of the anchors.

James J. Belgeri, a geological engineer, testified that he had found no indication of ground subsidence or stress in the area of the tower, that cracks in the clay near the tower were not, in his opinion, caused by blasting, and that, given the nature of the rock strata and methods of mining employed in the area, the tower could be expected to stand indefinitely. In his cross-examination of Belgeri, Bush scored the apparently cursory nature of the engineer's inspection and his dependence on the defendants for information regarding the mining operations.

Blake Robinson, a building contractor, testified to having observed cracks in various rooms of the Akers residence. Robinson said that they were of a type commonly found in buildings, not excepting the circuit courtroom itself. The builder estimated the cost of repairing the house as $28,379. Estimates by witnesses for the plaintiffs put at $60,000 the depreciation in the value of the house as a result of the alleged blasting damage, and put at $480,000 the original value of the tower.

Grant Approved On Pike Slide

Interior Secretary Cecil D. Andrus announced approval last Thursday of federal funding of nearly $460,000 to relieve the threat that a potential slide is posing for several families in Pike county.

If mud, rock and trees, which began sliding from an abandoned strip mine site last January, were to break loose simultaneously, six families living down the slope would be endangered, according to Abandoned Mine Land specialist from the Department of the Interior's Office of Surface Mining (OSM) who investigated the problem.

In addition, such a sudden slide could block Smith Fork of Peter Creek and cause potential flooding problems for 43 other families, a specialist from OSM's Region II office in Knoxville, Tennessee, reported.

The project will be carried out under a cooperative agreement between OSM and the State of Kentucky and is expected to take 12 months, including post-reclamation monitoring and reporting.

The first phase will be to plan and design corrective actions. The second will include construction work to drain water off the site, stabilize or remove unstable earth and rock and close a 15-foot crevasse above the slide area.

Home-Grown Food Canning— One Way To Beat Inflation

Saving money is important in these days of rising inflation.

One way to save money is to can home-grown food. But the equipment necessary for safe canning can be expensive to buy all at once. Many Kentuckians on limited budgets are relying on community canneries, where they can use canning equipment for only a small fee.

The Department for Human Resources works to make sure canning food at a community cannery is safe as well as economical.

The department's food control branch inspects the canneries to see that equipment is in good condition and in proper working order and that the environment is clean. "A dirty cannery could mean unsafe canned food," warns John Draper, manager of the branch. Inspectors also check to see that personnel at the cannery know how to operate the equipment correctly.

The do's and don'ts of canning should be posted at the cannery, but Draper urges people to know the proper procedure beforehand. "Processing time and temperature are the very basis for killing the bacteria that cause food to spoil," he says. "Improper canning procedure can cause harmful bacteria to grow in canned food."

The operating procedure for a community cannery is basically the same as home canning procedures. The only difference is size. Community canneries have large, commercial-type pressure cookers. However, the same rules apply when choosing food for canning. Draper stresses "quality rather than quantity. It is important to choose fully developed, but not over-ripe food."

It also is important to put food into proper canning containers, said Draper. A person using a community cannery can use their own new jars, seals and lids or those sold by the cannery.

Community canneries are located in Lawrenceburg, Louisville and Vico (Perry county) and are open to anyone who wants to use them. A small fee is charged to cover the cost of the food containers and to pay for assistance by the supervisor of the cannery.

Mine Hearing Postponed

A second round of public participation meetings on the state's surface mining program plan, which is to be submitted to the federal Office of Surface Mining, has been postponed until later this month, according to Natural Resources and Environmental Protection Secretary Eugene Mooney.

One of the meetings was scheduled to be here July 19.

Scheduling details are currently being worked out with the Environmental Quality Commission and will be announced as soon as they are completed.

Odds Are in Favor of People When Skylab Falls This Week

By MARY JANE BUSROE
(U. of L. Public Information)

Odds are you will not be hit by a flaming piece of Skylab when it plunges to earth. But there is still a chance you could be the one in 600 million.

Scientists and researchers at the University of Louisville, however, say they would not lose sleep from fear of becoming a Skylab statistic. They say your chances of being injured or killed by the debris are much smaller than your chances of being hit by a meteorite or lightning.

"NASA is currently stating that 75 percent of the earth's surface is water and 25 percent ground. And they still have some control over Skylab," said Dr. Mickey Wilhelm, an associate professor at the Speed Scientific School who has worked the past two summers at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Marshall Space Flight Center.

"If they can maintain that control during its descent, they may be able to cause it to overshoot a land mass," he said.

Another U of L researcher, Jim Lattis, had similar views. He is a graduate student and staff member of U of L's Moore Observatory.

"Statistically, your chances of being hit by a piece of Skylab are much smaller than being hit by lightning. I've seen estimates that say there is one chance in 150 that someone on earth will be hit. Our chance specifically is one in 600 million," he said.

However negligible the probability, when the 77.5-ton orbiting laboratory crashes to earth the amount of debris, and distance over which it will be scattered, is by no means negligible.

"There will be plenty of pieces of Skylab that will make it through the atmosphere. It's the biggest thing we've put in orbit. A good bit, two-thirds of it, will burn up before it reaches earth, but approximately 25 tons of debris are expected to hit. Some of the big pieces will not disintegrate," Lattis said.

Those big pieces, he pointed out, include a 5,175-pound airlock shroud, a 3,901-pound film vault, six 2,736-pound oxygen tanks and a 1,578-pound bulkhead.

The chief problem facing NASA is where Skylab falls.

"Some of the orbit paths take it over the most densely populated areas of the world. One reason Skylab was put in the orbit pattern was to perform remote sensing over those areas to help scientists study population distribution, mineral deposits and agriculture," Lattis said.

"When it falls, the debris will fall in what they call a footprint—an oval area 4,000 miles long and about 100 miles wide. It is almost impossible to predict its behavior when it gets deep into the earth's atmosphere. But NASA is trying to control which path it will fall in and prevent it from falling in the highly populated areas," he said.

NASA controllers recently reported they were able to maneuver the spacecraft into a sideways orbit, which they hope will let them steer it away from inhabited areas.

"Satellites decay in their orbits all the time because of the friction in the atmosphere. Usually the way to prevent this decaying orbit is to put the satellite up high enough where there is less friction," Lattis explained.

"NASA originally thought skylab would stay in a stable orbit until the late 1980's or early '90s. They had no intention of just letting it fall. They had planned to send up a large rocket booster with the space shuttle to boost Skylab into a higher orbit, but the space shuttle isn't ready."

Speed School's Dr. Wilhelm confirmed this. "They were sort of panicky last summer to design a robot-type space vehicle that would have been attached to Skylab to thrust it into a higher orbit. It was to be one of the first missions of the space shuttle. But the shuttle will not fly this year, and even if it could, it would be too risky now that Skylab is in the lower orbit," said Dr. Wilhelm, who has worked on the shuttle as a member of NASA's summer faculty.

An unpredictable increase in solar activity such as sunspots and flares hastened Skylab's fall.

"There has been much more solar activity since Skylab was launched in 1973 than expected. Solar activity causes changes in the atmosphere and puts more drag on Skylab. It was really unforeseen. I've heard a lot of people criticize NASA, but they can't yet accurately predict solar activity," Lattis said.

"If the space shuttle had been ready a couple of years ago, Skylab wouldn't be falling today," he added.

VACATION IN HAWAII

Mr. and Mrs. Charley Meador, of Richmond, formerly of Hueysville, returned last week from a vacation in Hawaii and California.

Mrs. Meador flew to Honolulu, where she was met by friends who live on Oahu. While there she was fortunate in getting to tour the entire island of Oahu.

Mr. Meador stopped off in Fresno, California to visit with some friends, and Mrs. Meador stopped for a few days on her return flight.

CARD OF THANKS

My sincere appreciation is extended to Dr. Marty Hall for her faithful attending of my recently deceased wife, Mrs. Geneva (Jenny) Spradlin Dixon. I also wish to thank the nursing staff, the cooks, and all other personnel at the McDowell Appalachian Hospital as well as the Regional Medical Clinic, who so devotedly served my wife during her numerous hospital confinements. My sincere thanks go also to the Reverend Mabry Holbrook and his assistant, Brother Green Boyd, of the Wayland United Methodist Church, for the beautiful and inspiring words spoken at my wife's funeral and for their faithful visits to her both at home and while she was in the hospital. To the many neighbors and church members who so faithfully assisted her during her home visits between hospital confinements, I cannot say enough words of appreciation. I also wish to thank Hall Brothers for their excellent and courteous service. And to all those who brought food or sent flowers or assisted in any way during our time of bereavement, I wish to offer my heartfelt appreciation. My wife's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Spradlin, join me in this expression of gratitude.

IN MEMORIAM

In memory of my Daddy, Thurman Shepherd, who died July 9, 1977.

Your gentle face and patient smile with sadness we recall. You had a kindly word for each and died beloved by all.

The voice is mute and stilled the heart That loved us well and true, Ah, bitter was the trial to part From one so good as you.

You are not forgotten, loved one Nor will you ever be. As long as life and memory last, We will remember thee.

We miss you now, our hearts are sore, As time goes by we miss you more, Your loving smile, your gentle face, No one can fill your place.

Sadly missed by his daughter, ALMA SUE DILLON, and all who loved him.

Chevy Malibu beats these foreign cars in gas mileage ratings. And in room. And in price.

Remember: Compare estimated MPG to other cars. You may get different mileage depending on speed, trip length and weather.

Some people still think foreign family cars are better in price and mileage. Some people are wrong. Compared to these smaller imports, today's Chevy Malibu is clear and away the only place to put your transportation dollar. Which is maybe why Chevy Malibu is America's most popular mid-size sedan.

BETTER MILEAGE. When it comes to gas mileage, Malibu, with its standard V6 engine, beats all three of these smaller foreign cars. In fact, no other 6-cylinder car of any size has a higher EPA gas mileage rating than Chevy Malibu.† Malibu is equipped with GM-built engines produced by various divisions. See your dealer for details.

	Price*	Interior Space	Trunk Space	EPA Est. Mileage†
CHEVY MALIBU 4-Door Sedan	$4915	102 Cu. Ft.	17 Cu. Ft.	22
TOYOTA CORONA 4-Door Sedan	$5719	80 Cu. Ft.	11 Cu. Ft.	18
DATSUN 810 4-Door Sedan	$8129	80 Cu. Ft.	8 Cu. Ft.	20
VOLVO 244 4-Door Sedan	$7585	89 Cu. Ft.	14 Cu. Ft.	18

*ICES, MILEAGE ESTIMATES, AND COMPARISONS DO NOT APPLY IN CALIFORNIA.

