Guilty!

Six youths admit to roadside killings

by Bill Jones
The Greeneville (Tenn.) Sun

In a surprise move Friday, all six defendants in the Lillelid murder case pleaded guilty to three counts of first-degree murder and assorted lesser charges after an 11th-hour plea agreement was reached between prosecutors and defense attorneys.

In exchange for their guilty pleas, the agreement spared the four adult defendants the possibility that they would face the death penalty. All six defendants had to accept the plea agreement in order to avoid going to trial, according to Third Judicial District Attorney General Berkeley Bell.

"It was a take-it-or-leave-it blind offer with no recommendations whatsoever — with the sentence possibilities being life or life without parole," Bell said.

During a post-hearing news conference, Bell said he felt good about the agreement, noting that the defendants had pleaded guilty "to everything with which they were charged."

"We're also very happy that the families and the members of the church they (the Lillelids) attended are pleased with the outcome of the case," Bell said. "We've talked to people over in Norway and the people in this country. They've expressed their appreciation, and we thank them very much."

Jury selection for the youths' trial had been scheduled to begin Monday at the Bradley County Courthouse in Cleveland. However, that proceeding has been canceled — as no jury will be needed in the wake of the guilty pleas.

Beckner accepts pleas

Before a courtroom packed with attorneys, law-enforcement officers, courthouse workers and news media, Judge James E. Beckner accepted guilty pleas during the 4:30 p.m. hearing from Jason Blake Bryant, 15; Natasha W. Cornett, 19; Karen R. Howell, 18; Edward Dean Mullins, 20; Joseph Lance Risner, 21; and Crystal R. Sturgill, 18.

When Judge Beckner asked each of the defendants if they were pleading guilty because they were guilty, they individually responded "yes" in low voices. Alleged ring-leader Natasha W. Cornett spoke in a barely audible voice when entering her plea.

The judge reserved judgment on the three counts of first-degree murder involving three members of the Lillelid family — Vidar, 34,

Justice Center ready...almost

by Chris McDavid

Floyd County officials were given the green light Friday to move into the justice center, which was scheduled to be complete earlier this month.

Ray Grosser, representing architects Chrismann, Miller and Woodard, presented the good news Friday during a regular meeting of the fiscal court.

Tempers flare over tax issue at Martin

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

Angry workers flocked to Martin City Council's meeting Monday, protesting the city's decision to impose an occupational tax.

The majority of workers were from Our Lady of the Way Hospital, who claimed the 1.3 percent tax on their wages was excessive.

Doctors Chandra and Mehendra Varia led the protest, asking council and Mayor Alan Whicker how they determined what tax percentage to levy against workers' wages.

Some council members said they had "no idea" how the tax rate was determined.

Whicker explained that a survey of surrounding cities, including Prestonsburg and Pikeville, was conducted to get a comparison to set the rate.

The two doctors chided city officials for failing to repair the roadway in front of their home on High Street, saying it had not been maintained for 25 years.

Chandra Varia said Whicker told her the road had not been fixed because she had not complained at a council meeting.

Whicker denied that claim and said repairs were impossible because there had been construction materials blocking the section for over a year. He told Chandra Varia

"I'm very pleased to tell you they have put a whole lot together," Grosser said about contractors completing the multi-million dollar facility.

Grosser addressed the fiscal court in January and told court members that the project would not be complete by the projected February 6 deadline.

Grosser's conclusion for the delay followed numerous reports from CMW representative Bill Pinkering, who has told the fiscal court over the last six months that the project was "slightly behind schedule," but he had a "good feeling" about it being complete by the deadline.

"As it stands right now, (inspectors have) agreed it is okay to move into the building," Grosser said.

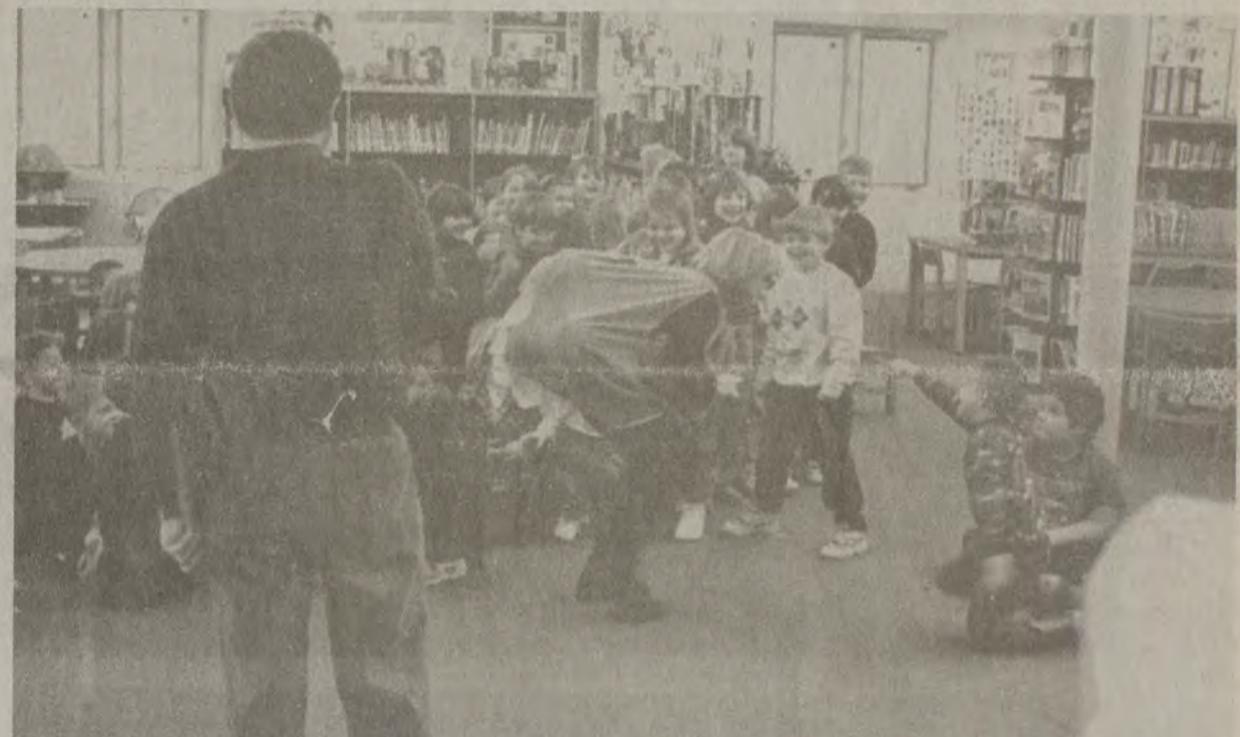

The architect's representative said there were a few "hoops" which had to be taken care of, but said he anticipates they would be resolved by this week.

Grosser said that although business cannot be conducted out of the building, the Administrative Office of the Court (AOC) could install its equipment.

"We can give them substantial completion," Grosser said. "...There's nothing serious over there to keep us from occupying the building."

And that's the tooth...

D. Eddy Clark put an interesting spin on a lecture about the importance of oral hygiene to kindergarten and first-grade students Friday at Allen Elementary. Dental office employees acted out a short skit of a "sugar bug" chasing a healthy tooth. In the above photo, the sugar bug searched for the healthy tooth, who was hiding among students in the room. Councilman proposes 'stiff' response to lot lease refusal

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

Prestonsburg's City Council voted Monday to annex over 100 acres of mainly hillside land to construct walking and bike trails.

The contract with owner Frank Fitzpatrick calls for property at West Prestonsburg to the mouth of Abbott Creek to be used for trails and the owners would be exempt from city taxes for five years.

Earlier this month, council agreed to table the contract until more information on the issue could be obtained.

Councilman Estill Lee Carter said the contract had been reviewed and that after five years, the city would have free use of the land. He added that the only cost to the city would be to offset property taxes, which would be nominal.

Council authorized the contract.

Also Monday, Councilman Hansel Cooley asked Mayor Jerry Fannin if the city could look into leasing property across from Prestonsburg Grade School to be used as a playground and park.

Fannin said he had talked with the property owners, who were not identified, and they were not interested in leasing the property. The mayor said the owners would sell the tract.

Cooley suggested that the city "make it stiff" on the property owners and mandate that the owners cut the weeds and clean it up. He said the area was somewhat "swampy" and would be ideal for use as a park.

"If they have to pay to keep it up, they might want someone else to take care of it," Cooley said.

Fannin said he would look into the matter.

In other action Monday:

Without any discussion, council gave final approval to an ordinance annexing property at Cliff owned by Mayor Fannin. At council's February 9 meeting, Fannin gave a lengthy explanation about the annexation, saying he would be the only benefactor of the action and there was nothing "fishy" going on. In the minutes of the February 9 meeting, which council approved Monday, the record notes that Fannin "explained the reason the city was annexing property that he owns is because he felt, as mayor, it was his obligation to annex into the city any property that he owned."

Council approved an agreement with Auxier Water Company, which calls for the city to "possibly" acquire some of Auxier's water lines and that Auxier will be allowed to tap into a line that will be run to Route 3.

Benefits planned to aid youth paralyzed in Parkway mishap

by Cindy Yates
Editorial Assistant

Friends and family members of Allen Elementary student Mandy May will probably never again be able to drive the Mountain Parkway without shuddering at the thought of the traffic accident that almost claimed her life.

Unfortunately, that drive has to be made regularly because the 11-year-old remains hospitalized at the Cardinal Hill Hospital for rehabilitation of a spinal cord injury. Mandy was left temporarily paralyzed, but the hope is that someday, she will be able to walk again.

Last week, for the first time since the accident that occurred three days before Christmas, Mandy received a one-day pass to come home. Once there she found that her Christmas was all ready for her. Her family had left things exactly as they were before the accident, complete with a tree, according to her school's principal Linda Gearheart.

Mandy's little brother, Jared, is in the second grade at Allen Elementary. When his sister was hurt, Jared's only way to comfort her was to give up his cherished pillow that he always slept with. His sister now has it in her hospital bed, and keeps it close.

Her school is decorated with yellow ribbons, and Gearheart assures that "they will stay there until she is back with us." The school also has a bulletin board decorated Eleven-year-old Mandy May was paralyzed in a pre-Christmas accident on the Mountain Parkway and her rehabilitation from that mishap is putting a strain on her family's finances. A series of benefits are planned to help ease the burden.

Rumors have employees at BSHC concerned about their jobs and services

by Chris McDavid
Staff Writer

Big Sandy Health Care may be caught up in a whirlwind of confusion with the circulation of rumors that one clinic may close and the threat of a possible federal investigation.

The rumors have employees apparently concerned about their jobs and the services the clinics provide to indigent families with allegations of the closing of one of the clinics.

And a health care union representative says she is concerned about a federal investigation into the working relationship between union employees and the board.

Interim executive director Eric Herrin and board chairman Bertie Salyer addressed the rumors Monday night by saying that they were not true. The issue of a federal investigation was not discussed.

Rebecca Bradford, an employee at the Shelby Valley Clinic, told the board Monday night during a meeting of the board of directors that employees have "some major concerns" that need to be considered.

"You have five employees (at that clinic) who don't know if they have a job," Bradford said Monday. "They don't know what's going on because all they hear is 'Shelby Valley Clinic is going to close.'"

Herrin told Bradford that he has discovered "that all rumors are not true" that if the clinic was in jeopardy of being closed, he wasn't aware of the situation.

"I trust you when you say you haven't (been told of the alleged closing)," Bradford told Herrin. "The problem I have is I don't know who on (the board) I can trust and that's the problem Big Sandy Health Care has."

The apparent distrust with the board prompted one board member to assure Bradford that he was working for the good of the organization and that the board has no intentions of closing the clinic.

"I have spent a lot of nights working as a member," the board member said. "If there was any reason I thought Shelby Valley would close, I wouldn't have wasted my time."

Bertie Salyer, chairman of the BSHC board, told Bradford that the "most consistent" board members are from Shelby Valley and that they would be the ones who would have to approve closing the clinic.

Board member Dr. Surekha Maddiwar said the clinic was not in danger of being closed because it has almost become "self-sustaining."

She also said that former executive director Ellis Buchanan deserves the credit for the clinic being in such a stable condition. Buchanan was removed from his position earlier this month after months of an apparent personal conflict between himself and Salyer.

Some board members expressed concern about the inaccurate information being circulated and suggested that someone determine who is starting the rumors and the motivation behind them.

In another matter, Kathy McCormick, administrative organizer for the health care union, said two employees have heard they would not be working "in a month from now."

McCormick said Sonja Hall and Fay Moore's jobs are on the line according to the rumors. Salyer and Herrin said they were not aware of that rumor either.

Hall filed a labor grievance against the board chairman and board member Jackie Cecil in January.

"We want to clear the air," McCormick said. "That's what we're doing here."

McCormick also asked Salyer why the union representative was not on the agenda for the meeting.

She had raised the issue before the board met behind closed doors; however, since it was not included on the agenda, the union representative was not permitted to speak until later.

"Madame chair, I brought to your attention my letter as insisted by you...and I'd like to discuss it because it is business to the board," McCormick said.

Salyer apologized if she had overlooked the request, and said she does not recall getting a letter requesting that the union representative be included on the agenda.

The board met in executive session for nearly two hours before McCormick was given the opportunity to address the board.

"The board, and I would say basically the president, seems to be very negative," McCormick said during the closed discussion. "...The board must realize there is a union here."

McCormick said Big Sandy Health Care has problems that "have got to be fixed...we're going to be in a federal investigation that neither one of us want to be a part of."

The union representative was given the floor to speak to the board after the closed session.

"We want to see BSHC continue to grow and continue to provide good patient care," McCormick said. "We are willing to do what it takes...We respect your position. The flip side of that is you're going to have to respect us too."