MORE ROOM. According to the EPA Interior Volume Index, Malibu not only has more interior space for up to six, but it has more trunk space; 17 cubic feet—double the space of Datsun 810!

A LOWER PRICE.* According to Manufacturers' Suggested Retail Prices for cars as shown, none of the smaller 4-door imports comes close to Malibu's low price. Tax, license, optional equipment and destination charges are additional. Destination charges vary by location and will affect price comparisons. The level of standard equipment varies among cars.

Test drive Malibu at your Chevy dealer's.

East Kentucky Housing Plan Encounters Sharp Criticism

At least one of the recommendations for easing eastern Kentucky's housing shortage, which were released at a May Lodge news conference last week, has come up for sharp criticism and has apparently figured in the replacement of a board member of the Kentucky Housing Corporation (KHC).

Among the proposals of the Eastern Kentucky Housing Task Force steering committee was one to raise from $40,000 to $60,000 the limit on the purchase price of houses financed by KHC mortgages. Jack Rhorer, a KHC board member and an advocate of tighter limits on the income and assets of those qualifying for KHC mortgages, will be replaced, an aide to Gov. Julian Carroll said Thursday. Rhorer had opposed the raising of KHC mortgage limits.

The housing corporation was established by the 1972 General Assembly to help low-income families purchase houses, by providing them with low-cost financing through the sale of tax-free bonds. The agency has come under fire recently for serving too many people in higher income brackets.

In recent testimony before the banking subcommittee of the General Assembly's Joint Committee on Banking and Insurance, which is currently investigating KHC practices, a Lexington legal services attorney criticized the housing agency for directing "a vastly disproportionate amount of its resources toward providing housing to people who do not appear to be, by any stretch of the definition, families of lower income."

Col Owens, director of Kentucky Legal Services Programs, explained that he was not interested so much in what KHC is doing for middle income people as in what the agency is not doing for lower income people. The average income of families served by the KHC single-family mortgage purchase program stands presently at $13,500. That figure cannot be considered a lower income level, Owens argued, when the present median income for Kentuckians stands at $11,500.

Owens also noted that, while KHC had plowed $218.7 million into single-family mortgage loans in 1978, only $31.8 million had gone into mortgage loans for multi-family dwellings in which, he said, most low income families will of necessity have to live. Anna Jean Tackett, coordinator of the Floyd County Community Development Agency, recently praised the Eastern Kentucky Housing Task Force for its emphasis on individual home ownership rather than public housing as the solution to the area's housing problem.

One area in which Owens and the Housing Task Force are in agreement is the need for relaxing the housing standards imposed by the Federal Housing Authority (FHA) and the Veterans' Administration (VA) as conditions for their insuring mortgages. "These standards," Owens said in his testimony before the banking subcommittee, "have kept much existing housing that might be utilized by lower income people out of their hands."

Owens recommended that Kentucky follow the example of several other states in establishing self-insurance programs or in using private mortgage insurers in place of FHA or VA programs. Other remedies that KHC might consider, he said, include subsidies of mortgage interest rates, tax incentives for investors in low-income housing, financing of down-payments for low-income borrowers, and better publicity of the housing assistance available to them.

Sheltowee Trace Opens

By JOD NEACE

Daniel Boone enthusiasts can now hike a trail that passes through some of the Kentucky land Boone explored in the late 1700s. Sheltowee Trace, a national recreation trail, was recently dedicated and named in Boone's honor.

Sheltowee was Boone's Indian name. Meaning "Big Turtle," the name was given to Boone by Shawnee Chief Blackfish, who adopted Boone into the tribe after capturing him near the Licking River.

The Sheltowee Trace is the 100th national recreation trail in the national forest system. It is approximately 254 miles long, running from north to south through 11 eastern Kentucky counties. It passes through deep canyons, along narrow ridgetops, rivers and lakes, and through areas of strikingly beautiful rimrock cliff country where rock arches or natural bridges abound and where a great variety of flowers, shrubs and trees are to be found.

The Jenny Wiley Trail in the northern part of Kentucky connects with the trace near Morehead, Ky. Going south, the trace extends a short distance into Tennessee, where it connects with the John Muir Trail in Pickett State Park.

Verne Orndorff, the forest ranger who mapped it, said the trail is constructed so that the hiker can have occasional contact with the outside world...and so that any part of it can be hiked. A hiker does not have to walk the whole trail; he can hike short distances." Orndorff said some of the sections will at first be detoured over country roads. "However, the trail will eventually be moved from the road."

Although the trail is open, "there is lots of work that needs to be done on it," said Orndorff. "We would welcome volunteer groups...It is just as much fun to work on the trail as it is to hike it."

Camping is permitted on government land except as signed otherwise, Orndorff said. Only hiking is permitted where the trail goes across private property, and, it is recommended that hikers do not build fires on private property.

The Sheltowee Trace is expected to be used for a wide variety of purposes, including day hikes, picnicking and camping excursions, horseback riding, and driving off-road vehicles where such use is appropriate on certain sections of the trail. Users of the trail will find many recreation facilities near, such as campgrounds, picnic areas, boating facilities, historical sites and a swimming beach.

Future plans call for the construction of short spur trails to connect the Sheltowee Trace with the Beaver Creek Wilderness Area, the planned Big South Fork National River and Recreation Area and the state-designated wild and scenic rivers which flow through the Daniel Boone National Forest.

Further information about the Sheltowee Trace may be obtained by writing: Forest Supervisor's Office, 100 Vaught Road, Winchester, KY 40391, or by phoning (606) 744-5656.

Babe Ruth All Stars Named

By KENNY RICE

Floyd county's two Babe Ruth all-star units are playing in the regional tournament now in progress at the Floyd County Park. The winners of the double elimination tourneys (one for the 13-year-old team, another for the 14-15-year-old squad) will play the winner of the Pike county district in a best of three playoff. The 13-year-old winner of that series goes to the state tourney in Winchester. The 14-15-year-old winner advances to the state tourney at Morehead. Lee Frazier and Frank Refett are the tournament directors for the regional.

The 13-year-olds of the county are managed by Elisah Branham, who guided McDowell to a third place finish in the county race this year. His coaches are Harold Case, of Martin, and Albert Lawson, of Drift.

The 13-year-old All Stars are Ron Williams and David Tuttle, of McDowell; Jimmy Collins and Fred Ridener, of Wayland; Barry Slone, Todd Daniels and Kelly Cecil, of Prestonsburg; Dan Moore, Keith Lawson and Shawn Thacker, of Garrett; John Layne, David Hutchinson, Craig Hall and Stanley Mullins, of Martin; Jack Lawson, of Drift.

Earl Slone, whose Wayland team won the regular season title, manages the 14-15-year-olds. His coaches are Ralph Gilliam (whose Prestonsburg team was second in the county) and Frank Pack, of Wayland.

The 14-15-year-old All Stars are John Burchett, Randy Griffith, Freddie Hackworth, Rob Tackett and John Gilliam, of Prestonsburg; Kyle King, Shad Stumbo, David Crager and Randy King, of Wayland; Tommy Dings and David Refett, of Garrett; Tony Stumbo and Chester Newsome, of McDowell; Steve Lafferty, of Martin. The alternates are Greg Mullins and Tim Lawson, from Garrett, Daryl Allen, of Wayland and Matthew Shepherd, of Drift.

HALL SIGNS WITH ALC

Alice Lloyd College is not only in the process of upgrading the academic institution to four-year status but also is adding more sports to be played on an intercollegiate basis. ALC is planning play in the Kentucky Intercollegiate Athletic Conference when it becomes a four-year college.

Next season, ALC will begin its very first baseball season. One of the first baseball scholarships awarded from Alice Lloyd went to Wheelwright's fine centerfielder, Lanny Hall. Hall was an all-district player again this season.

"I signed with Alice Lloyd because I like the challenge of being in on the beginning of their baseball program," Hall said.

EKE WINS TOURNEY

East Kentucky Explosives was in the 13th place in the 24-team Archer Park Softball League upon entering the annual Archer 4th of July tournament. Over a five-day span, EKE exploded to the championship of the tourney which earned them a huge trophy and host team honors for the Class A regional tournament in August.

EKE defeated five of the league's top ten teams, en route to the tourney title. They started the tourney by beating Harold Telephone, then knocked off Salsersville National Bank and romped over Triple Elkhorn to become one of the four unbeaten teams remaining in the tourney.

After rain forced postponement of all games scheduled in the double-elimination affair on the 4th, Commissioner, Billy Ray Collins decided to use single elimination on Thursday, the 5th, because regular season play at Archer was scheduled to resume on the 6th. By using single elimination, all teams in the losers' bracket were out of the tourney and only four teams—EKE, Kentucky State Police, Salyer's Coal and National Mines—were left out of the original team field.

EKE beat the State Police, and National Mines tripped Salyer's Coal to set up one of the most exciting tourney finishes ever at Archer Park.

Trailing 11-1 after three innings, EKE rallied to shut out National Mines over the next four innings while putting 11 runs on the scoreboard to win the tourney, 12-11.

Salyer's Coal took home third-place honors and the State Police got the fifth-place trophy. The third and fourth place trophies were decided on runs scored by the losing teams in the semi-finals. Salyer's Coal had scored eight runs in their loss to the Mines while the State Police had scored four in their loss to EKE.

Keith Lawson, of National Mines, won the home run trophy for the tournament with three blasts.

WOODS LEADS HOMERUN DEPT.

Larry Woods, of Harold Telephone, is making a strong bid for a second straight Archer Park softball homerun title. Woods, who hit a league record 12 homers to edge Keith Lawson's 11 last season, has hit six with three weeks left in the regular season.

Bobby Joe Hall, of Tackett's Variety, and John Hollman, of Martin County Coal, have five homes each. John Sizemore from the State Police has four, and Keith Lawson and Larry Burke, of National Mines, have three each.

WANTS GOLF COURSE SOON

One of Floyd county's better golfers and one of the area's most colorful sports figures, Tommy Boyd, of Betsy Layne, thinks the sooner the county gets the golf course at the Floyd County Park ready for play the better.

"Within the next year or so they're supposed to get the course at Allen reopened, and it can't come soon enough," Boyd recently told me. "The course at the Lake is overcrowded now because it is the only course in the county. Floyd county has enough golfers for at least two courses."

Tommy feels some youngsters interested in taking up the sport will become discouraged, due to lack of courses in our area.

"A lot of young kids can't afford to go to Paintsville to play and they don't want to fight the crowd at the Lake course, especially if they're just starting the game. They need a place where they can work on their golf game and not feel rushed. Allen's old course was that kind of place, and I hope the new course at Allen will be like that."

MOREHEAD GROUP VISITS SMOKIES

A group of Morehead senior citizens who recently enjoyed a 3-day trip to the Great Smoky Mountains had as their bus driver native Floyd Countian Dan Stewart. Mr. Stewart is the grandson of Mrs. Pearl Wicker and the late Dr. Melvin Wicker.

Look Who's Doing the Work!

Even on fishing trips others let the preacher do the work, as witness: Fred Harris (left) and Gordon Moore stand by as Harold Dicks, of New Boston, O., former pastor of the Arnold Avenue Church of Christ here, cleans the fish. Photo was snapped while they and others were on a very successful trip to Kerr Lake, a few weeks ago.

Goins Bros. Schedule Fourth Bluegrass Fest at Archer Park

Bluegrass, country, gospel—whatever your taste for music may be, it stands a good chance of being satisfied during the three days of the fourth annual Goins Brothers Bluegrass Festival which will begin at Archer Park here Friday, July 20, and continue through the following Sunday.

The festival is being sponsored by the Prestonsburg Park Board and will be under the management of Melvin Goins. In the event of rain, shelter is available at the park.

Groups which are expected to take part in the three-day program are Larry Sparks and the Lonesome Ramblers, the Country Gentlemen, Jimmy Martin and the Sunny Mountain Boys, the Goins Brothers, the Outdoor Plumbing Company, the Russell Brothers, the Copley Brothers and R. Miss Allen-Mr. Culp Vows Said

The marriage of Miss Teresa Ann Allen to Mr. John DeWitt Culp, III, was solemnized at noon Saturday, May 19, in the Little Chapel of the Winnetka Congregational Church by the Rev. C. Theodore Roos.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a traditional white wedding gown with chapel train, and a Juliet cap with short veil of illusion. She carried a bouquet of yellow roses, stephanotis and baby's breath.

Miss Mary Beth Allen, sister of the bride was maid of honor, and Miss Hillis Culp, sister of the groom, was bridesmaid. They wore floor-length gowns of quana with circlets of baby's breath in their hair.

Best man was Stuart Lind Culp, brother of the groom, of Wilmette, Ill., and ushers were Robert S. Allen, of Mt. Vernon, Ill., brother of the bride, and Larry A. Levin, of St. Louis, Mo.

A reception was held at the Wilmette Country Club immediately following the ceremony, and among the out-of-town guests were Dr. and Mrs. William O. Allen, of Pikeville.

The newlyweds are residing in Kingsville, Texas after a wedding trip to Dallas, Ft. Worth and Houston.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Allen, of Mt. Vernon, Ill., formerly of Wheelwright. She is a graduate of the University of Illinois where she received her degree in occupational therapy. She is chief of occupational therapy at Memorial Medical Center in Corpus Cristi, Texas. Mr. Culp is also a graduate of the University of Illinois and received his commission in the U.S. Navy in November 1978. He is currently in jet flight training in Texas.

Attorney General's Office To Police Gasoline Sales

Attorney General Robert Stephens said Friday his office has been delegated the authority to investigate and enforce federal price regulations on retail gasoline sales in Kentucky.

He said the U.S. Department of Energy has made the new powers available and they will be used "swiftly and firmly." Nearly 200 complaints about gasoline overcharges have been received by the attorney general's consumer protection division since the spot shortage began a couple of weeks ago.

Stephens said gasoline retailers must make their records available to authorized inspectors for possible audits under the new power given to his office.

He said the dealer has the responsibility of justifying current prices and that if he cannot do so, Stephens has authority to sign orders on the spot imposing civil penalties and requiring immediate price rollbacks.

Fines for violators may be imposed in amounts up to $2,500 for each offense, with willful violations subject to criminal penalties.

Price limits are only one of several regulations affecting the sale of gasoline.

Price ceiling stickers must appear on each pump and they must be accurate, Stephens said.

Prices cannot vary according to time of day or day of the week.

No preference is supposed to be given to any customer—which means regular customers cannot be shown favoritism.

Stephens said the regulations also prohibit minimum or maximum purchases, the setting aside of special hours for preferred customers or any preconditions for buying gas—such as requiring that other goods or services be bought.

Stephens said that as a first step, he will meet with representatives of the Kentucky Gasoline Dealers Association to inform the membership about the current law.

"We hope the industry will assist in policing itself," he said.

Stephens said dealers should contact the consumer protection division if they suspect violations by other dealers.

Motorists with complaints can call the attorney general's office at 1-800-372-2960.

Floyd as a Whole Apparently Not in Program for Flood-Aid

The City of Prestonsburg but not Floyd county as a whole is included in the $1 million aid for handicapped, elderly and low-income victims of the 1978 flood.

The funds requested by Governor Carroll from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development will provide rehabilitation of homes affected by the flood waters in 24 counties and six cities.

Local governments included in the application are the counties of Oldham, Henry, Woodford, Madison, Wolfe, Breathitt, Morgan, Jessamine, Mercer, Lee, Powell, Clark, Lincoln, Franklin, Magoffin, Lawrence, Carter, Hardin, Anderson, Nelson, Bourbon, Rowan, Martin and Larue, and the cities of Lebanon Junction, Salt Lick, Gratz, Prestonsburg, Monterey and Carrollton are also included in the application.

Kentucky utilized $4 million in disaster rehabilitation money following the floods of April, 1977 in eastern Kentucky.

Disaster rehabilitation provides not only repair of damages caused by a natural disaster but total construction needed to bring a structure up to construction standards.

Where feasible, aid would also include elevating houses above flood levels and even relocation outside the flood-prone area.

The Department for Local Government will administer the program. Applications will be processed by local governments.

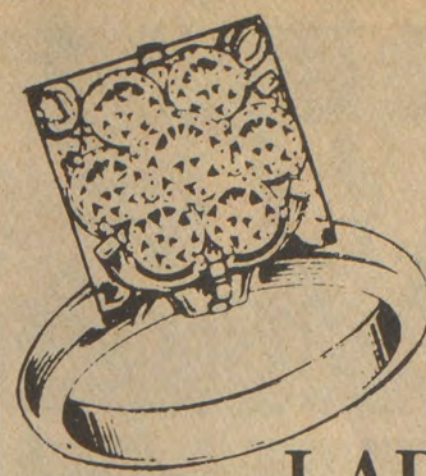

Once applications are approved, the process includes a pre-survey of the structure, a work write-up, advertising for contractors and negotiating a contract between a contractor and each property owner.

Throughout the construction process, inspections are made to assure work is properly done. Upon completion, checks are issued jointly to the property owner and contractor to assure satisfaction of all parties before final payment is made.

LANCER CHURCH HAS ROOM TO GROW

The Lancer Baptist Church has purchased land located across from the church from the Floyd County Board of Education. The land includes the old Lancer elementary school which now contains offices.

The new land will be used to accommodate the continuing growth of the church.

Poll Shows One of 10 Wives In State Abused Within Year

One in 10 female spouses in Kentucky suffered from some degree of spouse abuse in the past year, according to a Louis Harris poll released in Louisville that Thursday.

If the results are translated to the entire Kentucky population, it means there are 80,000 abused women in the state, according to Dr. Mark Schulman, vice president of Louis Harris and Associates Inc.

The survey, which was sponsored by the Kentucky Commission on Women, covers 1,793 women who are married or living with a male partner. More than 21 percent of those polled said they had been victims of spouse abuse at least once.

New Geologic Map For Entire State

The Kentucky Geological Survey at the University of Kentucky has just released a new geologic map covering the entire state.

According to Dr. Donald C. Haney, state geologist and director of the survey, the new map is printed in color at a scale at which one inch on the map equals approximately 16 miles on the ground. Each of the geologic systems present at the surface in Kentucky is shown in a separate color. The locations of faults are also shown.

Information for the compilation of this map was gained from detailed geologic quadrangle maps which are now available for the entire state. Publication of the final map of this project in October, 1978 marked the completion of an 18-year cooperative mapping program between the Kentucky Geological Survey and the U.S. Geological Survey.

This program produced 707 geologic maps and gives Kentucky the best geologic map coverage of any state in the nation.

Copies of the generalized geologic map of Kentucky are available at a cost of $1.00 plus a 35-cent mailing charge for each. Persons in Kentucky should add five cents per copy for state sales tax. Orders may be sent to Kentucky Geological Survey, 311 Breckinridge Hall, University of Kentucky, Lexington 40506.

Cooperative Extension Service News

By JOHN E. SPARKS
Extension Agent
for Agriculture

Each year accidents cost Kentucky farm families millions of dollars in property damage, medical care, lost time and lost lives. The Week of July 25-31 has been proclaimed National Farm Safety Week to call attention to the importance of preventing accidents on the nation's farms.

In Kentucky, the Kentucky Farm and Home Safety Council is coordinating the campaign to promote farm safety activities. The Council, which is made up of a number of agencies, organizations and individuals interested in rural safety, is encouraging each farm family to make a concerted effort to reduce farm and home accidents.

In Floyd county, the farm safety drive is being spearheaded by the Cooperative Extension Service and this newspaper with the support of agribusiness and other local firms. Farming and farm families play an important role in the life and economy of the entire community. The stakes are high in reducing accidents on the farm and in the home whether you figure them in terms of the lives and health of people or the dollars involved.

Many industries have found that an active safety program more than pays for itself and the same approach to the problem will work on farms.

A successful farm safety program will pay dividends in reduced property damage, medical costs and lost time over a period of years. These accident costs can rob your farm profits, and in smaller family farming operations the loss of any one of the family members during a busy season can jeopardize the entire farming operation.

The first step in a farm safety program is to make safety one of your primary management goals. This means that time and effort will be required to maximize your return from safety just as it does for any other phase of farming. Like so many things, a token effort usually gets only a token response.

With safety as one of your primary objectives, it is then necessary to identify safety hazards and hazardous activities so that measures can be taken to prevent accidents. The County Extension office has check lists of farm and home hazards available to stimulate your thinking. These lists will serve as a guide and probably will remind you of other areas where improvements in safety are needed.