Salyer told the union representative that the board's role was to work with the executive director, and noted that "problems come from misinformation and the lack of communication."

The issue of the union not being included on the agenda was further discussed when Salyer said, "It's not beyond me to overlook something."

Patricia Friend, a building clerk and organizing chair for the union, insisted she hand delivered the request to Salyer and that the chairman called the former executive director and let him know she got it.

During the fiscal court's January meeting, Floyd Judge-Executive Ben Hale said he would levy a $2,500 penalty against the contractor for each day past the projected completion date.

The judge-executive said Friday that he did not levy the penalty because of the contractor's working relationship with county officials.

Hale said a "harsh stipulation" was placed in the justice center contract because of complications with the construction of the new jail a few years ago.

"I have to say we've worked together well on this project," Hale said. "It's went pretty doggone smooth."

Hale could not be contacted Tuesday for additional information about the status of the justice center.

In a related matter, the judge-executive and Floyd County Attorney Keith Bartley butted heads Friday over the availability of contract documents related to the justice center.

Bartley asked Grosser if he could obtain copies of the contractor's contracts, and Grosser told the county attorney he could get those from the judge-executive's office.

"I've been denied that from the judge's office," Bartley said, "and that's why I came to you."

"I beg your pardon, Keith," Hale said. "...Let's not play politics here today."

Hale said he has not spoken to Bartley about the matter, and Bartley said he was sent a message that he couldn't have the contracts.

In regular business Friday, fiscal court members were apparently disappointed with the purchase of a new grader which was not the brand they preferred.

Hale said Friday that the county had not spoken to Bartley about the matter, and Bartley said he was sent a message that he couldn't have the contracts.

All court members were present at Friday's meeting.

A lesson learned?

by Scott Perry

For all practical purposes the tragic saga of six young killers from our area is at an end.

The lesson it teaches is not.

As we have maintained all along, these six murderers are not indicative of youth in Eastern Kentucky but they are examples, extreme examples, for sure, of the dark side of our society.

We don't know what caused these young people to become killers.

This wasn't a crime of passion; a case of a temper out of control. It was a cold-blooded execution for sport or thrill.

This crime is inexplicable, but not unprecedented.

We are all products of our environments and human history is filled with tales of terror, of horrible acts and inhumanity.

Is violence so common a companion that our senses are deadened to its presence?

We have to say no, that can't be. To say otherwise would justify or excuse it.

A Tennessee father, mother and daughter are dead. A three-year-old boy is orphaned and six youths have forfeited any chance they might have had in life.

For what?

That's the lesson we must heed.

There is no point to violence. No meaning.

Just pain.

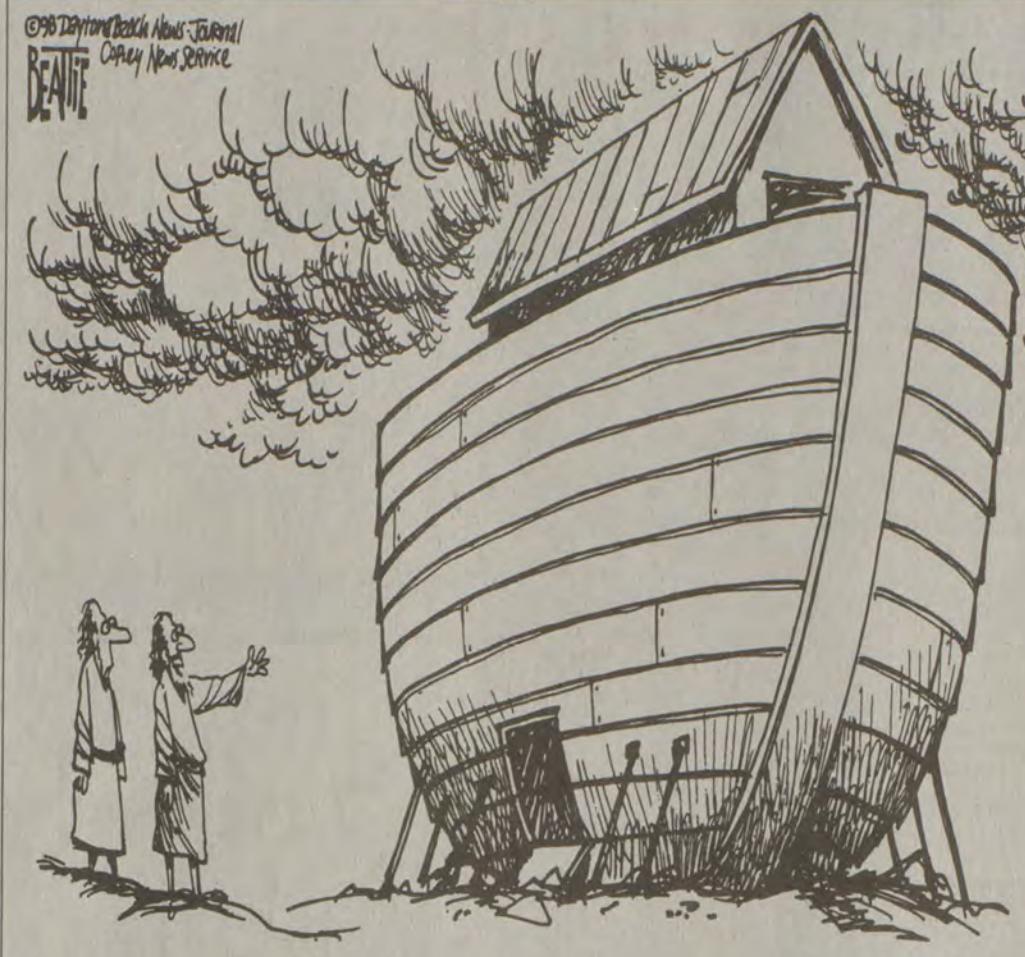

Just blood.

Just bodies.

Lives taken, lives ruined...for nothing.

In drawing this terrible chapter in our history to a close, we'd like to offer our gratitude to the staff of the Greeneville Tennessee Sun, especially photographer Jody Snyder and staff writer Bill Jones for providing the coverage of this case to our readers.

We hope that we never have to return the favor.

Writer questions activities of City of Prestonsburg

Editor:

Water is the source of life, both physical and economic. The human body requires 64 ounces of water every day in order to be in good health. Water should not be used as a weapon or a tool to annex and tax. It is unfair to use our water in such a way.

The politicians in Prestonsburg are doing the people of Floyd County wrong. When a politician in Prestonsburg was questioned concerning using water in this unfair way, he responded, "If they don't want to be part of our city and pay taxes, then let them drink out of the creek."

The City of Prestonsburg has always had a dark shadow placed over it by the antics of its city government, but this darkness has gotten worse over the last four years.

This dark shadow keeps creating things that only benefit the few. It creates riverside parking lots that no one uses. It arrests people for picking tulips. It spends millions of dollars to make nice fat state jobs for the children of the privileged few. It tries to crush, through taxation and regulations that apply to one but not the other. What is left of the independent business community in Prestonsburg?

Mr. Perry, even though not always on the same side as I am on, has been fair in his coverage of the issues. Certain members of the city council don't value the Freedom of the Press as much as he does. When he placed their little annexation games into the spotlight, city councilmen got on television and campaigned to run Mr. Perry out of town and send him back to Johnson County. This in my eyes not only shamed the councilmen who did it, but shamed the good people of the City of Prestonsburg.

We cannot live in peace as long as this darkness hangs over City Hall.

Citizen wants answers

Editor:

One of Floyd County's best kept secrets is what is going on in the North Floyd Fire District.

I have tried for over two years to find out where and when the board holds their meetings; who is on the board and how they were appointed; and how the contract with Prestonsburg Fire Department was initiated without any input from the citizens.

Why isn't there any upgrading of the system to protect homeowners living over five miles from the fire station?

Why do we still have no water? Why are the lines too small to support a fire hydrant?

According to my insurance company, the risk today is just as great as it was before the fire tax was slapped on everyone.

I have brought this before the Floyd County Fiscal Court two times and the last time the judge-executive just laughed about it.

Quote of the week...

"There is no sure foundation set upon blood, no certain life achieved by others' death."

—Shakespeare

Looks like we may have reached an 11th-hour resolution to the crisis with Iraq, which suits us just fine.

We've had a tough time understanding why it was up to America to make sure Saddam couldn't fire any anthrax laden missiles at his neighbors, anyway.

What are they doing to keep this guy in check?

If we are to be the world's police force, we ought to be devoting our considerable strengths toward those countries causing us some real grief...like one or two in South America that are responsible for the supplies of cocaine in the U.S. of A.

Our allies in the Middle East can't really be counted on to take our side against Hussein, so let them worry about the creep.

Truth is, we don't want their friendship, anyway. We just want cheap oil.

Coffee Break

by Scott Perry

Money can't buy you love?

That's what the song says, but it ain't necessarily so.

In Frankfort, the Guy and the General Assembly are buying love by the bunches with surplus revenues and lists of projects, pre-empting with political savvy any chance that Kentuckians might all share in the prosperity with a tax break.

The idea, we suppose, is to spend it quick on roads and other goodies before we regular Joes wake up and realize that we could be spending our own money our own ways on our own selves.

But wouldn't that be selfish of us?

Meanwhile, the tax bite on your billfold is as voracious as it has ever been, adding up to about 40 cents of every dollar you earn.

Considering that, why is it we're always so grateful when a politician tosses a public project our way?

You think we'd won the lottery or something.

Government never has more money than it can use.

Isn't that an odd coincidence?

Here's another odd coincidence...

Just when we agreed with the Guy on his proposal to allow coal truckers to haul heavier loads, he decided to pull the bill from consideration.

Hmm.

Does that mean if we're for it, he's against it, or just that if we agree with him on something it must be wrong?

Say, this opens the doors to some real reverse psychology.

Dear Guy: We'd prefer that you never fully fund the 50 percent return of coal severance taxes to coal counties; we don't want any help from Frankfort to find decent jobs for welfare families; and we absolutely do not want any progress in this region of the state.

(Heh, heh, heh)

Stand clear and keep your eyes on us.

If this reverse psychology works, we should be hittin' the big time soon.

You know the Louisville Cardinals have fallen on hard times when even the clergy shows no mercy.

This one from Reverend George Love, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church in Prestonsburg...

Seems the Cards were interested in developing a web page on the world wide web, but ran into some difficulty.

Crime Busters R Us...

Okay, we won't take all the credit, but not long after we did a story on the theft of some unique historical artwork from a downtown Paintsville display, most of the stolen items have been recovered. Well, returned might be a better word.

The crooks remain at large but, like they say, half a loaf...

This helps prove a point we've been trying to make for quite a while...the press can be an asset in the fight against crime.

Now, if only some law enforcement agencies would get the message.

The six Eastern Kentucky youths charged with last year's murders of the Lillelid family in Tennessee pleaded guilty Friday to the capital murder and lesser charges in Greene County (Tennessee) Criminal Court. (photo by Jody Snyder, The Greeneville Sun)

Guilty

Delfina, 28, and Tabitha, 6 – and the attempted first-degree murder of 2-year-old Peter Lillelid.

Judge Beckner will pronounce those sentences at the conclusion of a sentencing hearing that is to begin March 2 and is expected to take a week or longer to complete.

He did, however, sentence the defendants to the maximum allowable on each of the lesser charges, including:

- 12 years in prison on each of two aggravated kidnapping charges involving the kidnapping of Vidar and Delfina Lillelid;

- 25 years in prison on each of two especially aggravated kidnapping charges involving the kidnapping of Peter, 2, and Tabitha Lillelid; and

- Four years in prison on a charge of having stolen the Lillelids' 1987 Dodge van.

Those sentences are to run concurrently with the murder sentences that will be imposed at the conclusion of the upcoming sentencing hearing, according to the judge.

Other sentences possible

Bell, who had been given permission to speak with reporters following the hearing by Judge Beckner, also said he planned to ask the court to impose the maximum allowable sentence of three consecutive terms of life without parole when a sentencing hearing for the six young Kentuckians begins on March 2.

Other possible sentences that could be imposed include:

- three concurrent sentences of life without parole;

- three consecutive sentences of life in prison (which equate to 51 years each under current law, according to the judge);

- three concurrent sentences of life in prison; or

- three consecutive or concurrent lesser prison sentences.

The District Attorney also praised the work of the Greene County Sheriff's Department and the Tennessee Bureau of Investigation in the case.

Steps leading to Friday's guilty pleas

District Attorney General Berkeley Bell said the prosecution could only prove actual shooting by Jason Blake Bryant, 15. As a juvenile, Bryant could not face the death penalty.

Because of this, Bell said, he felt a jury would not be able to sentence the other six to the death penalty.

On Tuesday, the prosecution learned that its star witness, Shawn Ferrell, an Arizona corrections officer, had three previous felony convictions. This cast serious doubts on his credibility, Bell said.

On Wednesday, the prosecution offered exemption from the death penalty for all six defendants, if all six would plead guilty and accept whatever sentence Judge Beckner imposes, which could be up to three counts each of life without parole.

The last of the six defendants, Karen Howell, did not accept the plea offer until 1 p.m. Friday. The hearing began at 4:30 p.m. and lasted about 35 minutes.

The sentencing phase begins March 2 and is expected to take about a week. Rules about what evidence can be introduced in this phase are less stringent than they would have been in a trial, Judge Beckner said.

"This case began with dead bodies on a country road and nobody knew who they were," he said.

'Gag order' still effective

The judge reiterated during the hearing that his "gag order" in the case still prohibited all other lawyers, police officers and others associated with the case from talking to the news media until the sentencing hearing is completed.

Asked why he had withdrawn his request that the defendants receive the death penalty if convicted – in exchange for their guilty pleas – Bell said the prosecution's proof in the case would have shown that 15-year-old Jason Blake Bryant "was the shooter."