Make the safety plan for your farm practical and put it in writing so that it can be discussed with other family members and farm workers.

Here are some of the important points to keep in mind:

—Establish safety procedures for various hazardous farm tasks by reading manuals, analyzing the job and considering the potential hazards.

—Train family members and employees for safe efficient operation to reduce both accidents and costly down time from damaged equipment. Set a good example by following safety procedures and supervise others to ensure that they follow established practices.

—Establish routine safety inspections of equipment and facilities. Correct problems before they result in an accident.

—When purchasing new equipment consider the safety features. Whenever possible build safety into structures and systems. This will help reduce the chance of an injury even if a human error does occur.

—Purchase and use personal protective equipment such as safety goggles, hearing protection, respiratory protection, safety shoes, proper gloves and hard hat. They serve as an additional line of defense that can stand between you and a potential injury. Remember, the most precious commodity in your farming operation is the safety and health of the individuals working, living and visiting on your farm. Take time during National Farm Safety Week to plan ahead for a safe year.

State Receives Federal Grant For Surface Mining Program

The state of Kentucky is receiving nearly 14 million under the Surface Mining Control and Reclamation Act of 1977, Secretary of the Interior Cecil D. Andrus announced last week.

The state was awarded $3,758,043 to cover costs of administering and enforcing the second year of the interim enforcement program to control the adverse surface effects of coal mining.

The grant program is administered by Interior's Office of Surface Mining (OSM) under the direction of Walter N. Heine.

"Kentucky produced 20 percent of America's coal and the grant will help greatly as the state moves toward establishing its State regulatory program," Secretary Andrus declared.

The $3,758,043 interim grant goes to the state's Department of Natural Resources and Environmental Protection headed Eugene F. Mooney. The grant will enable the state to hire 103 persons, including 53 reclamation inspectors, purchase helicopter flying time to expedite permitting and enforcement and meet interim requirements.

The Kentucky General Assembly, in 1978, enacted legislation enabling the state to enforce the interim regulatory program.

As the nation's top coal-producing state, Kentucky reported an all-time high of 147,605,996 tons in 1977. A total of 83 million tons were surface mined and 64 million tons were mined underground. As of March 1979, there were 201,455 acres under active permit.

About 30,000 persons in Kentucky are employed in underground mining and 11,000 in surface mining.

Fuel Problems Spur To Riverport Plans

As fuel problems in the United States worsen, industries are turning to cheaper and more efficient means of transporting their goods and Kentucky's riverport industry continues to grow.

The riverport business is one of Kentucky's newest industries. Seven public ports operate now, and three others are in the planning stages at Ashland, Maysville and Calvert City.

James H. Nutter, executive director of the state Port and River Development Commission, said riverports are the cheapest way for industries to move their goods to markets.

"This is a new industry for Kentucky," Nutter said. "Everyone is still in the learning process because the need for these ports was not seen until the fuel shortage we are experiencing right now."

Nutter said Kentucky has almost 1,300 commercially navigable miles of inland waterways. This is more than any other state. After an inspection tour of seven port sites recently with the other commission members, Nutter said nine ports in the state should be in full operation within three years.

The ports in Paducah and Owensboro are in full operation. Those partially operating are in Hickman, Lyon county, Northern Kentucky, Louisville and Henderson.

Surface Mine Meet Here Rescheduled

The second round of public participation meetings into the formulation of Kentucky's surface mining regulations and program plan has been rescheduled for July 25, 26 and 27 in five Kentucky cities.

The meeting for this area will be held at 7 p.m. July 27 at Prestonsburg Community College.

The meetings were postponed last week from earlier dates due to administrative problems. In announcing the rescheduling, Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection Secretary Eugene Mooney said the meetings are being held to "solicit public input into the decision-making process that goes into formulating these regulations."

The second round of meetings will also include one on July 26 at Hazard Community College.

Although this is the last round of public participation meetings the state will hold, Mooney said the department will continue accepting citizen input for at least 60 days after the draft has been submitted to the Office of Surface Mining on August 3.

Evans Splits His Salary Raise With Two 'Fantastic' Assistants

David Evans, formerly of Prestonsburg, may be unique among all the public officials in the nation, as the following news-story by Scott Payton in The Lexington Herald-Leader indicates.

MOREHEAD, KY.—A raise of $2,000 a year after only three months on the job is nothing to sneeze at, especially when you're 23 years old and administering a growing city.

But Morehead's recently hired city administrator, Dave Evans, believed that a couple of his city employees deserved better salaries, too—so he put his money where his beliefs were.

After the city council approved a $2,000 pay hike for Evans at a budget meeting last week, he asked that the money be split three ways. —$1,000 for himself and $500 each for City Clerk Rella Mayse and Recreation Director Dan Stewart. The council agreed to his request.

It was a tough decision, Evans admitted with a laugh, since it's always hard to pass up more money.

But he said he thought it was the right thing to do, considering the hard work and long hours Stewart and Ms. Mayse put in.

"They're just doing such a fantastic job, and doing more than is expected of them, really. . . I thought they deserved more money," Evans said.

Stewart, a city employee for three years, will be making $12,500 a year. Ms.

Mayse will be paid $10,500. She has worked for the city for five years.

Evans, a Prestonsburg native and a recent graduate of Western Kentucky University, will earn $13,000 a year. He said this is his first city administration job; the position roughly corresponds to that of a city manager. He was hired three months ago.

He laughed when asked if his action had raised any eyebrows, considering the fact that most people are scrambling for any salary hike they can get to keep up with inflation.

"Some people call me a fool, some say I'm naive," said Evans, who is single. "But on the whole, I think most people understand why I did it."

(The Morehead official is a son of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Evans, of Prestonsburg.)

ATTEND CONVENTION

The American Guild of English Handbell Ringers held their Silver Anniversary convention from June 28-July 1, at the Sheraton Twin Towers, in Orlando, Florida. The Wesley Handbell Choir of the First United Methodist Church was among the 1600 "Ringers" attending the convention. The local choir is led by Miss Elizabeth Frazier and is composed of Diane Williams, Jan Brown, Kim Hamilton, Jennifer Burke, Leann Stover, Jayne Pitts, David Allen, Jack Carter Wells, Mickey Williams, Eddie Bradley, David Hereford, and Mike Walls. They presented a program on Saturday, June 30, choosing as their numbers, "Sing a Rainbow" and "Fanfare for Bells." Also attending the convention were: Mr. and Mrs. Chalmers Frazier and granddaughter, Lynon Frazier, and Mrs. Jess Stover, and son, Tommy. While in Florida the group toured Disneyland and Daytona Beach. Expenses for the choir were raised by projects carried out by their leader and members during the past several months.

"Soda" and "soda water," or "club soda," derive their names from the fact that early versions were made by adding bicarbonate of soda to water.

'Robber Bridegroom,' Music Theatre Attraction

Scene from 'The Robber Bridegroom' now showing at Jenny Wiley Summer Music Theatre.

The Jenny Wiley Summer Music Theatre last Wednesday began its second week of performances of the musical hit, "The Robber Bridegroom."

Currently, the cast is presenting the musical revue "Starting Here, Starting Now," on Friday nights, while performing "The Robber Bridegroom" on Wednesdays, Thursdays, Saturdays, and Sundays. In the meantime, they are rehearsing for "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum," which opens July 18.

Busy days and nights for all concerned. But they're up to the task.

Robert Cooper, technical director-scenic designer, for example arrived at the theatre four weeks ahead of all others to give the theatre a facelift by installing new lighting towers and a new stage floor. After that, he and his crew immediately built the set for "Starting Here, Starting Now," and "The Robber Bridegroom." And now, they are busy at work on the set of "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum."

William Campbell, general manager, is not surprised at Cooper's efficiency. Cooper is, he says, "one of the best." Having worked in some technical capacity for about 50 productions since 1971, Cooper comes to the theatre as one of the most experienced company members. This is his third year as the technical director at Jenny Wiley.

This high degree of versatility doesn't stop with the tech staff, however. Audiences who come to see "The Robber Bridegroom" will see in the title role a young man named Sean McGuirk, who, aside from being an actor, also plays the flute and guitar and holds a business degree from the University of Massachusetts at Amherst. He has done several nightclubs, radio and television appearances in addition to his appearances in shows like "Carousel" and "South Pacific."

"Robber" audiences will also be introduced to Pat Turney in the role of Rosamund. Miss Turney, who hails from Annandale, Va., comes to the theatre via Washington, D.C. She has appeared in productions which range from "West Side Story" and "Private Lives" to "Young Mark Twain."

When manager Campbell speaks of professionalism and dedication, two more company members immediately come to mind. Dan Delafield and Tina James met here in 1975 when the theatre was doing a production of the musical, "Godspell." They both returned for two summers after that, and, somewhere along the way, they became Mr. and Mrs. Delafield.

Recently, they have been touring the country performing for young people in the shows entitled "Purzazz", "Bananas", and "Beans". Their travels have included stops at the Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts and Disney World. Dan Delafield even had a small role in television's "Centennial".

Another member of the company this season goes way back with the Jenny Wiley Theatre. Stephen Kean, the theatre's musical director, appeared at the theatre as a chorus member, understudy and dancer. Since then he's appeared in "Man of La Mancha" at the Jekyll Island Music Theatre in Georgia, in "Godspell" at Montgomery, Alabama and in several university productions in Florida and Alabama.

Sally Murphy, assistant general manager, said the fact that people like the Delafields and Kean come back to the theatre shows that the actors who come here like the town and the theatre and are really interested in providing good musical entertainment in the Prestonsburg area.

Murphy also pointed out that the professional company members don't always come from places like New York or Chicago. One of the theatre's favorites is Prestonsburg's own B.J. Sturgill, who started out at the theatre three years ago in the title role of "Oliver!". Last summer, he went on to appear in "Annie Get Your Gun." Now, having grown out of roles like Oliver, he is appearing in "The Robber Bridegroom."

"We've sort of watched B.J. grow up, said Murphy. "It's really nice to have him around the theatre."

Two other local figures are making their debut with the Jenny Wiley Theatre this summer. Buddy Ratcliff and his daughter Angie reside in Martin. Both are excellent fiddle players, and so are natural choices to play the role of the fiddlers in "The Robber Bridegroom." The elder Ratcliff has played for many country and western groups in the past as well as organizing a string quartet for Prestonsburg Community College. Angie attends Morehead State University and has played for "West Side Story" and the M.S.U. orchestra.

"All in all, it's a great company," said Campbell. "We're having a great season so far, and we know it's going to continue to be great."

"The Robber Bridegroom" will continue Wed., Thurs., Sat., and Sun., through July 15. "Starting Here, Starting Now" will continue on Friday nights through Aug. 17. "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum" will open on Wednesday, July 18. Curtain for all performances is 8:30 p.m.

Ticket information may be obtained by writing Jenny Wiley Summer Music Theatre, Box 22, Prestonsburg, KY 41653 or by calling 886-9274.

JULY 15 IS LAST DAY TO FILE FOR NATURAL GAS

Graham Burchett, chairman of the Floyd County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation (ASC) Committee, has reminded farmers, food processors, food distributors and other agricultural concerns desiring protection against natural gas curtailments to file a written priority request with their supplier not later than July 15. The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC), originally designated June 15 as the last day for this requirement but extended it by one month. Users of interstate natural gas have been certified by the Secretary of Agriculture to be protected up to the full requirement against curtailment. The request should include:

Name and address; intended end uses and volumes of natural gas needed; natural gas purchases for most recent 12 months for which records are available; documentation to support calculation of needs; Standard Industrial Classification (SIC) code numbers such as 01 for crops, 02 for livestock; signature swearing or affirming to accuracy of the request.

It is suggested that local natural gas suppliers be contacted concerning procedures for obtaining agricultural priority. If additional assistance is needed, ASCS State and county offices will soon have information regarding eligible "essential agricultural users" as well as a suggested format for filing.

More than 100 descendants of the Scott-Lowe-Taylor-Burchett unions, including three living daughters of the Angeline Lowe Scott Taylor and Wallace Taylor marriage, met for the fourth consecutive year in the Breaks Park, June 23, for a day of visiting, games, eating and music. Pre-arrangements for the event were made by Clyde and Madge Mullins. Charles Spears served as master of ceremonies; music was furnished by Billie Jean Blackburn Osborne, Leslie Kay Blackburn, Cheryl Blackburn Meade, and daughter, Lisa Meade; copies of a "Subscription School" class roll at Gulnare of 1907, containing some members of the 17 children of the three families as students, were distributed by Fon Taylor.

Following the short program, "Thanks to God" were offered and those present marched around the tables, laden with an array of foods to fill and refill plates from the repast furnished by all those attending.

Visiting by the first and second generations accompanied the eating period and continued after, while the third and fourth generations preferred to proceed from eating to boating, swimming and other activities.

Relatives attending included those from Pike, Floyd, Lawrence, Boyd, Fayette, Nelson and Jefferson Counties in Kentucky and from other states: California, Ohio, Oklahoma, West Virginia, Michigan, and Indiana.

Some of the group returned home while those from other states visited for a few days with relatives and friends.

It was announced that the reunion will be held next year the fourth Saturday in June, at the same place, in the Breaks Park, near the swimming pool and the lake.

Third Birthday

Ricky John Wells, of Estill, celebrated his third birthday with a party June 21. He is a son of Ricky Lee and Becky Wells, of Estill, and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Scott, of Garrett. Others who attended were Melisa Hicks and Tanya, Loretta Gibson and Regina, Gofen and Ronald Bolen and Sabrina Rogers, all of Carter county, great-uncle and aunt, Opal and Eugene Nance, of Ohio, Uncle Richard Bryan Scott.

Andy J. Blanton, Chapter 18, Disabled American Veterans and the Ladies' Auxiliary will meet at the Auxier Fire Department at 7 p.m., Friday, July 13. Commander Harley Sturgill and Commander Wilma Sturgill urge all members to attend.

Commonwealth of Kentucky AUDITOR OF PUBLIC ACCOUNTS Frankfort, Kentucky 40601

January 29, 1979

To the People of Kentucky

Honorable Julian M. Carroll, Governor

Honorable Yvonne Stumbo Jones, County Judge/Executive and Members of the Floyd County Fiscal Court

We have examined the statement of assets, liabilities and fund balance arising from cash transactions of Floyd County as of June 30, 1977, and the related statement of operations from cash transactions for the year then ended. Our examination was made in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards and accordingly included such tests of the accounting records and such other auditing procedures as we considered necessary in the circumstances.

As provided by state law, the accompanying financial statements are prepared on a cash basis. Consequently, certain revenues and the related assets are recognized when received rather than when earned, and certain expenses are recognized when paid rather than when a liability is incurred. Accordingly, the accompanying financial statements are not intended to present financial position and results of operations in conformity with generally accepted accounting principles.

In our opinion, the accompanying financial statements present fairly the assets, liabilities and fund balance arising from the cash transactions of Floyd County at June 30, 1977, and its revenue collected and expenses paid during the year then ended, on a basis consistent with that of the preceding year.

We also examined the statements of receipts and disbursements of the County Judge, County Attorney, Circuit Court Clerk, Sheriff and Jailor of Floyd County for the year ended December 31, 1977, and the Circuit Court Clerk for calendar year 1975. The Circuit Court Clerk contracted a certified public accountant to examine his receipts and disbursements for calendar year 1975. We did this examination when the CPA failed to complete his examination. In our opinion, the accompanying statements of receipts and disbursements present fairly the excess fees due Floyd County from the respective county officials at December 31, 1977.

The accompanying statements reflect that the County Attorney and Sheriff owed excess fees to the county in the amounts of $8,339 and $292 respectively at the completion of this audit.

The County Court Clerk informed us in a letter dated January 30, 1978, that he had hired an independent Certified Public Accountant to audit his office for 1977. The former County Attorney informed us in a letter dated April 28, 1977, that he would have his 1976 audit done by an independent Certified Public Accountant.

Neither of these audits had begun at the time of our current examination. We suggest that the Fiscal Court follow up on all arrangements made by elected officials to have audits made by Certified Public Accountants.

Our audit of 1976 taxes, which were collected by the Sheriff in the fiscal year ended June 30, 1977, showed the former Sheriff, Joe Wheeler Lewis, owing the following amounts to the various taxing districts in Floyd County.

Fiscal Court		$1,557
School Board		1,915
Health Board	$ 96
Library Board	41
Cooperative Extension District	26
Total Special Districts		$ 163
Total 1976 Taxes Due From Former Sheriff		$3,635

In connection with our examination, we also (1) made a study and evaluation of the County's system of internal accounting control, (2) performed tests of compliance with the Revenue Sharing and Antirecession Fiscal Assistance Acts and regulations as required by sections II.C.3. and III.C.3. of the Audit Guide and Standards for Revenue Sharing and Antirecession Fiscal Assistance Fund Recipients issued by the Office of Revenue Sharing, U. S. Department of the Treasury.

The supplemental information presented in this report is not necessary for a fair presentation of the financial statements, but is presented as additional supplementary data. This information has been subjected to the tests and other auditing procedures applied in the examination of the financial statements mentioned above and in our opinion is fairly stated in all material respects in relation to the financial statements taken as a whole.

Recommendations and areas of noncompliance are as follows:

We remind the Fiscal Court that KRS 424.260 states that bids for materials, supplies, equipment or services are needed if the expenditure is more than $2,500 ($5,000 as of July 1, 1978).

Recommendations and areas of noncompliance are as follows:

As shown in Schedule B of the attached financial statements, each Floyd County magistrate was paid $7,920 salary in the fiscal year ended June 30, 1977, and a $200 per month expenses. Attorney General's opinion No. 77-382 held that magistrates' salaries in excess of $5,000 per year and magistrates' expenses in excess of $100 per month are excessive and illegal for rural Kentucky counties.

An expense allowance of $100 per month was paid a constable. KRS 64.170 prohibits lump sum expense allowances except where expressly provided for by statute or specifically appropriated by the General Assembly.

Elected officials did not publish financial statements as required by KRS 424.220. Each official should file his statement of receipts and disbursements with Fiscal Court and publish it within sixty days after the end of the year. This procedure would also meet requirements of KRS 64.830.

The Road and Bridge Fund had a cash overdraft of $30,876 at June 30, 1977. KRS 68.110 prohibits the expending money for a fund in excess of the amount collected.

We recommend the Fiscal Court establish an inventory control ledger of fixed assets. This ledger should contain a list of all fixed assets belonging to the county whether purchased by individual officials from excess fees or directly by Fiscal Court. An annual inventory should be taken and compared to records of acquisition and disposition of fixed assets.

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ George L. Atkins
Auditor of Public Accounts

The above transmittal letter accompanied the audit report presented to Fiscal Court and is published pursuant to KRS 43.090(2).

Copies of the complete audit report are available upon request by contacting the Auditor of Public Accounts, Room 168, Capitol Annex, Frankfort, Kentucky 40601.

Because the soft, purplish-black fruit falls readily and messes up the ground beneath, the mulberry is unsuited for planting on lawns or near walks and drives. It is, however, a very valuable tree and no homestead or countryside should be without several of these wild, fruit-bearing specimens.

Since many songbirds all but go out of their minds over the succulent fruit, a mulberry tree near the orchard will decoy these marauders away from the more valued cherries, black raspberries and blueberries.

The wood also makes excellent fence posts, beams for bull-tongued plows and rustic furniture. A wonderful, tangy cordial can be brewed from mulberries that makes a superb topping for ice cream, and as any erstwhile country boy will attest, they are wonderful when pulled ripe from the tree and eaten on the spot. In taste and flavor, they rank up there with the sarvis and dewberry. In times past, too, the mulberry was used in the practice of medicine. A concoction from the bark was used to repel tapeworms and a wine brewed from the fruit served as a tonic for patients recovering from a bout with the fever.

As mentioned before, the mulberry is a powerful attractant for the more desirable forms of wildlife. More than 30 different species of songbirds and more than a dozen fur and game animals go for the fruit. Just about all varieties of domesticated fowl love this nutritious fruit, something that makes the tree ideal for planting in the poultry yard or on the turkey range.

Something else curious about the mulberry as wildlife food: Birds start eating it before it is ripe. Also, according to game biologists, the seeds are as nutritious as the fleshy part of the berry.

There are two species of mulberries native to the United States. Others have been introduced, but the one still most common in the eastern half of this country is native Morus Rubra, the red mulberry. Pioneers found its berries very good to eat and its wood easy to work into household furnishings. They also found Indian women using the bark, which can be peeled off the branches and trunk in long narrow strips, to make a coarse type of cloth.