"We had no direct proof of anyone else committing a shooting," Bell said.

Said, "As a juvenile, Bryant could not receive the death penalty under state law, Bell said prosecutors feared that a trial jury would have been reluctant to give death sentences to the adult defendants.

Bell also said a disclosure this week that Shawn Ferrell – a key prosecution witness from Arizona – previously had been convicted of three felonies played a role in his decision to offer the defendants the opportunity to plead guilty in exchange for not having to face the death penalty.

"It was sort of like an earthquake that changed the course of the river," Bell said.

Ferrell, a corrections officer at the Arizona jail where several of the defendants were held prior to their extradition to Tennessee, had testified during a series of previous hearings in the case that he heard defendant Joe Risner say, "I'm a killer."

Ferrell also testified that defendant Edward Dean Mullins, 20, volunteered that "I wish we hadn't done that to them people."

Friday, Bell said Ferrell had been charged with three felonies, including burglary and theft, when he was a juvenile – but had not been convicted until he was an adult.

Witness under investigation

Ferrell, Bell said, currently is under investigation on other matters in Arizona and recently has resigned from his position as a corrections officer there.

Another Arizona witness also presented problems for prosecutors. According to Bell, Richard Arvizu, who previously testified that Jason Blake Bryant admitted to some of the Lillelid shootings while he and Bryant were being held in an Arizona juvenile detention center, also proved to have felony convictions.

During the sentencing hearing that begins March 2, the defendants will be allowed to call witnesses – including family members, psychologists, psychiatrists and other experts – to show why they should receive lesser sentences.

The way for Friday's hearing was paved when attorneys for the six defendants accepted an offer from Third Judicial District Attorney General Berkeley Bell to spare their clients the death penalty in exchange for pleas of guilty to murder charges.

Assistant District Attorney Eric Christiansen, who coordinated the plea offer with defense attorneys, said Friday that he informed defense attorneys of the plea offer by letter on Wednesday morning. Defense attorneys had asked about a month earlier if some sort of agreement was possible, Bell said.

Christiansen noted that he faxed the letter to the attorneys and also sent it by mail. The letter, he said, gave the defendants until 4:30 p.m. Friday to accept the offer or face trial at the conclusion of jury selection, which was to have begun Monday in Cleveland, in Bradley County.

Christiansen said the last defendant – reportedly Karen R. Howell – accepted the offer about 1 p.m. Friday while he, Bell and Assistant District Attorney Cecil Mills were returning from Cleveland, where they had been preparing for the beginning of jury selection.

'Not a plea bargain'

Christiansen, his voice cracking with emotion, reiterated that the agreement was "not a plea bargain."

"They (the defendants) pleaded guilty to everything they were charged with," he said. "This is the first time that's happened with this many defendants in Tennessee history."

Ferrell also testified that defendant Edward Dean Mullins, 20, volunteered that "I wish we hadn't done that to them people."

Friday, Bell said Ferrell had been charged with three felonies, including burglary and theft, when he was a juvenile – but had not been convicted until he was an adult.

Witness under investigation

Ferrell, Bell said, currently is under investigation on other matters in Arizona and recently has resigned from his position as a corrections officer there.

Another Arizona witness also presented problems for prosecutors. According to Bell, Richard Arvizu, who previously testified that Jason Blake Bryant admitted to some of the Lillelid shootings while he and Bryant were being held in an Arizona juvenile detention center, also proved to have felony convictions.

Benefits

for Mandy. Her fellow students e-mail her, so she keeps up with all the news.

Also, she is keeping up her studies. Her school work travels back and forth with the family so she won't be behind when she returns. One parent stays with her in Lexington, while the other stays at home with Jared.

"She's an excellent student," Gearhart said. "She keeps on going with her work."

Her medical expenses will not be totally covered on her insurance. Couple that with the traveling expenses and personal items, as well as food and lodging for the family, and the result has put quite a financial strain on her family. They try to be together every weekend.

A foundation has been established at the First Commonwealth Bank for anyone interested in making donations, though money is not all the family needs. "Please, please keep her in your prayers," said one family member.

Another fundraiser is being planned by Allen Elementary. Faculty and staff members, as well as some parents, have been hitting the gym floor to practice for an upcoming basketball game between themselves and the students. This will be held March 3 at 5:30 p.m. at the school. "We're practicing so we can run up and down the floor more than once," said Gearhart. Three games are being planned.

If you are able to donate, you can contact Mr. Allen at the bank, 169 Arnold Avenue, Prestonsburg, Ky. 41653.

For more information on the ballgame, contact Allen Elementary.

he did not recall telling her she first had to complain at a city council meeting.

"Maybe you do something to your memory," Chandra Varia responded, which prompted laughter from the audience.

Repairs on High Street will be added to the city's street maintenance plan now that the debris has been moved, Whicker told them. The mayor said he could not address why the road was not previously maintained.

Chandra Varia also told council that Martin may have the largest amount of taxes of any city in the state, citing an 11 percent tax on insurance premiums sold in the city, coupled with the newly-imposed occupational tax.

Mehendra Varia asked Whicker and council if it was "morally correct" to impose the tax on people who work in the city, while most council members worked outside the town and were not subject to the payroll tax.

The mayor explained the tax was necessary in order for the city to prosper and grow. He added that the extra money would be used to purchase new police cars and other equipment necessary to continue city services.

Whicker's comment about buying new police cars prompted one member of the audience to shout, "we don't care."

"I know you folks don't care," Whicker answered, "but something has to be done to keep the city viable or it's gonna die," the mayor said. "For 38 years it's been neglected and there's not been any tax increases."

Chandra Varia asked the mayor about applying for grants and wanted to know how many Whicker had applied for since being mayor.

Whicker explained he did not know the number and said it's a misconception that grants are called "free money."

Senator to speak on tobacco

A Tobacco Settlement Forum with U.S. Senator Wendell Ford as featured speaker will be held at 7 p.m. Friday, March 13, in the Crager Room, Adron Doran University Center on Morehead State University's campus.

The Licking River Agriculture Advancement Council, in conjunction with MSU and the University of Kentucky Cooperative Extension Service, is sponsoring the forum.

Issues to be addressed include sentiment in Washington, D.C., toward the tobacco industry and specifically the tobacco farmer; progress being made in the tobacco

"Grants are something that have to be paid back," the mayor said. "Very seldom is there a grant that has no strings attached to it."

Governmental grants usually require the public body to match the funds from 10 to 25 percent of the total, the mayor said. He also said that it can take up to three years for a grant application to be approved.

Chandra Varia suggested that the mayor or council resign if they could not maintain financial control of the city.

"I have lived in the city 19 years and it has gone down and down," Varia said.

Councilman Everett Akers Jr. replied, "if you've lived in town 19 years, why didn't you run for mayor?"

At one point, the mayor and council appeared to ignore Chandra Varia's comments, which prompted audience members to jeer.

"I think you should show enough respect to listen to her," an audience member shouted. "You just ignored her."

"I did?" Whicker asked. "I'm sorry."

"No, you're not," another person shouted.

Whicker said a loss in the insurance tax revenues has put the city in a financial bind because it is "an unsure tax" and the money generated cannot be accurately predicted each year.

Mehendra Varia asked the mayor how much revenue the new tax would generate each year.

"More than $50,000," Whicker said.

Ruth Shelton, speaking for the hospital, said workers would be paying approximately $57,000 in occupational taxes, not including the physicians' salaries. A representative from Trans Financial Bank said over $80,000 would be paid in occupational and bank franchise and local deposit taxes.

Councilman Rick Caudill made a motion to abolish the occupational tax because he has received complaints from city business owners.

Councilwoman Thomasine Robinson seconded the motion.

Caudill's motion prompted a city employee to comment that Caudill had told him he "didn't care what the people thought about (the tax) and they were just a bunch of crybabies."

Caudill did not respond to the comment.

The motion to abolish the tax failed on a 4-2 vote.

Councilman Steve Farthing suggested that a study be done to determine how much revenue would be generated from the taxes and then council could make "an intelligent decision on the facts instead of motions."

Farthing's motion passed on a 4-2 vote, with Caudill and Robinson voting no. Robinson said the information should have been gathered first and she would not be in favor of the study with the tax in place.

In other business Monday:

- Council authorized the mayor to apply for a $25,000 loan to meet the city's monthly expenses. Last month, council voted to apply for the loan, but the city received enough tax money to meet the monthly payroll. If the city is unable to obtain a loan, funds from the city's Local Government Economic Assistance will be transferred to the general fund to pay the expenses, the mayor said.

- First reading was held on an ordinance banning the placement of campaign literature on city property. Councilman Eugene Hutchinson requested an ordinance be prepared to address the problem. Under the ordinance, signs on city property can be removed and persons caught putting material on city property can be fined from $50 to $500.

- Proposals were opened from engineering firms to do a study of the city's sewer collection system to determine what work needs to be done to get it fully operational. Eight bids were received and council has set a special meeting for 6 p.m. Thursday to select a firm.

- All council members were present at Monday's meeting.

SUNSHINE LINES

by Beverly Carroll

Senior citizens, years ago I lived in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, as you may know, is a mass of flat land far different from our beautiful mountain country.

When my mind travels back in time to those days, I find myself flooded by a host of images.

Oddly, I remember the old gas range that was in our tiny kitchen. In the mid 60's, it was already old enough to have been placed in an antique museum. It stood on gaudy legs that were about 4' high. Surprisingly, all four burners worked, albeit only on "high." It sat next to a four-legged refrigerator of about the same vintage. These two appliances complimented each other, but this young housewife saw little beauty in them. They were so ugly they deserved each other.

During this era, one could not drive anywhere within a fifty mile radius of the city during the day and not see oil wells pumping "Black Gold." At night, when the wells were not as visible, clusters of radio and television towers—hundreds upon hundreds of them—with white and red blinking lights, served as landmarks for citizens and warnings for low-flying aircraft. Anyone making a bathroom run in our second story apartment was entertained watching these little "fire-flies" dance in the western night sky.

I remember with glee, Lake Hefner. Our picnics, other people's sailboats, beautiful sunsets, and refreshing breezes. And yes, oil wells during the day, and barely visible blinking lights that would become brighter with the fading light of late dusk. To this day, bodies of water—even mud puddles—hold an unexplainable fascination for me. So this lake is one memory that remains picturesque in my mind's eye. But the most vivid memory I have of my days in Oklahoma City is the lesson I learned from a crippled senior citizen who's name was Ruth.

On occasion, I filled in as cashier at a drug store. One evening Ruth walked in, bundled in a mink coat and hat. With one ring-studded hand, she held her purse close to her aging body. The other hand, covered with diamonds and rubies clutched a walking cane. In spite of her handicap, she walked with an air of confidence as she proceeded directly to the locked writing pen display. It was apparent to me that this woman knew why she had come into the store.

Struggling with her purse, her cane, her handicap and younger people with their children, pushing buggies through the aisle, it appeared that she was becoming agitated.

I made my way to behind the case and pleasantly greeted her. She pointed to a selection of pens she wanted to see. While I was bringing the pens out, she asked if I could give her a piece of paper. "It is important," she explained, "to know how a pen feels in my arthritic hand."

This lady proceeded to write with one pen and then another. In time she made her selection. I walked with her to the cash register and rang up the sale. She struggled to put the bag, containing the pen she had just purchased, into an inner compartment of her purse.

Remembering years gone by!

She looked up, thanked me politely and walked toward the door. Just before exited she turned, looked at me, smiled and walked back to where I was standing.

"Where do you live, Dearie?," she asked. I gave her a general answer but she wanted a specific address—and my first name. I hesitated because even back then one was cautious about giving one's name and address to a total stranger. Looking back, I think I was driven by curiosity. Anyway, when she took the piece of paper on which I had written the information she had requested, she said, "You have been so nice to me. I want to send you a thank-you note."

I thanked her for the compliment, watched her depart the store, and returned to my work. I thought about the incident somewhat perplexed and telling myself, "I shouldn't worry. She was just a sweet, elderly woman striving to be nice." Soon I forgot all about it. That is, until... (to be continued next week).

Honesty

Leigh Ann Brown, an eighth grade student at Martin Middle School, did a good deed on January 12—she found $100 at a ballgame at the school and gave the money to a faculty member. The next day, Elaine Hayes called the principal, Miss Compton, to see if the money she lost had been found. She was very happy to hear that indeed her money had been found. The faculty is proud of Leigh Ann for being so honest and trustworthy.

58th District tips off tonight at Prestonsburg

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

Throw all the records of the regular season just completed, out the window - they don't mean a thing at this stage of the season as the 58th District tournament tips off tonight at the Prestonsburg Fieldhouse.

A large crowd is expected for the 66th annual show and it should be an exciting three days.

Both the Prestonsburg Blackcats and Allen Central Lady Rebels finished the conference race with unblemished records at 6-0. Both will take on the fourth seed in their respective divisions.

Prestonsburg will meet Betsy Layne while Allen Central squares off against South Floyd.

On tap for tonight's opening round will be Allen

Central and South Floyd. Prestonsburg and Betsy Layne will play following the opening game.

Coch Jack Pack's team carries the role of favorite and if the Blackcats pull off wins in the two games they play, it will mark the third straight district title for Prestonsburg, something no Blackcat team has ever done.

Andy Jarvis, Wes Samons are seniors this year, and would like to take a third title with them. Jarvis is one of the state's leading scorers and top rebounders. Samons is a three-point threat.

Betsy Layne hopes to pull off the upset of the season with a win over the Blackcats. Coach Tim Rice believes his young team can do just that and are not ready to back down or be intimidated.

"The kids have confidence they can go down there and upset Prestonsburg," said Rice. "It is not going to be any easy feat on their home floor."

Craig Johnson is a senior at Betsy Layne and a trip to the regional tournament next week would be good. The high-scoring guard shoots the treys as well as anyone and Betsy Layne has been playing well of late.

Allen Central finished the last three weeks on a strong note giving top-ranked Belfry all they wanted, running all over Sheldon Clark and giving Whitesburg a run before losing.

Coach Anthony Moore has his Lady Rebels just where he wants them, poised for another district title.

Misty Scott, Crystal Martin, Karen Wallen and Gina Hall are seniors, and what a way to go but with another district championship.

Standing in the way will be South Floyd, a young

Duff wins over Lady Flashes

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

The Floyd County Elementary Conference tournament may be history but it will be remembered as one of the most balanced Final Four in girls' grade school basketball.

But when the smoke had all settled in the championship game of the girls' division, it was Ronnie Patton's Duff Lady Bulldogs coming away with the championship crown with a 47-42 win over a strong Martin Lady Flash team.

It was a game filled with everything fans expected when the two Right Beaver Schools met. Each owned a victory over each other during the regular season, but Martin could not find a way to stop the play of eighth-grader Beth Combs. Combs poured in a game-high 26 points in leading the Lady Bulldogs to their second county championship in the past three years. The team won it in 1996 at Betsy Layne.

Combs scores 26 as Duff wins county title

Donnetta Mullins added 12 points for the winners. Amber Scott had four, Johnna Ison scored two, while Lauren Robinson, Leslie Martin, and Tiffany Turner scored one each for Duff.

Megan Hyden and Leigh Ann Brown scored 10 points each for Martin. Jaclyn Martin and Jaclyn Brown netted eight points apiece. Jessica Issac scored six points.

Scott had only four points in the game but her three-point basket in the closing minutes of the game gave Duff some breathing room they needed in holding off the Lady Flashes. The trey gave Duff a 42-37 lead. A basket by Mullins underneath the basket made it a 44-37 game, as Martin could never recover.

Combs, who hit two three-point baskets in the game, led a first-quarter charge that netted the Lady Bulldogs a 19-12 first-quarter lead. She scored 15 points in the opening quarter, and hit both of her treys in the period.

The score was tied twice in the period at 4-4 and again 8-8. Combs scored the first 12 points of the game for Duff. In the period, she completed two old-fashioned three-point plays besides the two treys.

Hyden opened the game with a basket that gave Martin a 2-0 lead. Combs made it 2-1 and, after a basket by Leigh Ann Brown, completed a three-point play

BELATED BIRTHDAY WISH...

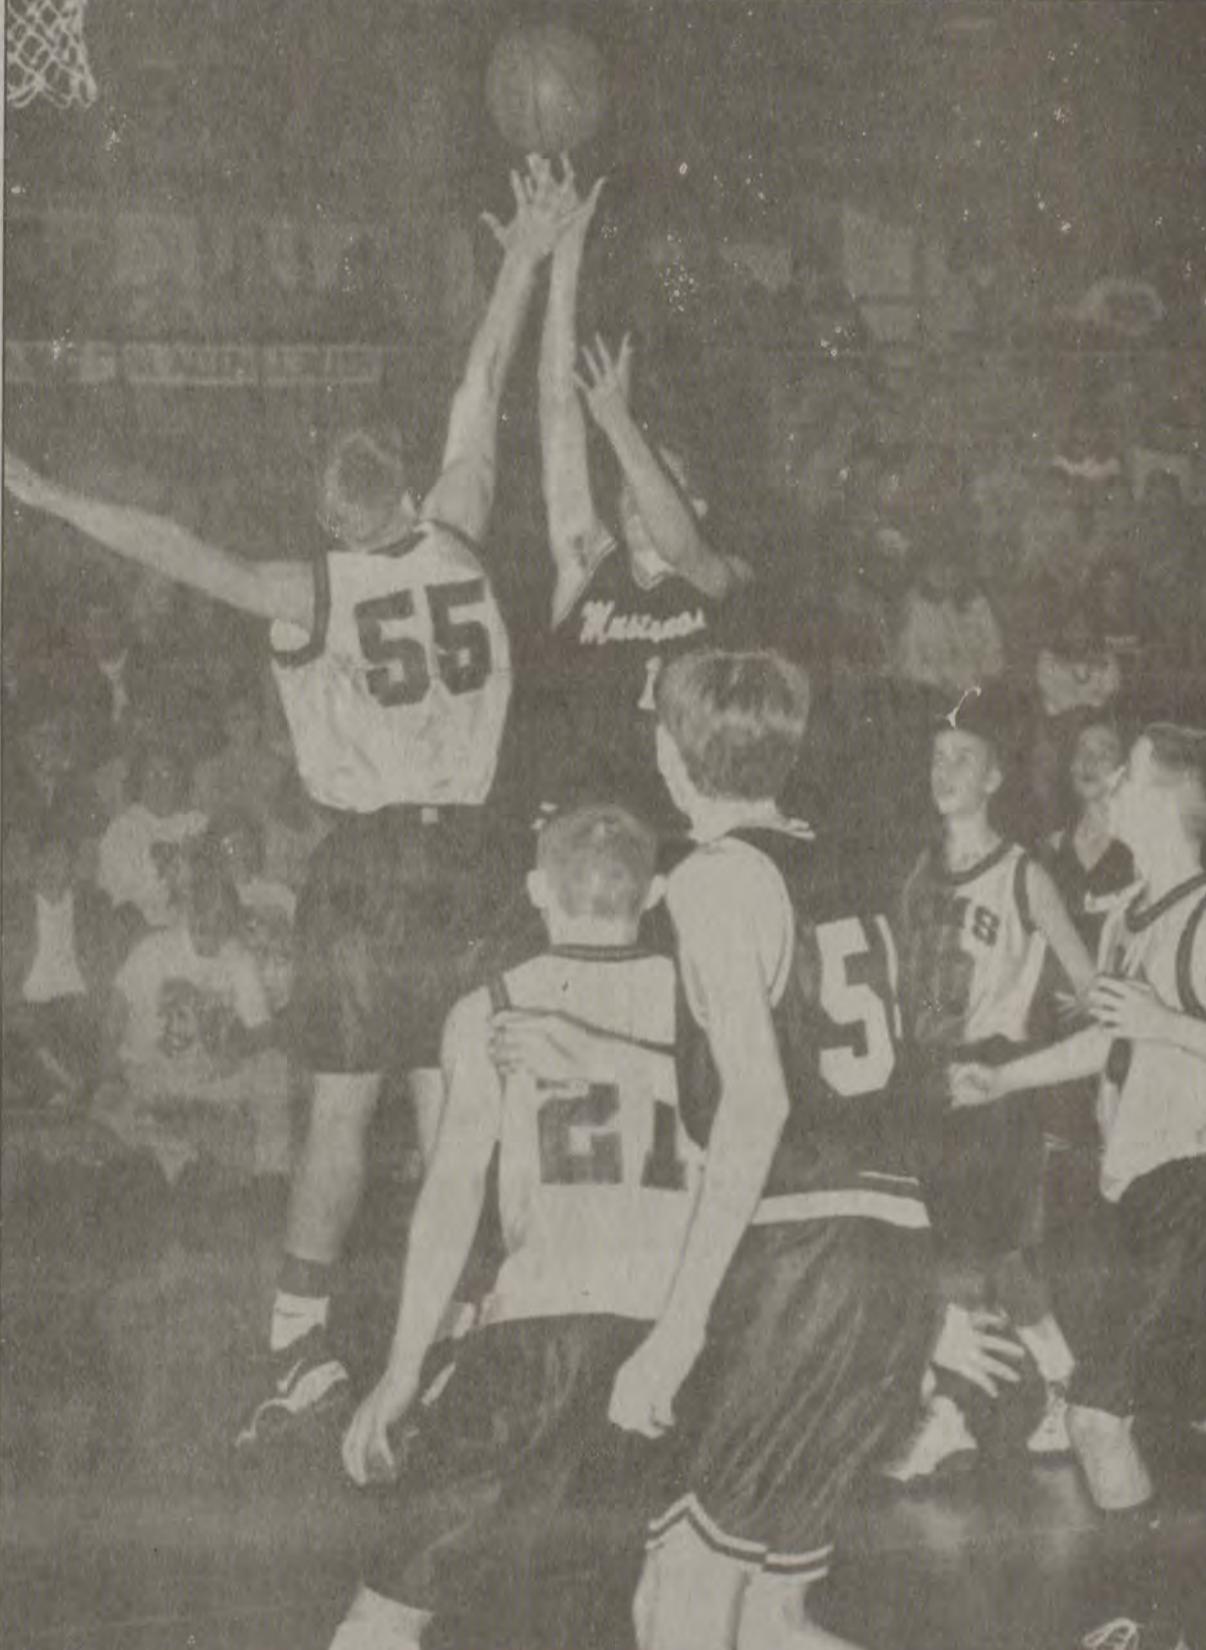

A belated happy birthday wish to Prestonsburg Blackcat Ladonna Sloane who celebrated number 18 back on February 12. Happy birthday, Ladonna even if it is late.

It was an exciting grade school basketball tournament that just concluded last Friday night at the D.W. Howard Fieldhouse at Betsy Layne.

Prater Creek principal Zenith Hall and his staff are to be commended for the outstanding job they did in hosting the tournament. Everything went well and I was pleased with the sportsmanship displayed (fans and players) by all who took in the event.

The Allen cheerleaders kept taking home the first place trophies as they won it in both boys' and girls' divisions. What a great job they do, as do all the squads.

Martin won the girls' team free-throw trophy. Beth Combs of Duff took home the individual free-throw award.

Leads Mustangs

(See Stumbo, page two)

A good crowd was on hand each night and all the games were close. No one dominated the tournament. The game between Adams and Stumbo in the boys' finals went to overtime and it is a shame that one had to lose. Both teams were well-coached, and all the players played hard. As I watched, I thought of all the good players heading into the high school ranks.

While I could not pull for any one team, I was happy for Hayes Hamilton as the winning coach. Hayes has been a good friend of mine for a long time, as is Neil Turner of Adams. Hayes is calling it over after this school year.

The new system worked this year but there should be some modifications to it come next year. Problems such as seeding. That needs to be revamped. Also, all the games need to be played in one high school gym instead of the four different sites. This makes it fair to all who are involved in the tournament.

It was a good three nights at the Betsy Layne gym!

58TH DISTRICT...

The 58th District basketball tournament tips off tonight at the Prestonsburg Fieldhouse. The finals will be held on Friday, February 27, giving the girl teams two days off before they have to go back at it on Monday in the girls' 15th Regional at South Floyd.

This is the first KHSAA-sanctioned 15th Region tournament to be held at a Left Beaver school. School principal Debbie Daniels and athletic director Barry Hall said they want this one to be the best it can be. The tournament runs from Monday through Thursday.

The boys 15th Region picks up on Friday and Saturday, March 6 and 7, at Elkhorn City. The second round and finals of the tournament continues Monday and Tuesday of the following week.

The next two weeks will be filled with good high school basketball. Of course, when the last horn sounds, only two teams in the 15th Region will be still standing and going on to state tournament play.

I look for one of the best girls' regional tournaments in several years. We have plenty of good talent in our high schools and that is going to make the tournament a good one.

Belfry has to be tabbed the favorite. Pike Central is going to be a strong contender, as well as our own Allen Central Lady Rebels. Pike Central has already advanced to the finals of the girls' 59th District, which makes them automatic for the regional.

Perhaps the best two- and three-seed match-up will be Betsy Layne and Prestonsburg in the 58th District. However, another good will match Shelby Valley and Pikeville, both two and three seeds. Two of those four teams are going on but what two, hard to tell.

Johnson Central and Sheldon Clark should emerge from the 57th District.

So the final eight could look like this: Pike Central, Shelby Valley/Pikeville out of the 59th, Belfry, Elkhorn City out of the 60th, Allen Central, Prestonsburg/Betsy Layne from the 58th, Johnson Central and Sheldon Clark out of the 57th.

Of course, the winner and runners-up from each district will not meet in the regional unless they both reach the finals.

However, with the draw (Sunday at 2 p.m.) two teams like Pike Central and Belfry could very well be in the same bracket and meet in a semifinal game.

Let's say the four district winners are Allen

Howard scores 24:Rebels close season with win over Bobcats

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

The Betsy Layne Bobcats and Allen Central Rebels closed out their regular season basketball schedule last Saturday night by meeting on the Allen Central home floor.

Although the game was a conference game, it had little bearing on the conference standings as Betsy Layne was still looking for their first district win of the season.

The Bobcats failed to collect that victory, falling to Allen Central 84-70, in a game that was much closer than the final 14-point span.

Senior guard Todd Howard closed out a brilliant career at Allen Central as the fans said good-bye on senior night. Howard rewarded the Rebel fans by scoring 24 points to lead the Rebel's scoring. For Howard, it was hard to say goodbye to the arena in which he has played so well.

"I feel bad that I won't be playing here anymore," he said after the game. "But the real season is about to begin and I think we have a good chance to go a long ways."

Allen Central placed four players in double figures with Gary Hunter tossing in 16 points and Nick Samons netting 15. Jesse Hall had 10 for the Rebels.

Like Allen Central, the Bobcats placed four players in double digits led by Craig Johnson's 18 points. Adam Tackett, who played a strong game, finished with 17. Justin Bartley added 15 and Neil Newsome finished with 14. Bartley buried five three-point baskets in scoring all his points, Johnson had three treys.

While Betsy Layne suffered the loss, Coach Tim Rice said he was pleased with the overall performance of his ball club.

"We played well tonight," he said. "We have kind of a match-up problem with Allen Central. They are a quick team but overall, I am pleased with the way we played."