From the root of the red mulberry, pioneer women brewed a saffron dye. Sometimes they steeped bark from the roots in vinegar to ease the pains of an aching tooth.

The mulberry is truly a tree of many attributes and worthy of being called, as the poet Mulock said, "of trees the queen."

A bald eagle nest in Ohio measured 12 feet deep and weighed two tons.

New Plant In Boyd In Planning Stage

(From The Big Sandy News)
Optimism that the area's economy would be stimulated was expressed at last Thursday's meeting of the Greater Louisa Industrial Foundation with the announcement of the proposed location of a $10 million plant along the Big Sandy river in Boyd county, near the Lawrence line.

Howard See, president of GLIF, said finalization of the purchase of 300 acres of land along the river, jointly owned by Kentucky Power Co. and Chessie System, is under way. However, a holdup is the railroad's failure to cooperate.

See told members at a luncheon meeting June 28 that the proposed plant will be one of three to be constructed in Kentucky by the same firm, which will remain anonymous until the formal announcement.

He said the land will be purchased by the Ashland Industrial Foundation and GLIF. Financing will be by the sale of bonds.

See did not divulge what the plant would produce, but noted that the operation is not directly related to coal.

One of the main inducements for the plant's location site is the new river port that is being developed along the Ohio River on 34th Street in Ashland. This will enable the plant to freight by river all of its raw materials required for production, See added.

See could not predict the exact date for the formal announcement of the plant, but felt it would be made public before the end of the year.

The new plant could mean at least 1,000 new jobs for the area and stimulate a faltering economy.

In other business See announced two "leads" for occupancy of the Carpet Mills building.

"One prospect is worth waiting a year or longer for," the president continued. However, a main aspect is truck transportation.

He told of investigating the U.S. 23 situation as to completion of four lanes to Catlettsburg. Right-of-way is being purchased from existing construction near Calgon, in the vicinity of Ashland Oil plants to the I-64 interchange, and the highway department is readying to begin right-of-way purchase for the Louisa bypass. With U.S. 460 four-laned from near Paintsville through Magoffin County to the Mountain Parkway, "the highway situation seems to not be a problem."

The plant would employ 500 initially, and expand to a maximum of about 1,200 workers. "We're still in the running with this mid-west firm which currently has a plant operating, but it might be 1 1/2 years before we know anything," See added.

Another prospect hinges their decision on the feasibility of a railroad siding from main Chessie tracks.

He told of trying to contact railroad officials for a cost estimate and other details, but can get no cooperation. "They pass the buck of responsibility for producing the information from offices in Cleveland to Baltimore," See declared.

The interest company is satisfied with the building. All of its facilities would meet their requirements, including the amount of land for expansion, and the community in general is acceptable. "The holdup, as usual is the failure of Chessie to cooperate," See declared disgustedly.

Cashing in on Solar Energy Savings

By Ann Rauma

Solar energy. It can slash heating costs, bring you tax credits, and enhance the value of your house over time. Or it can be an expensive, malfunctioning venture that brings you little more than headaches. How can you tell if solar heating is right for you?

Though experiments in the 1940's demonstrated that solar energy can heat homes, the technique has never competed economically with conventional oil, gas and electric heating. However, solar energy will become increasingly attractive as energy costs rise and as supplies of conventional energy dwindle. Solar energy also comes out ahead ecologically when compared to coal and nuclear energy. Solar power is nonpolluting and inexhaustible.

The principle behind solar energy systems is simple. Radiation from the sun is absorbed by a collector placed in storage and distributed where you want the heat. Either automatic or manual controls monitor the process, and an auxiliary heater takes over when the sun isn't shining or when the solar system is out of service for repairs and maintenance. Depending on the system's size, enough heat can be stored for two to five sunless days.

Active vs. Passive

There are two types of solar energy systems: active and passive. Active systems can be either liquid or air systems. Pumps and pipes—or fans and ducts—carry the heat from the collectors to storage and from storage to the living space of your home. Some passive systems use the wall of the house or a separate stationary wall as both the collector and storage medium.

The active system can be used in either new or existing construction. In an older home, remodeling or upgrading your present heating system will require adding insulation, weather stripping and other energy conserving features. Remember that your property needs a good southern exposure to take full advantage of the sun's light.

If you are designing a new home, and if your main use will be space heating, consider installing a passive system. The design of a passive solar home usually requires a north-south exposure, protective landscaping and high quality construction.

Instead of a complete solar heating system, you may wish to install a unit which provides hot water only. In this system, water from the boiler is piped through the storage unit where it is heated and then sent to the kitchen and bathroom.

Cost vs. Savings

Just as there is a difference in cost between a Volvo and a Volkswagen, the cost of solar systems will vary. Factors to consider include the climate in your area, the size of your house, and the type and size of the desired system. In a federally sponsored demonstration program, combined solar heating and hot water systems for a single family house ranged in cost from $5,000 to $19,000, while the cost for domestic hot water only was about $1,500 to $2,500. Building the hot water system yourself could bring down the cost to $700, according to some estimates.

Generally, solar heating costs less for a new house. Unless a house already has heating ducts to which the new system can be connected, solar heating may cost as much as 20 percent more to install in an existing house than it would in a new construction.

It is difficult to estimate how much you can expect to save in heating expenses—if anything. Experts say that in many areas, solar energy systems are less expensive than electricity, but more expensive than gas or oil. This could change obviously with oil shortages and price increases.

If your annual gas or oil heating bill is $200 to $300, solar heating probably will not save much; but if your bill is about $500 a year or more, you may save up to 75% with solar heating. Realize, also, that heating water accounts for 15-25% of your fuel costs.

Some banks are offering a reduction in interest rate for loans to people building energy-conserving homes. The Federal Housing Administration will insure mortgages for homes with solar systems which meet HUD standards. Title I HUD-insured property improvement loans can be used to finance the installation of solar heating systems.

There are tax advantages to installing a solar energy system. Many states have passed legislation to encourage the use of solar devices. These laws are usually in the form of property tax exemptions or deductions, income tax credits or deductions, or sales tax exemptions.

The Federal Solar Tax Credit passed in November 1978, allows a 30% tax credit on the first $2,000 spent for qualified solar equipment, and a 20% credit of the next $8,000, up to a total of $2,200 in tax credit.

Another solar incentive is the likelihood that in 10 or 15 years the resale value of your home will be increased with a properly designed solar energy system and a proven track record of fuel cost savings.

But Is It For You?

While you are considering the benefits of solar heating, you should also consider whether the technology is suitable for your region. Solar heating may work in most or all of the United States, but it is practical only in locations which get abundant and consistent winter sunshine, where winter home heating is needed most and where fuel is expensive. With these factors in mind, solar home heating savings are most practical for the Mountain states, North Central states, and some parts of New England. In the Mountain states the thinner, cleaner mountain air allows for greater solar radiation.

In the Midwest, besides a paucity of sunshine, you must contend with snow and ice accumulating on the collectors. You can wait for a sunny day to thaw the ice, or you can get rid of the ice yourself, but until something is done, your system won't work properly.

Other financial consequences of a solar system are increased taxes, the cost of maintenance, and extra responsibilities.

- If you buy solar heating on a time payment program for example, the interest charges may offset any other savings.

- The assessed value of your home could increase with the improvement, increasing your property taxes.

- Your energy savings may be reduced to nothing with a solar heater, because utility companies sell you energy on a per-unit basis. The more you buy, the less it costs you. With two heating systems in use, you may have to pay a higher unit rate for buying less energy from your utility company, which could cancel out part or all of your savings.

- You could well have the extra expense of installing insulation. Unless you have your home heavily insulated, your solar heating system will be less effective. Some experts recommend several times the amounts of insulation normally needed.

In the Midwest especially, you will need a back-up heating and hot water system—which means you will be maintaining two systems. Even solar energy systems require maintenance, which can add to the cost.

If you have considered all the possible costs, and solar energy is still a practical alternative for you, there is one more consideration: choosing an honest, capable contractor.

First, get quotes from several contractors. Your local association of home builders can refer you to contractors familiar with installing solar energy systems. Some electric or gas utility companies are starting to collect lists of experienced contractors. Listings of solar-experienced builders and contractors are available from the National Solar Heating and Cooling Information Center, P.O. Box 1607, Rockville, Md. 20850.

Have a consulting engineer evaluate the contractors' plans and prices, and examine contract and warranty agreements.

Ask how long the warranty lasts. Does it include parts, service, and labor provided by a qualified solar heating technician? The collectors, pump, tank, and controller should have at least a five-year warranty. The warranty should be transferable to a new owner if the property changes hands.

Ask the contractor for names of his previous customers, so you can find out whether they are satisfied with the system and if they are experiencing any savings.

If you feel competent to do the work yourself, you can write for a how-to book available from the National Technical Information Service, 5285 Port Royal Rd., Springfield, Va. 22151. Ask for publication N76-27671/TA. Parts for the system, including a solar collector, heat exchanger, water pump, storage tank, piping and controls are available from lumber yards, hardware and plumbing supply stores.

Wickland Nelson County

Wickland, which is often termed "the finest house in Kentucky," was the home of three governors, men who also achieved other prominence.

The stately 14-room Georgian mansion was built in 1815-17 by Charles Anderson Wickliffe, brother of Robert "Old Duke" Wickliffe. Wickland was constructed on a 400-acre tract of land purchased from Dr. Walter Brashear, noted surgeon and uncle of Mrs. Wickliffe. Plans for the home are attributed to Marshall Brown and John Rogers.

The bricks, fired on the grounds, were laid in Flemish bond; the outside walls are 18 inches thick and those inside measure 14 inches; the ceilings are 14 feet high throughout. On the lower floor are four beautifully proportioned rooms, with four large bedrooms above. The kitchen and servants' bedrooms are at the rear, and above these are a nursery and a "vagrants' chamber," used for transient workers. There are two entrances, similar in design, the family entrance on the west side being the more elaborate. A graceful stairway extends from the rear hall to the third floor.

Wickland was the home of Charles A. Wickliffe, governor of Kentucky (1839-40) and postmaster general under President Tyler. His son, Robert C. Wickliffe, lived here; he was governor of Louisiana (1856-60) and one of the leading criminal lawyers of the South. J. C. Wickliffe Beckham was born and lived at Wickland; he was governor of Kentucky (1900-07) and a U. S. Senator (1915-21).

This historic house remained in the family until 1919, when it was sold by the five children and heirs of Mrs. Julia Beckham, youngest daughter of Governor Wickliffe.