Betsy Layne got as close as five points in the fourth quarter with just over three minutes to play. Johnson had drained two treys and Newsome's rebound basket made it 68-63. Hunter scored five unanswered points to give the Rebels a 73-63 lead. The lead was 10 points twice before Allen Central won by 14, their biggest lead.

"We were in the game with over a minute to go, but when Howard goes to the free-throw line, it is like giving them two points."

Howard hit four consecutive free throws in the closing minute to seal the win.

Allen Central held a 16-13 lead after the first quarter, but that came late in the period when Samons busted a three and Howard hit a 17-footer just before the quarter ended. A basket by Howard and a trey by Samons staked Allen Central to a 5-0 lead. Bartley's first three pointer tied the game at 5-5 and Johnson's trey gave Betsy Layne their first of only two leads, 8-5. Tackett's free throw with 2:32 to play, gave the Bobcats a 11-10 edge.

Allen Central led by seven, 21-14, early in the second period when Hall buried a three-pointer. Betsy Layne fought back and made it a one-point game, 24-23, on two Tackett free throws and consecutive baskets by Newsome.

Betsy Layne turned the ball over on three straight possessions, with Allen Central building a eight point margin, 31-23 on a Brian Jones layup. Allen Central led 36-29 going to the locker room at the half.

The Bobcats just would not go away in the third quarter as they rode the outside shooting of Bartley and inside game of Tackett to stay close to the district's number-two seed. With just over two minutes to play in the third, Tackett scored on a layup to cut an eight point Allen Central lead to two, 45-43. Bartley had two treys in the run. But the Rebels held to a 53-47 lead after three quarters.

In the fourth, the Bobcats fell behind by nine points, 40-31 with six minutes to play. Betsy Layne could get no closer than four points of the Rebels.

"The last 30 seconds of the game got a little wild," said Coach Rice. "The final score doesn't reflect how close the game was."

Allen Central faces South Floyd Thursday night in the 58th District tournament, and Howard knows the task will not be easy.

"They are going to be a tough team to beat," he said. "We've played them twice and it is going to be hard to beat them again."

But Howard was confident the Rebels would arise to the challenge and he expected to meet Prestonsburg in the championship game.

"We expect to play Prestonsburg and we hope to give them a little bit more when we play them again," said Howard. "Hopefully, we can go into the region and make some noise there."

Betsy Layne meets the number-one seed, Prestonsburg. The Bobcats have dropped two games to the Blackcats but have played them strong each time out. Coach Rice would love to collect his first win of the season over a district team.

"I feel comfortable with our team right now," he said. "We're playing hard. The kids have confidence they can go down there and upset Prestonsburg. It is not going to be an easy feat on their home floor."

All parents and coaches are urged to be in attendance at the first organizational meeting of the Floyd County Babe Ruth Baseball league.

Stumbo

decided to take the air out of the ball for the final shot. With 16 seconds to play, Newsome fouled Brian Roberts who missed the front end of a bonus shot. Adams took a time out with 10 seconds to play. Coming out of the time out, the ball went to Ryan Martin who launched a three-pointer that rimmed the basket and came out, sending the game to overtime.

"We wanted to get the ball in the hands of Shawn and let him take it to the basket," said Adams coach Neil Turner. "But Ryan had the shot."

Roberts hit a short jumper that gave Stumbo the first lead of the extra period, 46-44. After an Adams turnover, Josh Allen connected from four feet out and the Mustangs led by four, 48-44.

Newsome missed from the free-throw line with 2:12 to play but on the possession arrow, the Blackcats got the basketball and Younce scored to bring his team to within two, 48-46.

Stumbo was called for a walking violation, giving the ball back over to the Blackcats. Newsome launched a three but it bounced off the rim with Stumbo coming up with the ball.

Roberts went to the charity stripe with 1:22 left in the four-minute period, but missed both attempts with the Blackcats looking at the basket and a chance to tie. But Younce slipped down and was whistled for a walking violation.

Marcus Allen went uncheck and drove the middle for an easy basket for a four-point lead. Younce, with 57 seconds to play, hit one-of-two free throws for a three-point game. But, Stumbo hit four free throws down the stretch to pull out the 54-49 victory and a county championship.

The game was tied seven times. Adams led most of the game with Stumbo taking their first lead since the first quarter with 1:45 left in the third period. Marcus Allen completed an old-fashioned three-point play that gave Stumbo a 31-29 lead.

Adams led 12-8 after the first quarter behind the scoring of Newsome. The game was tied at 2 and 4 until Adams led 10-4 on a rebound basket by Newsome, a trey by Martin and Newsome's old-fashioned three-point play.

Stumbo caught the Blackcats at 12-12, but Matt Turner buried consecutive three-point baskets that gave Adams a 18-12 lead. Stumbo rallied back and tied the game at 18-18 with both teams going to the locker room tied at 20-20 at the half.

Younce came out and established control early in the third quarter with two baskets and Martin hit a trey that gave the Blackcats a seven-point cushion, 27-20. Jeremy Daniels, Marcus Allen and Roberts scored on three straight baskets to make it a one-point affair, 27-26. Stumbo then took their first lead on Marcus Allen's three-point play. Stumbo built a six-point lead, 37-31, after three quarters.

The Mustangs biggest lead was eight points, 39-31, at the onset of the fourth period.

But Adams never did quit and came back to cut the margin to two, 42-40 on Fleenor's rebound basket. Martin scored on a layup to tie the game at 42.

"The Younce kid was the most improved player I have seen," said Coach Hamilton of the Prestonsburg center. "I feel that Jeremy (Daniels) played a solid game for us. He rebounded well."

Hayes recalled his '85 championship team where he had 12 players from that team go on and graduate from college.

"That's the best part in the world," he said, "to see them go on to school. That and helping build character in kids."

BASEBALL...

It won't be long until the boys and girls of summer start getting the bats and gloves out for the high school softball and baseball season. It would be good if I could get all our county teams to send me their schedule for the upcoming season.

Thanks to everyone who has called or stopped me and said they enjoyed the article on sportsmanship in my column. I was surprised that so many folks agreed with it. Even us sports writers have to be good sports.

Until Friday, good sports everyone and be good sports! Enjoy the tournaments!

SPORTS IN KENTUCKY

UK-bound J.P. Blevins ... watch him go, and enjoy his adventure

J.P. Blevins the quintessential country kid. Traditional haircut, no earring or tattoo's, and he knows his way to Dairy Queen. And little kids under the home basket for game warm-ups want to be 'just like J.P.' A tribute for which he is much pleased. The Kid from Edmonton understands the gravity of adulation too.

On a grander scale, with the college game selling its soul to corporate America, could be Blevins's is the face of sanity on its way back to us ... and to little kids.

A UK basketball signee with a golden shot from 3-point launch, silky look-away passes, feet that move smartly (and a 4.0 GPA), is a prodigy on a path worn familiar by pioneers named Cox, Parsons and Pursiful and Pelfrey, Feldhaus and Hanson and Farmer and Epps. On his way to UK.

A Kentucky kid chasing a dream along a road to what he calls "the big time" in the same shadows of skepticism and doubts and questions that dogged country Kentuckians dating from Cox to Epps. "Is Blevins quick enough?" ... "Is Blevins tough enough?" ... "Can a kid from Edmonton, Kentucky really play up there?"

Up there. Such matter-of-fact arrogance is part of the fabric of UK basketball worship.

'Can a kid from Edmonton really...' is a boo-bird quandary that begs a comparative. So, here it is: "Is it possible that a kid from Wapakoneta, Ohio could become the first human being to step on another planet? Wouldn't that have to be a shake-n-bake urbanite from Houston or Gotham City or LA?"

Name is Neil Armstrong, and yes, Wapakoneta, Ohio to the moon ... and back.

So, can J.P. play for Tubby? Get a life, and watch a story unfold.

"This kid's got heart," his high school coach says.

J.P. knows this game. He understands and has good instincts. And he's unselfish," Tim McMurtrey says. "Because of the needs of our team this year, people haven't gotten to see some of the things J.P. does best. He's the best passer I've ever seen."

Blevins takes skeptics in stride and answers it with an impressive blend of realistic expectation and determination.

"All I can do is go up there and bust my tail every day in practice. I intend to do that and everything coach Smith tells me to do. Whatever spot he wants to put me in, however many minutes he wants me to play, I'll do whatever he says. I've worked hard and now I'm ready to go up there and learn and improve."

"No, I don't know what to expect, but I know practices will be longer, harder and more intense. I know I have to get stronger physically and learn how to play defense. The game at that level is going to be 10 times more intense. It's just a whole different game, but I'm just going to go and do my best."

Blevins will move to Lexington in the summer and get involved in off-season workouts.

"This is fulfillment of my lifelong dream and I'm ready to get started."

"What would I say to little kids? To never give up. I'd tell every one of 'em to keep your dreams and go after them. Don't let anything discourage you. You have to keep trying. And have fun. That's what I would say to them. Have fun."

Anyone else like The Kid's chances?

Stay tuned.

KENTUCKY BASKETBALL 'ARRIVAL, REVIVAL?

Kentucky's victory at Florida, as well as the Wildcats' second half showing against Georgia, was neither an 'arrival' nor a discovery of team chemistry, but a benchmark for the season to come — tournament time.

It was a UK team seeming to realize finally, that up-tempo defense will produce up-tempo offense. And, despite the raves and accolades showered on dismissed Florida Gator Jayson Williams, the view here is the Wildcats would have beaten Florida with or without Williams because the earlier game in Lexington Feb. 1 was an aberration. Last week it was a Florida team returning to form — 22 turnovers and 38 per cent field goal shooting.

Yet, along with the Georgia game, it was Kentucky's Wildcats coming of age too. Discovering that attacking, intelligent defense solves problems, makes up for shortcomings.

UK's tournament time success if there is to be any, must be predicated on the caliber of defense the Wildcats demonstrated at Florida and against Georgia. Solid and merciless and relentless.

JUST WONDERING

✓ Anyone else notice the irony ... Arkansas coach Nolan Richardson's racist remarks last week about blacks in the south and slave ships were remarkably like those that caused a furor and cost the late Jimmy 'The Greek' Snyder his job with CBS?

✓ Louisville's redshirt freshman Jeff McKinley is what analysts label too slow, too unquick. But the redshirt freshman's performance at Marquette last week, was proof positive that the 6-5 guard is a dandy prospect because he does things experts cannot measure.

Unlike UofL's backcourt bumbler, McKinley takes care of the basketball and most of all, makes intelligent decisions. Wonder why Hall of Fame coach Denny Crum did not recognize his quality guard sooner?

MISS BASKETBALL CANDIDATES

Kelly Pendleton of Webster County and Beth Vice of Montgomery County.

Pendleton. This space last week mentioned Webster County High's candidate for Miss Basketball, Kelly Pendleton, along with the glossy brochure that reported her on-floor achievements. She is fifth in the state in scoring, 25.1 and second in 3-point shooting accuracy, 35.2. The impressive statistical brochure was created, published and distributed not by the school, but by Pendleton's coach Cheryl Crews Vaughn.

Noting the Miss Basketball-worthy numbers Pendleton has put up (currently 12th all-time leading score in Kentucky), this space wanted voters to know about the young lady's academic citizenship records. Coach Vaughn was quick to reply.

"Kelly's current GPA is a 3.42 and she is ranked 37th in her class of 156," the coach reported, adding a long list of school clubs and activities groups with which Pendleton is involved.

"Kelly is also a member of a Christian singing group, for three years, called All to Thee. The group consists of 35 teens who belong to various churches throughout the area. The purpose of the group is to spread the word of Christ by singing, acting out skits and giving personal testimonies. The group also makes donations to local charities and visits local nursing homes and schools.

"I hope this information demonstrates that Kelly is an active role model in and out of the school and that she is a contributing member to society."

Vice. Sidelined earlier this season by threat of a stress fracture, the University of Alabama-bound all-stater at Montgomery County is among the state's top 10 in scoring, 23.8, and free-throw shooting, 82.8. Last week her season ended last when she suffered an ACL knee injury. She faces 4-6 months of rehabilitation.

Vice told writer Deanna Masicle of The Advocate in Mt. Sterling that the injury had put back in perspective the relative value of basketball. While she has played the game with dutiful passion since fourth grade, the senior guard said her latest setback has been a reminder that her faith, her family and friends still rate ahead of the sport to which she has been so dedicated.

Kelly Pendleton and Beth Vice, two bona fide candidates for Kentucky Miss Basketball.

SPINNING CHOICES

After Kentucky smothered Florida 79-54 literally in Gainesville last week, Lexington Herald-Leader sportswriter Jerry Tipton indulged in a typical media spin that feeds the boo-bird element among Kentucky fans.

At game time UK coach Tubby Smith reversed himself and said he would start four guards along with Nazr Mohammed instead of the 'no lineup changes' the coach announced the day before.

Smith's change-of-mind presented a spin choice for media. After UK's win at Florida, reporters could rave over the genius of Tubby's insightful four guard-one center decision and the message it would send to Scott Padgett and others — i.e., "get the ball to Nazr!"

Or, as Tipton chose, media could spin the change-of-mind into a question of Smith's credibility.

The view here is, had (impulsive) Rick Pitino instituted a 4-guard-Nazr lineup change with no prior announcement, and his team had turned a nine-point loss to Florida at home into a 25-point rout in Gainesville, Tipton and metro columnists would have proclaimed it a Pitino vision from on high and thrown rose petals at Da Coach's feet.

It's all in the spin ... and how fans choose reality over perception, someone else's.

HERE'S YOUR HEISMAN GUY

For all those who voted for Michigan's Charles Woodson over Peyton Manning for the Heisman Trophy, this story is for you.