Wickland is open the year round and is still one of the leading historical houses of the country. It has been owned and operated as a historic showplace by R. S. Trigg for more than 20 years.

Ky. Farmers Warned Of Fertilizer Claims

Kentucky farmers are being alerted to the sale of certain clear liquid fertilizers which are being sold with erroneous and fraudulent claims.

Problems with such sales have been noted in three general areas of the state thus far, according to D. L. Terry, coordinator of the fertilizer program in the University of Kentucky's College of Agriculture.

The areas are the Somerset area, Warren and Simpson County area and Owensboro-Henderson area.

Terry says one example of the erroneous and fraudulent claims is: "One gallon of 3-18-18 liquid fertilizer contains the same plant food as 100 pounds of a dry 3-18-18 fertilizer."

Another claim is simply that one gallon of liquid fertilizer is equal to 100 pounds pounds of dry fertilizer.

Terry says, "These claims not only are in error but are fraudulent and are a violation of the Kentucky fertilizer law."

He notes that anyone selling fertilizer under these erroneous and fraudulent claims is subject not only to criminal penalty but also may be liable for reasonable damages sustained by anyone who purchases the fertilizer.

Reasonable damages might be the loss of crop yield or the difference between cost of a gallon of liquid fertilizer and the cost of 10 or 12 pounds of a dry fertilizer of the same grade, according to Terry.

Additional information on the fertilizers may be obtained from Terry at the Division of Regulatory Services, Agricultural Experiment Station, University of Kentucky, Lexington, Kentucky 40546; phone 606-258-2668.

NOTICE OF BLASTING SCHEDULE

In accordance with the provisions of 405 KAR 1'090, Addington Bros. Mining, Inc. U.S. 23 Woodland Place, Paintsville, Ky. 41240, announces the following Blasting Schedule. The blasting sites are located in Floyd County as follows:

1. East of Auxier at Latitude 37 d. 43' 00", Longitude 82 d. 40' 55". Approximately 146 acres.
2. East of Dewey Dam at Latitude 37 d. 44' 10", Longitude 82 d. 41' 10". Approximately 13 acres.

Blasting of overburden is conducted on a daily basis, 6 days per week (Mon. - Sat.). Designated blasting time is between 11:30 a.m. - 1:30 p.m. and 4:30 p.m. - 6:30 p.m.

Access to the blasting area will be marked with a sign "Blasting Area". Blasting areas containing loaded holes will be marked with Hi-Vise cones. Authorized personnel will patrol the blasting area to restrict unauthorized access into this zone.

Audible warning of blasting activity will be given by sirens audible for at least 1/2 mile. The first signal will be 3 long sounds with a siren prior to the blasting signal. The blast signal will be 3 short sounds made with a siren prior to the shot. On the last short sound the shot will be fired. The all clear signal will be one long sound made with a siren after inspection of the blasting area for complete explosion.

In unusual situations it may be necessary to detonate a blast at times other than specified. This emergency blasting will be done when weather or other conditions present some hazard to normal procedures, when necessary to maintain safe operating conditions, or when necessary for public safety.

Unemployed Rate In Eastern Ky. Drops to 5.5 Pct.

Unemployment in the eastern Kentucky area decreased from 17,949 in April to 16,092 in May, the state Department for Human Resources announced last week. The rate of unemployment dropped from 6.2 percent to 5.5 percent. Floyd county's rate was down to 5.6 percent.

The decreased unemployment rate resulted from increased hiring in all major industry groups, said Robert MacDonald, chief labor market analyst for Human Resources.

Kentucky's overall unemployment rate dropped from 4.7 in April to 4.2 percent in May. The national unemployment rate in May was 5.2 percent.

In the eastern Kentucky area, Letcher and Owsley counties had the highest rate of 9.4 percent each. Greenup county had the lowest at 3 percent.

County-by-county rates for the Eastern Kentucky area follow:

Bath 5.3, Bell 6.2, Boyd 4.0, Breathitt 6.2, Carter 6.4, Clay 7.7, Elliott 4.8, Floyd 5.6, Greenup 3.0, Harlan 6.8, Jackson 8.0, Johnson 4.8, Knott 5.4, Knox 5.7, Laurel 4.7, Lawrence 8.2, Lee 7.6, Leslie 6.8, Letcher 9.4, McCreary 5.0, Magoffin 7.8, Martin 3.1, Menifee 5.6, Montgomery 4.4, Morgan 6.2, Owsley 9.4, Perry 6.4, Pike 5.6, Pulaski 3.8, Rockcastle 5.3, Rowan 3.6, Wayne 4.2, Whitley 6.2, Wolfe 6.3.

Little Abbott Road Added to Program

The 1979-'80 energy road program for Floyd county has been amended to include one additional project, according to state Transportation Secretary Calvin Grayson.

The addition to the program calls for blacktop resurfacing on 1.7 miles of the Little Abbott Creek road.

The Fair Labor Standards Act sets minimum wage, overtime pay, equal pay, child labor, and recordkeeping standards.

Zoo Story

If you haven't been to the zoo since you were six, it's time to look again. Today's zoos have taken their animals from their cages and put them in thoughtful recreations of their natural habitats.

This country is loaded with good zoos—South Carolina, Ohio, Illinois, Wisconsin, Missouri, California, Texas and Arizona are only a few of the states with good zoos, where a variety of interesting animals are well taken care of and considerably housed. The following list just scratches the surface:

- The National Zoo in Washington, D.C.'s Rock Creek Park, has the famous Hsing-Hsing and Ling-Ling, pandas given to the U.S. by the People's Republic of China. The 165-acre animal complex (which, by the way, is part of the Smithsonian), also has 2,400 birds, mammals and reptiles, including Smokey the Bear.

- One New York attraction that most visitors don't see but should is the Bronx Zoo, at 165th St. and Southern Boulevard, where herds of antelopes and prides of lions roam the "African" bush and polar bears play among "Antarctic" icebergs. This 252-acre preserve has more than 3,000 animals.

- Those with a sense of history might want to visit America's first zoo, the Philadelphia Zoo at 34th Street and Girard Avenue, which also contains this country's first children's zoo. This animal park has evolved into a 42-acre "living museum," with 1,600 mammals, birds and reptiles, many of them endangered species.

- The 62-acre Cincinnati Zoo, though not as well known as some others, houses over 2,000 birds and animals. Make sure to visit the unique insectarium if you visit, and also plan to take a look at the zoo's outstanding gorilla collection.

- On the other side of the country is the San Diego Zoo, one of the city's top attractions and the country's most famous zoos. This 100-acre park in Balboa Park and its 1,800-acre adjunct, the Wild Animal Park on Via Rancho Parkway 30 miles north, contain more than 5,000 animals between them. There's also a lavish display of exotic plants.

Handling Travel Hassles

As air travel becomes more popular, the hassles for passengers are increasing. But now there is some redress for harassed fliers.

In case of delay, for example, airlines are required to provide hotel room, meals, and transportation to a more comfortable place than an airport waiting room. If a passenger is "bumped" from a flight due to the common practice of overbooking, the Civil Aeronautics Board (CAB) has ruled that the airlines must offer Denied Boarding Compensation, reimbursing passengers the cost of a one-way ticket and flying them on a later flight. DBC does not apply to wholly foreign, cancelled or delayed flights.

Airlines are also liable for lost luggage up to $500 per passenger and $7.50 per pound on international flights. If your bags are lost, however, they are easiest to trace when they have some distinguishing marks as well as some kind of name identification.

The best way to avoid hassle is to arrive early at the airport, checking at your hotel ahead of time to find out how long it takes to get there. This will prevent you from getting bumped, and will also help your luggage on its way to the right place.

If something does go wrong on a flight and you felt you were treated unjustly, write to the Civil Aeronautics Board, Office of Consumer Advocate, Washington, D.C. 20428.

People May Be 'Endangered Species'

The world's population will reach the 5 billion mark by 1987, and we will have one person for every year the earth is old. What does this astronomical figure mean to the future of the human race? That question is examined in a new publication from the National Wildlife Federation entitled, "People: An Endangered Species?"

"The rapid growth in the world's population is primarily the result of a dramatic reduction in deaths, due to improved public health measures and food production techniques," explains the 16-page, illustrated booklet. Since 1940, the world's death rate has been cut in half while the birth rate has remained essentially the same. As a result, there are now about 4.2 billion people on this planet.

Can the earth support another 800 million? It's possible, says the NWF booklet, but only if everyone assumes a standard of living much lower than that of most Americans. Experts calculate that the world could support only 700 million people (about 18 per cent of the present population) at the American standard of living.

"People: An Endangered Species?" outlines some of the problems associated with population growth around the world, such as:

- Food Shortages. About 500 million people in the world are severely malnourished, according to the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization. And the demand for food worldwide is expected to double by the year 2000. Meanwhile, millions of acres of fertile farmland are lost each year because of the growth of cities, erosion, formation of deserts, salinization, deforestation, overgrazing, and dam construction.

- Pollution. Air pollution is a problem in every major city in the world. And water pollution is often aggravated by techniques used to increase food production—run-off of animal wastes from feedlots, build-up of chemical fertilizer in water supplies, and the use of toxic pesticides. Two-thirds of the people in poor countries lack access to safe water.

- Wildlife Losses. Through its numbers and ecologically-disruptive activities, the human species threatens the survival of thousands of plants and animals. About 300 species of birds and mammals are threatened with extinction.

- Energy Scarcity. The world's finite fossil-fuel reserves are being depleted by rapid population growth coupled with increased and often wasteful consumption.

- Unemployment. The labor force in developing countries is projected by the International Labor Organization to expand by 91 percent between 1970 and 2000, while in the developed countries it will increase by 33 per cent. Applicants will far outnumber jobs.

Fortunately, there are practical, humane ways to limit world population growth, explains "People: An Endangered Species?". Family planning services can help the more than half the world's couples who do not use modern birth control methods. And by improving social and economic conditions we can encourage small families.

"Providing women with education and career opportunities opens up alternative role options to childbearing," suggest the NWF booklet. And governments can follow the examples of Pakistan and Tunisia by adopting policies that promote small families.

In addition, affluent countries should make a concerted effort to restrict resource and energy consumption. Americans, comprising five percent of the world's population, use about one-third of the world's annual production of nonrenewable resources and energy. In fact, Americans waste more energy than the total amount used by the poorer half of the world's population.