USA Today reports: Charles Woodson left the image of spoiled athlete at the Walter Camp Football Foundation banquet two weeks ago. Besides demanding first-class airfare for his mother, girlfriend and nephew from the nonprofit organization, the Heisman winner reluctantly participated in functions and, while surrounded by two bodyguards, refused interview requests from Connecticut newspapers.

Woodson ... a credit to himself and college football?

And so it goes.

Prestonsburg closes season at Lawrence County

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

Coach Jackie Day Crisp and the Prestonsburg Lady Blackcats closed out their regular basketball season in a big way with a sounding 66-32 win over the Lady Bulldogs of Lawrence County.

The Lady Blackcats traveled to Louisa this past Saturday night to play the make-up game.

Prestonsburg placed four players in double figures in finishing the season with a 9-17 overall record. The record does not reflect how Prestonsburg has played in the final four weeks of the season.

Kimi Nunnery was looking for her shot, and scored a team-high 16 points to lead Prestonsburg to the 34-point win. It was the largest margin of victory for the Lady Blackcats since they defeated Betsy Layne by 40 points earlier in the season.

Jessi Burke and Brandi Wells scored 15 apiece with Amelia Conley tossing in six. Angela Howell had one point.

Prestonsburg drained four three-point baskets in the game, with Crystal Sloane burying two treys. Wells and Nunnery had one each.

Melissa Gauze was the only Lawrence County player to score in double figures, finishing with 16. Erica Webb had six points.

Prestonsburg held a 15-7 lead after the first quarter behind Nunnery, who scored seven first-quarter points. Sloane drilled both her treys in the opening quarter for six first-quarter points.

A 19-7 second quarter gave Prestonsburg a 34-14 halftime lead as Wells, who went scoreless in the first quarter, scored 10 points in the second period. Nunnery continued her hot shooting with five points in the quarter. Conley scored four.

Burke got more involved in the offense in the third period with six points as Prestonsburg increased their lead to 23 points, 46-23, after three periods.

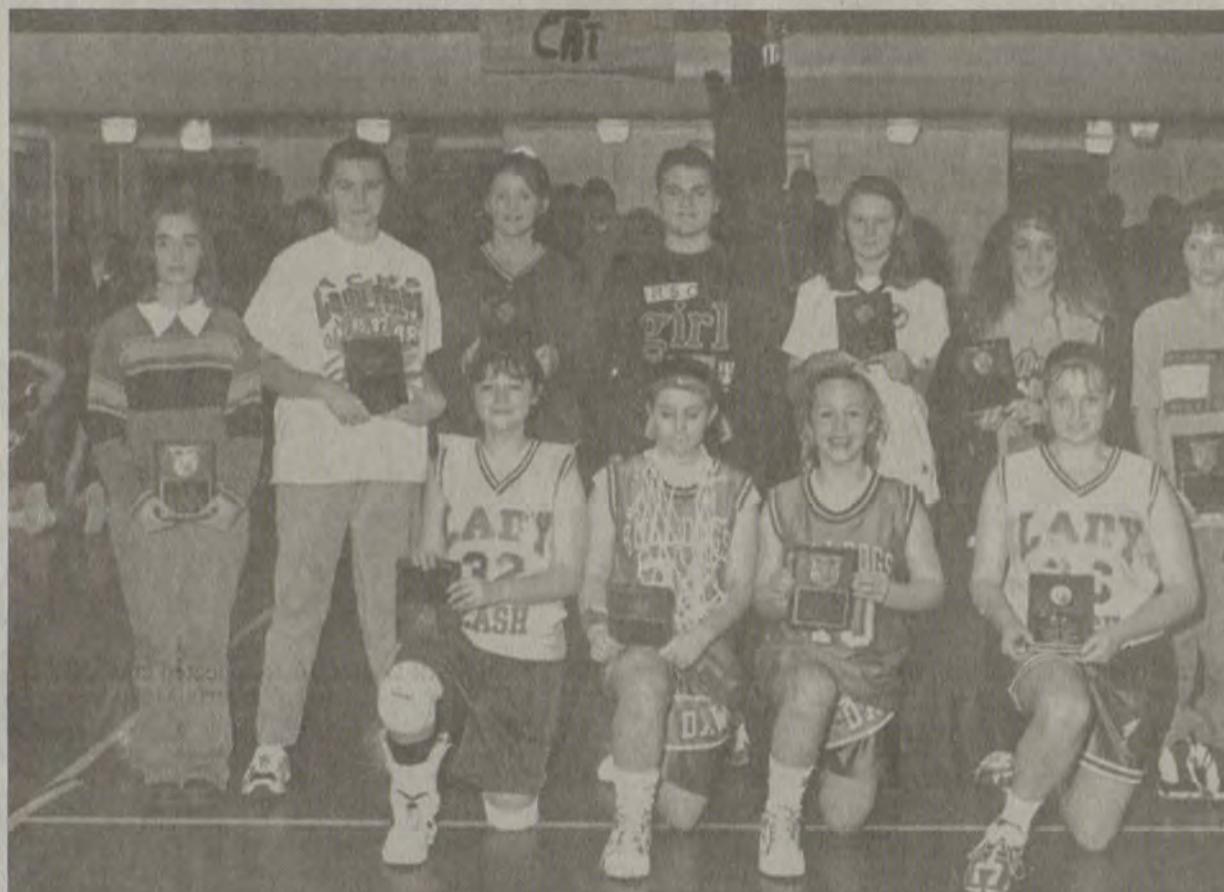

Burke hit six-of-seven free attempts in the fourth quarter and scored 10 points in the period as Prestonsburg never looked back.

The Lady Blackcats shot 61 percent from the free-throw line, hitting 14-of-23 attempts. Lawrence County made three-of-nine attempts.

Prestonsburg will meet Betsy Layne Thursday night in the first game of the district tournament in a 6:30 start.

Betsy Layne Elementary Family Resource Youth Service Center hosted a Character Education Awards Breakfast January 27th.

Character Education is a concept that "Quality Kids" are trying to promote within the elementary schools in Floyd County with character traits, such as citizenship, respect, tolerance and justice to name a few.

Each student was selected by their homeroom teacher for the sec-

After students were selected for the award, Karen Allen, principal, notified parents of their children's leadership and invited them to an awards breakfast.

Damron, who is also with the Kentucky Opry, treated them to special music.

The highlight of the morning came when the students were given their character Education Award for Citizenship by Karen Allen.

Brian Akers of the Family Resource Center said, "It was a collaborated effort for this event bring the school and community together to reward children for demonstrating exemplary character

NASCAR CONNECTION

VIVA LAS VEGAS

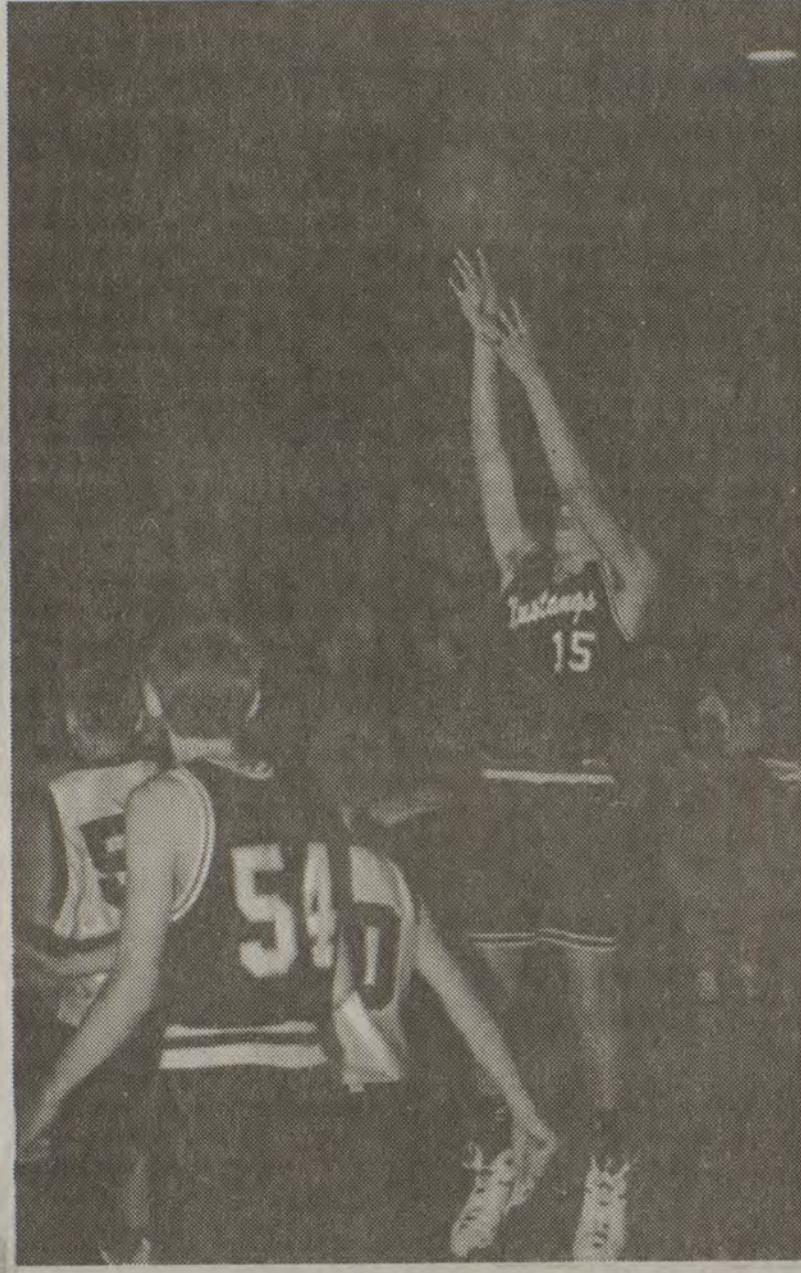

When Bill France, Sr. and the rest of the good ol' boys got together 50 years ago to start what is now NASCAR, do you think that in their wildest dreams they saw their sport one day headed to Las Vegas?

When you look back at some of the old Winston Cup schedules, it really hasn't been that long ago when the sport pretty much stayed in the confines of the Southeast. Daytona, Darlington, and Talladega were the promised land so to speak if you were either a driver or fan.

It seems that someone let the secret out about the competitiveness of Winston Cup and it wasn't long before the rest of the nation wanted in on some of the action. I'm sure that "big" Bill Sr. thought that his western boundary for the sport was the Mississippi River and besides anybody that lived that far out of the south wouldn't understand it anyway.

Any chance for the south to hold on to the best kept secret in the country was put in jeopardy when in 1979 the first NASCAR race was televised live from one coast to the other, and it wasn't long before NASCAR was getting calls from such remote racing outposts as California and Texas asking for a piece of the action.

Prestonsburg settles issue with win over Betsy Layne

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

However the Lady Blackcats of Prestonsburg got their season off in '97 they did finish strong and strong enough to take second place and the number-two seed in next week's district tournament.

The Lady Blackcats were not about to settle for a tie for the second spot and posted a 53-50 win over the Betsy Layne Lady Cats last Monday in finishing 4-2 in the Floyd County Conference.

Betsy Layne, who could have tied Prestonsburg for the second place position, fell to 2-4 in the conference.

Prestonsburg played without leading scorer, Shelly Greathouse, but got a balanced attack, led by Brandi Wells' 14 points. Crystal Sloane and Jessi Burke each scored nine points and Kimi Nunnery added eight.

Jessica Clark led all scorers, finishing with 28 points for the game. Clark hit two three-point baskets. Sabrina Yates netted nine.

Betsy Layne, who trailed by nine points at the half, mounted a comeback in the fourth quarter, but a missed layup and, later, a turnover hurt the Lady Cats.

"We struggled to win," said Prestonsburg coach Jackie Day Crisp. "It wasn't easy. We missed Shelly out there and then we lost Ladonna (Sloane) to an injury. She was playing good on defense when she got hurt."

Betsy Layne rallied in the fourth but Prestonsburg warded off the attempt.

"We had our chance to win the game," said Betsy Layne coach Bill Newsome. "We had a couple of senior mistakes that hurt us."

Sloane scored six of her nine points in the first quarter to lead Prestonsburg to a 16-9 lead. Clark matched the total for Betsy Layne but Nunnery buried a trey and freshman Amelia Conley scored four points for Prestonsburg.

Prestonsburg camped out at the free-throw line in the second quarter where they did all their scoring. Going without a field goal, Prestonsburg hit 15-of-19 attempts to take a 31-22 halftime lead.

While Prestonsburg was connecting, Betsy Layne became disconnected. The Lady Cats shot 13 times from the charity stripe and hit only three.

Clark rallied the Lady Cats in the third quarter in a 16-10 run. Clark buried two treys and scored nine points to bring her team back to within three points of Prestonsburg, 41-38 after three quarters.

The two teams played even in the final quarter with Betsy Layne unable to capitalize on some Prestonsburg turnovers. Clark scored eight points in the fourth.

Wells buried her trey and had five points in the third period.

Prestonsburg, after dropping nine of their first 11 games, finished strong at 8-16 on the season. Betsy Layne evened their record at 11-11.

The two teams will meet for the third time this season when they tip off in the first round of the 58th District tournament on Thursday, February 26 at 6:30 p.m.

Prestonsburg Youth Baseball to hold meeting

It is still winter but that doesn't stop the baseball season from coming up. So, in preparation for the upcoming Little League season, the Prestonsburg Youth Baseball League will hold an organizational meeting on Tuesday, March 3 at 7 p.m. at the Adams Middle School.

All coaches, past coaches, and those desiring to coach should be at this important meeting.

Rockingham one week and the very next weekend walk through the lobby of the MGM Grand like they had been coming there for years.

Las Vegas got a touch of NASCAR in 1997 when the Busch Series, Craftsman Truck Series, and Winston West Series held events at the new speedway. The reception that the three events got was overwhelming, which no doubt helped the speedway land a Winston Cup date.

With all that Las Vegas has to offer plus the excitement of the race itself, don't be surprised if before long this ticket becomes one of the hardest race tickets to lay your hands on. Maybe it is only appropriate that Rusty Wallace has his new Elvis paint scheme on his Taurus this week. After all didn't Elvis come up with the song, "Viva Las Vegas?"

This Sunday NASCAR will take another big step as the Winston Cup teams will compete for the first time at Las Vegas Motor Speedway. Unlike a few years ago the Winston Cup community will invade Las Vegas and fit in like it had been coming there for years. You see NASCAR has that rare ability of being able to spit a little chewing tobacco with the fans at

Stewart scores 28 in setback to Shelby Valley

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

South Floyd's Olivia Stewart scored 13 of her 28 points in the fourth quarter, but the Lady Raiders dropped a 70-58 decision to the Shelby Valley Lady Wildcats as both teams closed out their regular season this past weekend.

Stewart hit three three-point baskets. She scored 22 of her points in the second half.

Martha Crawford finished with 16 points and knocked down four treys, giving the Lady Raiders seven for the game.

Summer Jones had an outstanding performance, finishing with 36 points which included a remarkable eight three-point baskets. Ashley Damon scored 18 for the Lady Wildcats.

Both teams battled in the first quarter as Jones had to outscore the rest of the Lady Raiders in the period. She hit three treys and had 13 points to give Shelby Valley a 20-16 lead after the first quarter.

Crawford and Stewart had three-point baskets, and each scored five points in the quarter. Misty Berger, who finished the game with four, had all her points in the first period.

Jones buried two more treys in the second stanza as Shelby Valley outscored South Floyd 17-12 to take a 37-28 lead to the locker room at the half. Crawford scored 11 of the 12 South Floyd points. She drained four three-point baskets.

Crawford got lost in the offense in the second half for South Floyd as she failed to score in the final two quarters. Stewart scored nine third-quarter points but the Lady Raiders trailed 55-41 after three. Jones had three treys in the third for Shelby Valley.

South Floyd returns to the hardwood tonight against Allen Central in the opening game of the 58th District tournament.

GORDON CAPTURES 30TH RACING CAREER VICTORY AT ROCKINGHAM

Gordon drove his #24 car to victory lane after completing 393 laps. He called the win at Rockingham as "miraculous."

Together again

Aunt Sally and Uncle Bud (for reasons soon to become evident, not their real names) are together again. For several months, their separation, after nearly 50 years of wedded bliss, has remained a complete mystery.

Now that they're again living under the same roof, the true story of their estrangement has leaked. So, here are the facts about why a couple of their seventies suddenly began calling lawyers and bickering over who should get the garden tiller.

It began when Aunt Sally, who suffers from the worst case of far sightedness on record—if indeed such records are kept—refused to wear glasses, but insisted on buying a new pair of patent leather pumps to go with the dress she bought to wear to Easter sunrise services last spring. Naturally, since they hover over each other like a hen with new biddies (another reason everyone was in a state of shock at their break-up), Uncle Bud accompanied her to the shoe department at one of the local discount stores.

Hewie Willard (not his real name, either), who has been the butt of jokes for 30 years because he lost his hair in his early twenties, was on duty that afternoon.

Aunt Sally picked out several pairs of possibilities, all of which were at least two sizes too small, and Uncle Bud wandered off a few feet and pretended to be looking at a pair of Nikes.

Hewie, the epitome of the shoe salesman, had gotten down on his knees and was trying to pry a shoe onto Aunt Sally's plump little foot when she glanced down and saw his bald head. Horrified, she thought it was her own bare knee and grabbed her dress tail and covered it.

Unfortunately for Uncle Bud, he witnessed the whole thing and broke into uncontrollable, bent-over-gasping-for-breath laughter.

By the time he got his breath back and control enough of himself to be of any assistance, Hewie Willard was behind Aunt Sally trying to pull her shoulders off the floor. Of course, she was of no help whatsoever because all she was interested in was pulling her dress tail up over her knees as she muttered, "Oh mercy. Oh mercy. Oh...mercy."

Between the two of them, and after several minutes of the hardest work either had ever done in their lives, they brought Aunt Sally upright.

But Uncle Bud, having lived with her long enough to know that she would see no humor in the situation, and for the sake of peace on earth, neither should he, managed to stifle his laughter.

That is until Hewie, as he wiped the sweat from his forehead with a big white handkerchief, said, "Man, I've never seen anything like that in my whole life."

Several people in the crowd which had begun to gather thought Uncle Bud was having a heart attack as he lay on the floor gasping for breath.

But the good news is, they're back together now and everything's fine. Incidentally, Aunt Sally did not buy a pair of pumps and is adjusting quite well to her new bifocals.

Community Advisory Council holds meeting

Members of the Community Advisory Council met in November in the Culinary Arts Classroom at the Carl D. Perkins Job Corps.

They discussed a Christmas party which was held for 45 to 50 students at the center. Lenny and Abby Grant volunteered to solicit local businesses for donations to buy gifts for the students.

John Rosenberg suggested that letters be sent to council members who were not at the meeting in order to provide them with information about the party.

Denny Moore, a member of the staff at the center, presented an update on the School-To-Work program. Moore reported that the center had 13 students participating in the program in both Johnson and Floyd counties. He explained that student Denise Moore had been on three School-To-Work sites and had done an excellent job. He added that more volunteers are needed for the program.

Council members present at the meeting were John Rosenberg, Frank Salyer, Debbie Allen, Mary Hereford, and Thomas Hereford.

Staff members present were Wyvonna Davis, Billie Gipson, Steve Arms, Denny Moore, Sue Poe, Karen Wicker, Tom Harmon, Donnie Ray, Charlie Hunter, Jill Johnson, Barbara Blackburn, and Marsha Hackworth.

Student representatives present were Morell Moore, Tara Garrett, Tommie Fox, Patricia Anderson, Hacina Butts, Anna Martin, and Marcus Jackson.

Ethics Commission withholds penalty phase of guidelines

The Floyd County Ethics Commission met January 20 at 5:15 p.m.

Chairman John Rosenberg called the meeting to order. He reported that Jerry Fultz had resigned as a member of the Ethics Commission due to a pressing schedule.

Floyd County Judge-Executive Ben Hale reported that all necessary personnel in his department had submitted their 1997 financial disclosure statements. He also reported that all candidates for office will be required to file a financial disclosure statement in 1998 due to the county election this year.

Peggy Bradford, secretary of the ethics board, reported she had sent officials who had failed to file their 1997 financial disclosure statements a reminder that they needed to do so as directed by the commission.

The commission decided to review the December 1997 and 1998 financial disclosure statements at the February meeting. Bradford will pick up those statements at the county court clerk's office.

Members discussed whether they should enforce the penalty phase of the Ethics Ordinance in regard to those who failed to comply with the required yearly filings.

A motion was made by Bobby Joe Akers, seconded by Peggy Bradford, and approved unanimously by the commission to withhold the penalty phase until the Ethics Ordinance is reviewed entirely and required revisions are made.

Rosenberg and members of the commission discussed with Judge Hale some parts of the Ethics Ordinance that required revisions. Various models of an ethics ordinance were reviewed and discussed. The motion was made by Patty Murphy, seconded by John Porter, and approved unanimously by the commission to ask Rosenberg to prepare an amended County Ethics Ordinance for review by the commission at the March 1998 meeting.

After passage by the Ethics Commission, the amended ordinance will be submitted to the Floyd County Fiscal Court for approval.

Bradford was directed to submit a copy of the commission minutes to The Floyd County Times for publication.

Price club meets on Valentine's Day

Members of the Price Community Club held their monthly meeting on February 14, Valentine's Day. The hit of the evening was the delivery of Valentine's gifts for Secret Sisters.

After opening exercises, members were welcomed.

During the business session, members agreed to award certificates of appreciation to community volunteers. They made plans for an Easter Egg Hunt at Minnie Park on April 4.

Anniversaries and birthdays for the month of February were acknowledged.

Also discussed at the meeting were changes members wanted to make in the club's rules. One of those changes included meeting times. All future meetings will be held on the second Saturday of each month at 3 p.m.

The next meeting will be March 14 at 3 p.m.

Recycling group plans to establish center

Members of the Floyd County Recycling Committee devoted their meeting Wednesday, January 21, to discussing a proposal to establish a recycling center in Floyd County.

Rebecca Derosett, chair, told members that the discussion would center around a document mailed to them and prepared by Lon May and Mike Vance. The document proposed that Floyd County Fiscal Court and Blue Grass Recycling enter into an agreement to establish the center.

Terms provide that Blue Grass, for a fee of 14 cents per capita, would come into the county and work with the committee and government officials to coordinate a long-range recycling plan; train workers, market recyclables, and return a percentage of net sales to the general fund. The county would provide the building, land, and one worker to serve as director of the facility.

Bob Lewandowski suggested the committee also consider the community recycling plan designed by the Kentucky Recycling and Marketing Assistance Program. He stated that all the steps to develop a recycling program are in the manual given to committee members by Charlie Peters, Division of Waste Management in Frankfort.

In response to Lewandowski's statement that the county's goal should be to become independent managers of the system, Vance said that could be attained by Solid Waste.

Johnnie Ross proposed that the group forward the draft of the agreement to Solid Waste for final revisions, ask them to return it to the committee for further consideration, then present the agreement to the full Environmental Committee. Upon approval of the full committee, the document would then be presented to Floyd Fiscal Court.

Those present agreed that Blue Grass Recycling's record should be checked in the areas where the company is now operating. Kathy Friend, Ross, and Jean Dorton volunteered to gather the information.

Lon May said that, in his opinion, the proposal with Blue Grass was the best and only option for the county at present. He further said he has been studying recycling for the past three years without seeing much progress on the matter.

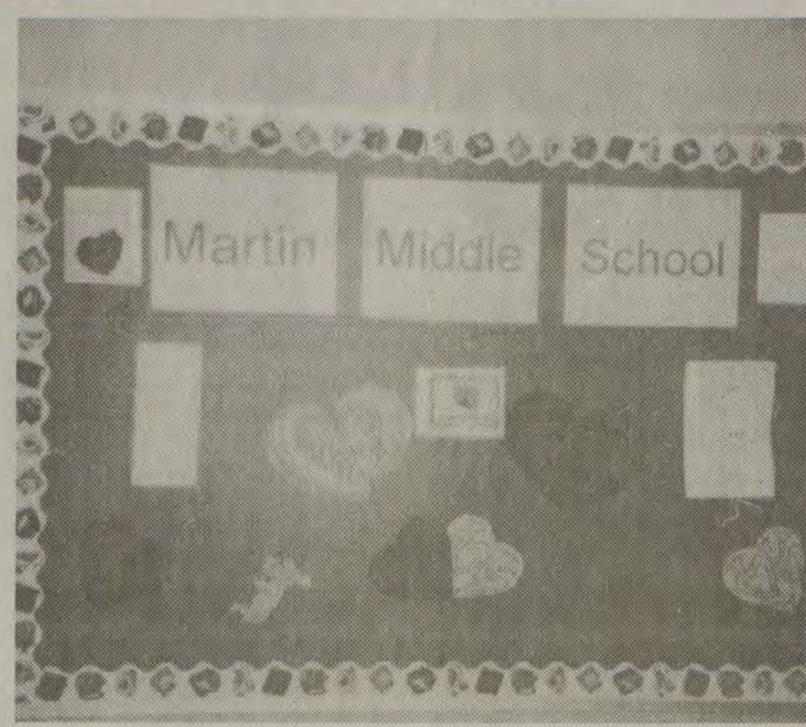

As previously arranged, the group then talked with Mickey Mills on the speaker phone about his method of operation. He advised Friend to call his secretary in Lexington to obtain information, in response to her questions about his present clients. He said Blue Grass has been working with Magoffin County for some time and has recently started a program in Hazard. Mills said Floyd County is an ideally-located site for regional recycling.

As discussion came to a close, the group agreed to move forward with exploring the feasibility of the proposal, contact all pertinent parties, and meet again on Wednesday, February 18, at the Chamber of Commerce Office, in Prestonsburg, at noon.

The meetings are open to the public.

Attending the meeting were Rebecca Derosett, Jean Dorton, Hubert Puckett, Norm Marcum, Bob Lewandowski, Kevin Webb, Mike Vance, Kathy Friend, Mickey Mills, Kimberly Spears, Pat Spicer, Carla Coburn, Dave Cooley, Johnnie Ross, Janet Conley, Lon May, and Cindy Hackworth.

"But WHY is it OK?"

You may think that stealing cable TV is no big deal. Fact is, much like shoplifting, cable theft forces everyone's prices higher. It takes money that could otherwise be invested in better programming, system improvements and even in the community. And it's a felony offense that could carry hefty fines and even jail time.

If you're not paying for cable, come forward before our house-to-house audit begins. We promise to put you on our subscriber list, no questions asked. Which, by the way, is a whole lot easier than answering his.

Thank You!

for your patience and understanding.

The heavy, wet snow that recently blanketed our area left 65,000 American Electric Power customers in Kentucky and southwest West Virginia without electric service, many for nearly a week.

The three extraordinary storms, Jan. 27, Feb. 3, and Feb. 5, brought heavy snow and ice that broke tree limbs, crushed carports and brought down our power lines. At times, our lines were coming down faster than we could track them. And the second storm Feb. 5, damaged some lines we had just repaired.

We've never had such extensive damage to our facilities. Inches of ice and snow coated trees and our lines, breaking poles and bringing lines to the ground. Trees fell from well outside our rights-of-way (the areas we cut to maintain our lines) and crashed through our facilities. At last count, our crews replaced more than 200 broken poles, close to 200 broken cross arms, and put up thousands of sections of line before all service was restored.