Perhaps what's needed most to conquer the overpopulation problem is wisdom, notes the NWF publication. After all, the human species is a relative newcomer to the earth, having been here only about two million years. In contrast, the dinosaurs, thought to be poorly adapted to their environment, dominated the earth for 140 million years.

"As 'People: An Endangered Species?' points out: 'If we do not keep our numbers in balance with the earth's ability to support human life, the human species could follow the dinosaur into extinction.'"

How Coleman keeps your building from costing too much and taking too long:

Putting up a new building too often means paying more than you expected and taking longer than you thought.

The most frequent reason? No one person is clearly in control. That can cause a basic communication breakdown among all parties involved, resulting in confusion, cost overruns and missed deadlines.

But we offer you a team of construction professionals capable of controlling your entire project...concept to completion.

We can handle all the details—planning, rights-of-way, permits, construction, even landscaping. We'll make sure you get your building on-time and on-budget. And we'll do it using construction methods and building systems that can cut up to 40% off some conventional building timetables.

So if your next building has time and budget limitations, call us. We'll give you both the building and the control you need.

A Parent's Guide to Learning Disabilities

By Abigail Schade

As recently as 15 years ago, nearly all children who did poorly in reading, writing, and arithmetic, or those who couldn't seem to concentrate, or who mixed up words when they spoke, were thought to be either slow, stubborn, disobedient, or unruly. Teachers and parents often gave up on such youngsters in disgust, frustrated at their maddening inability to grasp simple concepts or to sit quietly for more than a few minutes. The children reached adolescence unable to read, write, or speak articulately, often dropping out to get into trouble or to take a menial job where they wouldn't be confronted with the frustration—and failure—of school.

Some, of course, were luckier. Nelson Rockefeller, Thomas Edison, General George Patton, and Albert Einstein were fortunate enough to overcome what specialists today call learning disabilities, and to go on to substantial success in their chosen fields. For countless others, however, schoolwork was or is a fruitless struggle to comprehend a confusing array of print or a frustrating effort to master what seems to come so easily to others.

What Is a Learning Disability?

There are several names for learning disorders, ranging from "learning difficulty" to "minimal brain dysfunction" to "attention deficit syndrome with learning disorders," plus an equal number of definitions. Most of them, however, center on a malfunction of the way the brain processes information (especially language), which affects listening, talking, thinking, reading, and/or mathematical ability. Another way to describe learning disabilities is a variety of conditions that cause children of at least average intelligence to fall 50% below expectation in one or more skills essential to learning in the early school years. The cause of these problems has been variously attributed to genetic defects, the mother's illness during pregnancy, and chemical imbalances. What is clear, though, is that learning disabilities affect an enormous number of youngsters, perhaps as many as 12% of the school-age population.

The term "learning disability" translates into a wide and often exasperating array of behavior. Probably the most widespread is caused by a condition called dyslexia, which involves language skills—the understanding, processing, or expressing of words. A child with dyslexia can't read because his brain reverses or scrambles the letters in the words he sees. "Man" may look like "mon" or even "nam," and consequently, spelling rules make no sense. Even more difficult for the youngster to understand is why his classmates breeze through what seems so confusing to him. The end result is a child who takes a slow, disfluent, word-by-word approach to reading, with poor comprehension and worse spelling.

The child's perception may be faulty in other ways, too. Some kids with learning disabilities can't make any more sense of what they hear than of what they read; their brains can't process the language fast enough to be able to differentiate between "sick" and "thick," for instance. Their depth and spatial perception may be poor (a condition called ataxia) so that they're uncoordinated and have difficulty performing such simple tasks as tossing or catching a ball. Some aren't able to learn right from left, or up from down. Those with dyscalculia have special trouble with math and can't learn even basic numerical relationships. It's not unusual for a school-age child with a learning disability to be unable to print his own name. Hyperactivity, another category of learning disability, causes children to be moody, restless, and jumpy.

Coping with such learning obstacles would be overwhelming for an adult; in a four-year-old, it's not surprising that learning disabilities often give rise to general behavior problems. Children become so fearful of school that they misbehave either to avoid it or to express their frustration and anger. Unfortunately, this adaptation is often misconstrued by parents and teachers as the cause rather than the effect of the learning problem.

How To Tell If Your Child Is Learning-Disabled

It's often hard to diagnose a learning disability without professional help, because of the differing but normal rates of development among young children. Some kids learn to talk or dress early, while others lag slightly behind their peers in these tasks. Slight variations are nothing to worry about. However, parents should be concerned about children who display signs of very uneven development. These include early speech disorders—an inability to learn the names of familiar body parts, for example. Other signs are trouble in following simple directions, an extraordinarily short attention span, or difficulty in sleeping. According to the New York Institute for Child Development, additional warning signs include:

- An unusual sensitivity to light, noise, touch, or certain clothing materials.
- Bedwetting.
- Frequent headaches.
- Prolonged tiptoe walking.
- Inconsistent performance (does task well one day, can't the next).
- An unwillingness to take turns.
- A tendency to be very bright and articulate in conversation, but not to understand reading.
- Uncoordinated running.

Few children will display all these symptoms, but a cluster of several may be an indication of a learning disability.

Steps To Take

Parents who suspect their child is suffering from a learning disability should first have him checked by a pediatrician to eliminate the possibility of vision or hearing problems, mental retardation, or motor handicaps. If there are no physical disabilities, the next step is to find an expert in learning disabilities.

Many school systems employ trained specialists who can provide referrals to a learning disability diagnostic center (often affiliated with a university or child development center) or to a specially trained child psychologist, where the child can be evaluated psychologically. IQ tests will be taken, the youngster's social achievement and classroom behavior will be discussed, and recommendations for treatment will be made.

The third step is the education assessment, which will involve the cooperation of your child's teacher. Because of the Education for All Handicapped Children Act, which took effect in 1978, your youngster is guaranteed a "free and appropriate education," so let your school district know of his special needs. The school must set up an educational program, which includes in detail your child's level of functioning, weaknesses, and the goals to be met by the end of the school year. This program must be revised each year.

A teacher trained to handle learning disabilities will then see your child either through a special class or on an individual basis each day. Such a teacher can reduce muscle-coordination problems with exercises such as ball-bouncing and -catching. Color perception may be treated with color-sorting games, and alphabet practice helps children master the recognition of letters. The teacher will be careful to work at the child's own pace, to help him solve one problem at a time. Counseling for behavior problems may also be provided. The goal of any special instruction will be to help the child return to his regular class as soon as possible.

Help At Home

You, as a parent, can assist your learning disabled child at home, too. Such help consists of providing needed structure to his life, since his garbled perceptions may make his waking hours seem especially disorganized and overwhelming. By making it clear what the child is expected to do around the house and by limiting those tasks, you can help him to master skills slowly but steadily in an ordered way.

Parents must also supply emotional support by giving the child extra time and attention—in short, to let him know he's not a failure. The calming effect of such emotional support often brings peace to family life, too, which can easily be upset by the presence of a slow or disruptive child.

With patience, repetition, extra love, and a strict routine to follow, learning disabled children can succeed in the classroom and at home.

Light for the Dungeon

By HELEN PRICE STACEY

Laughter is the wildflower on the hill. It's the spot of light in a dungeon and the folk story of the meek and lowly. A good laugh now and then can brighten the day or make a trip more pleasant. It's not fuel in the tank, but it is the spark of hope in the waiting.

For starters, there's the story about the Eastern Kentucky doctor who "fell into the well and died without a moan. He should have tended to the sick and let the well alone."

This next bit of laughter comes from Boyd county. The story takes place in western Kentucky. An aged man sitting beside his fuel pumps when a car drove up and the driver called, "Hey, Gramps. How long has this burg been dead?" The old man took off his specs, wiped them, put them back on and replied, "Not long, I reckon. You're the first buzaard I've seen."

Be assured, there is a laugh for everyone, for not long ago The Wolfe County News told about a lost preacher. It could have been a lost writer, lost artist or lost traveler from anywhere, but he was said to be a lost preacher from northern Kentucky.

The lost one—physically, not spiritually—asked how he could get to Rant Adams's place. She told him to "go down by Old Speck's nest, then cross the branch, an..." Said the lost one, "But I don't know where Speck's nest is." The old woman looked at him unbelievably and said, "Then you must be a plum fool. Why, the least youngun on my place knows where Old Speck's nest is!"

Green Trimble told about a friend and customer in his store on the Kentucky River. Bill Hayes, said Trimble, was a tall, fine-looking bachelor who came to his store to purchase a pair of shoes to wear to the big church association the next day. Actually, he bought a complete outfit—broadcloth suit, starched shirt, red tie and plug silt hat. Everything but shoes, for none in the store was big enough.

Hayes then tried on boots, but still none could be found big enough to fit. Next day, Trimble himself decided to take in the church festivity. About noon he saw his friend Hayes, gay as a peacock in his new clothes, walking up to the grounds with a lovely young lady on his arm. Trimble then looked more closely at his well-dressed friend and saw that he was barefoot!

In about 1818, Elder Samuel Rogers was holding a meeting on Cabin Creek in Lewis County. Many were converted and a large crowd was on hand for the baptizing in the creek.

In his autobiography, Rogers tells about a gang of "ruffians" who followed the group to the creek for the baptizing. The gang yelled and laughed continuously as Rogers went about baptizing the saved.

The leader of the gang finally began inching his way out on a lib in a log drift that had lodged in the creek. As each candidate for baptism came forward, the gang leader yelled and howled and barked like a dog. His boldness grew until he was perched over the baptismal water.

Just as Rogers spoke his blessing "...in the name of the..." the limb broke and the heckler fell headlong into the hole of water. He finally surfaced, gasping for breath. A bystander said, "He stayed down till he blubbered, so he will never forget his baptism."

Then there is the bit of fun about the city slicker from the east who was visiting in central Kentucky and asked about the funny looking cow. "Could you tell me, please," said the city slicker, "why the cow does not have any horns?"

The Central Kentucky host explained that some cows do not grow horns until they are older and some are dehorned and some are not supposed to have horns. This cow does not have horns because it is a horse.

The present fuel shortage is certainly no joke. However, there is an old, half-forgotten story about two men in another country trying to get an auto to run.

They cranked here and spark-plugged there and eventually the auto took off, the driver's pigtail flying in the wind. When the auto returned, the other man asked the driver how he got it to start. He replied, "Me no knowee, me no tellee. Me push button, run like hellee!"

Oh, well, I never could tell a joke.