Crews from seven states joined nearly 300 local line mechanics, servicers and tree contractors to repair damage and restore service. At the height of the repairs, more than 800 line mechanics, servicers and tree contractors were working around the clock to get the lights back on. Hundreds of other AEP employees worked behind the scenes answering 85,500 phone calls, delivering food and supplies, and providing directions for out-of-town crews.

We know being without electricity is frustrating, and we want you to know that we greatly appreciate your patience and understanding during these trying conditions. We also extend our thanks to the many local public safety personnel, city and county road crews and National Guard personnel who helped. Numerous motels and restaurants also worked with us to house and feed out-of-town crews. Some even brought employees in early to help.

We hope you will join us in extending special thanks to the many AEP employees who worked tirelessly for days until service was restored to all customers.

We all hope we've seen the last snowflakes for awhile!

EXTENSION NEWS

by Theresa Scott-Morgan

If children are to thrive and blossom, they need to feel valued for who they are and loved with no strings attached. And they need to be given age-appropriate experiences that challenge them and allow for frequent success.

When these conditions are met, youngsters feel a sense of worth and capability that we call self-esteem. Positive self-esteem is one of the greatest gifts we can give to our young children.

Acceptance means embracing a child as is, without judgment, comparison or condition. Such unconditional acceptance gives the child a sense of peace and security. It says, "I accept you just as you are right now, and I will continue to accept you no matter what." When you accept all of a child—the good, the not-so-good, and even the unknown—the child learns self-acceptance. Of course, along with acceptance, we need to guide young children and set appropriate limits.

Cherishing a youngster means fully appreciating her uniqueness, special abilities and potential. Cherishing says, "I think you are a wonderful, marvelous person with special gifts to give. No one else in the world is just like you."

When a child has fun playing with a new friend, or builds a house out of blocks, or learns to sing a song, he experiences success. As these little successes build, the child grows in confidence. He learns, "I can do it!"—a key element in fostering self-esteem and confidence.

There is no better time to instill positive self-esteem than the early formative years of a child's development. Although self-esteem can be and often is improved in later life, it's much easier to build good feelings about one's self when tearing down a negative self-concept is not required.

One way to strengthen self-worth and confidence in children is to clear away roadblocks to positive self-esteem. Here are four esteem-building roadblocks that are common among many of us as parents and caregivers of young children.

Roadblock #1: WE TAKE CHILDREN FOR GRANTED

When you are around children all the time, it's easy to take them for granted. Constant exposure to its wonders numbs us to the miracle of childhood. We fail to cherish the children around us. Sometimes, we do not even treat them with respect and courtesy. Our insensitivity sends the message that we don't care.

No one takes children for granted intentionally. It just happens. Guard against this tendency. Remind yourself regularly to see each child freshly with eyes of wonder and appreciation.

Remember that much of the world you see and live in every day a child sees for the first time. Join in the child's wonder and let it instruct and refresh you.

Roadblock #2: WE ARE TOO HURRIED, TIRED OR PREOCCUPIED

If we feel pressured, fatigued, depressed or preoccupied with other concerns, our minds become restless and our bodies tense.

Children are quick to pick up these feelings, and often mirror them back to us. Successfully managing stress and nurturing our sometimes realize. Think back to your childhood. Is there some remark you overheard that even now causes painful memories? The messages we receive in those early years long remain etched in our minds. Even unconscious memories can continue to influence behavior in adulthood.

Avoid sarcasm, name calling, shame, and verbal disrespect of all types. Keep the tone of your voice warm and positive. Most importantly, never speak unfavorably about a child to another person. Whether the child is within earshot or not, learn to voice your concerns in language that is kind and nurturing as well as honest. Nothing more severely damages a child's self-esteem than public criticism, be it direct or indirect.

Roadblock #4: WE DON'T LISTEN

Anyone spending a little time with a three-year-old sooner or later fears the child just might talk their ears off. Often it's hard to really listen to a child. Attention, when given, is all too often divided or half-hearted. Intellectually speaking, a child's chatter may seem uninteresting, even irritating.

Remember, much of what for you is old hat is brand new and wondrous to a child. When children receive little or no adult attention, some withdraw, and others act out. Over time, children who are not sensitively listened to may find it difficult to acknowledge, understand, and express their feelings and thoughts. Later in life, this inability can lead to stunted potential and relationship problems.

So listen with respect and a fresh, open mind to the children in your life. Listen with full attention and with all your heart and soul. You may be amazed at how much fun this can be and how much you learn. And the children in your life will love it. It will be a two-way blessing—guaranteed!

New 1999 Ford trucks arriving at Layne Bros.

Ford dealers journey to Louisville to take delivery of the new 1999-model Super Duty F-Series pickup trucks manufactured at the Louisville Kentucky Truck Plant. Layne Bros. Ford Lincoln Mercury Honda will offer the trucks at their level location.

Edward Jones ranks no. 1 for 1997 in Wall Street Journal stock-pick ranking

The recommended stock portfolio of the Edward Jones financial-services firm achieved the highest overall return among 15 major brokerage firms for the year 1997 with a return of 39.5 percent, according to the Wall Street Journal's latest quarterly stock-picking survey.

Local Edward Jones investment representative Sam Blankenship said, "It's an honor to fare so well, but our objective is not to win a quarterly contest, it's to offer a real-life model for individual investors. A long-term ownership of high-quality investments for our clients is smarter than trying to time the ups and downs of the stock market."

Ray Robbins, director of Edward Jones' Research Department, which compiles Jones' recommended stock list, said the firm's list is composed of well-known companies. "High-quality growth stocks experience increasing stock prices," Robbins said. "History has shown that industry leaders typically perform well and come with less risk than small companies over the long term."

This long-term focus is exemplified by the portfolio's low turnover rate. Turnover indicates the percentage of change within a portfolio in a given period of time. "High Turnover can result in higher capital gains taxes and commissions, thereby reducing an investor's return," Blankenship said. "As our portfolio's performance illustrates, choosing high-quality investments and staying with them for the long term provides better results."

With more than 3,700 offices in all 50 states, Edward Jones is the largest financial-services firm in the nation in terms of offices and serves more than 2.5 million customers. Plans are under way to expand to 10,000 offices in the next decade. Edward Jones offers a variety of investments, including certificates of deposit, taxable and tax-free bonds, stocks and mutual funds.

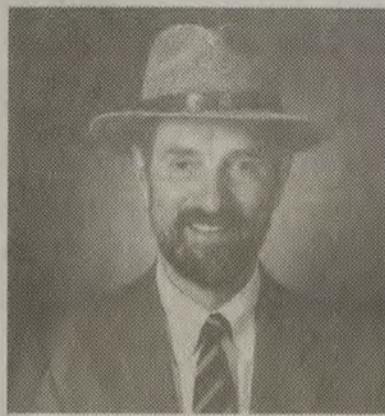

Sam Blankenship's office is located at 93 West Court St., Prestonsburg, KY 41653.

A fleet of 250 new, red 1999-model Super Duty F-Series pickup trucks left Ford Motor Company's Kentucky Truck Plant (KTP) Monday on a 20-mile caravan through downtown Louisville. The trucks were driven by Ford dealers who came to Louisville to take delivery.

KTP, on Chamberlain Lane in Louisville, recently began producing the new trucks.

Participating dealers are in the Sales and Marketing territory of Ford Division's Cincinnati Region,

Local auctioneer attends seminar

Bill Gibson of Action Auction & Realty in Pikeville, attended a four-day seminar in Steamboat Springs, Colorado on "Renovations to Your Auction Business."

The program was designed to help auction firm owners adapt to the rapidly changing environment, recognize the effects on the industry, and adjust their services to better serve the needs of their clients and customers.

Topics focused on five main areas: Forming Strategic Alliances; Employee Compensation; Shifting Paradigms; Auction Company of the Future and Electronic Bidding. Fifty-four auctioneers participated in this 10th annual Auction Marketing Institute winter seminar designed for the decision-makers in auction firms.

The Auction Marketing Institute (AMI) is a not-for-profit educational association, headquartered in Overland Park, Kansas, that offers designations for the auction and appraisal professions. More than 1000 auctioneers and appraisers in the United States and Canada hold designations awarded by the AMI.

which includes portions of Ohio, Kentucky, Indiana, Tennessee, Virginia, West Virginia and Illinois.

In addition to picking up the new trucks, the dealers came to Louisville to attend a special training session on the new Super Duty F-Series and to tour KTP.

"Production of the Super Duty F-Series at KTP is a fitting addition to our existing truck production in Louisville," said Frank Foley, manager of KTP. "Ford Louisville employees produce some of the most popular trucks in automotive history. No wonder Louisville is called the 'Truck Capital of the World!'

The F-Series has outsold every truck in the United States for 21 straight years. It has been the best-selling vehicle—car or truck—in North America for 16 years in a row. More than 26 million F-Series trucks have been purchased or leased worldwide, and over eight million are still on the road today.

"Ford and its dealers are excited about the new Super Duty F-Series lineup," said Larry Gregerson, regional sales manager. "They were anxious to get the new Super Duty trucks...so anxious that they decided to pick them up themselves."

"More than 80,000 orders for the Super Duty F-Series have been placed by Ford's North American dealers."

Ford's 1999 Super Duty F-Series line, which goes on sale in early March, includes F-250, F-350, F-450 and F-550 trucks rated at over 8,500 pounds gross vehicle weight (GVW).

The new F-Series lineup, developed and built on a separate platform from the under-8,500 pound GVW F-150 and F-250 pickup, features the industry's first SuperCab with standard four doors. This feature lets commercial buyers use both doors for easy access of people and cargo, and it gives personal-use customers the option of using only the passenger-side rear door for their children and pets.

Ford is the leader in total U.S. truck sales and has been for three consecutive years. U.S. customers bought more than one million Ford pickups and nearly 700,000 sport-utility vehicles in 1997. In total, a record 2,248,793 Ford trucks were purchased from Ford and Lincoln Mercury dealers last year.

HISTORICAL NOTES

(The following article is reprinted from the July 31, 1952 edition of the Floyd County Times)

Everybody calls John Henry Canterbury "Dad." But to see him lifting backbreaking loads, working daily in the fields or on the hillsides for himself or his neighbors, you would never think of him as a man of 82 years.

This rugged oak of a man lives on Mare Creek in Floyd County and moved here from West Virginia. He does a full day's work on the farm where he is tenant, doing any chore but mountainside plowing. He swings a 100 pound sack of feed onto his shoulder and carries it like a brawny youngster. When he is not busy tilling his own corn crop and truck patches, he helps his neighbors on their farms.

"Dad" has done a lot of living, and he tells about it in an interesting way, dropping an occasional picturesque phrase to intrigue the listener.

When it was learned that he was a native of Wayne County, West Virginia, he was once asked if he knew certain people — like the Vinsons and the Fergusons. That set him to reminiscing, and right off he came up with a striking phrase.

"Sure, I knew the oldtime Vinsons and plenty others," he recalled. "Hundreds I've known who have gone to join the great throne that makes up the pale-faced nation of the dead."

Old Smithy Cyrus was my grandfather — the same Smith Cyrus mentioned by Ely in his history of the Big Sandy. He was a big man — weighed 328 pounds — kept a barrel of whiskey on hand at all times, kept it in the smoke house and carried the key himself. He died in a big rocking chair by his fireside. The big chair had to be reinforced so as to hold him up.

"Well, he had a big tin dipper and a glass. The dipper was full of whiskey and he would pour a drink into the glass he held, and ever so often he would take a drink. That's the way they found him dead — in that big rocking chair, with a dipper in one hand and a glass in the other."

A living encyclopedia of mountain legend and family lore, John Henry Canterbury would tell of those early days in Wayne County when people lived under near pioneer conditions. He grew up in the home of another John Henry Canterbury, his uncle, on White's Creek, and learned there the first hand lessons of making a living by harvesting hoop poles, staves, and tanbark in the local forest.

Hoop poles were small hickory bushes used by coopers to make hoops for barrels. Wagon spokes were made from full grown hickory trees that were later finished at the local mill. Canterbury recalls how much they earned for their work because of the wide disparity of prices then and now. For the hoop poles Canterbury and his uncle received $8 a hundred. The spokes in the crude shape they came from the forest brought them $10 and $12 a thousand, depending upon the grade. Tan bark was $12 per cord, staves were $15 a cord if they were made from good quality white oak. For tie poles, those long slim hickory saplings used to tie together logs in a raft, they earned but three favor upon the rough neighborhood swains, these boys set out to avenge themselves. One night they caught Adolph's mule, but not knowing what to do with him, they tied him to Pegleg's outside door latch, and then made a noise to attract the old man. Pegleg got up and opened the door. But since it opened inward the bridle reins on the mule tightened. The glaring firelight from Peg's hearth caused the mule to start pulling backwards, and the man was caught in that door, securely held by the stubborn animal. The loud calls for help induced the jokers to reveal themselves and free him.

Today, nearly three quarters of a century later, Dad laughs at that episode in his life as if it were yesterday. "It is good for a man to laugh," he says.

The Cyrus family traded at Hatton and Warren's general store

Patton's mill. "I recollect well old John and Silas Patton. They were good millers. We would take four barrels of wheat at a time, and it would be made into white flour. There was the flour, the bran, and the shorts. People came from miles and miles to that mill. Some had oxen. Some had mules. Some spent two days on the trip with their wheat and flour. Some came from 50 miles away."

"This wheat we threshed ourselves," John Henry recalled, "We set the threshing machine up and it had to have six mules to work it. When I was a boy we had to tramp it out with horses or cattle. When it was all tramped out on the floor of the wheat house we would gather it up in sheets and let the wind blow the chaff away."

He told of when the first train came through that section. Farmers came from miles around to see it.

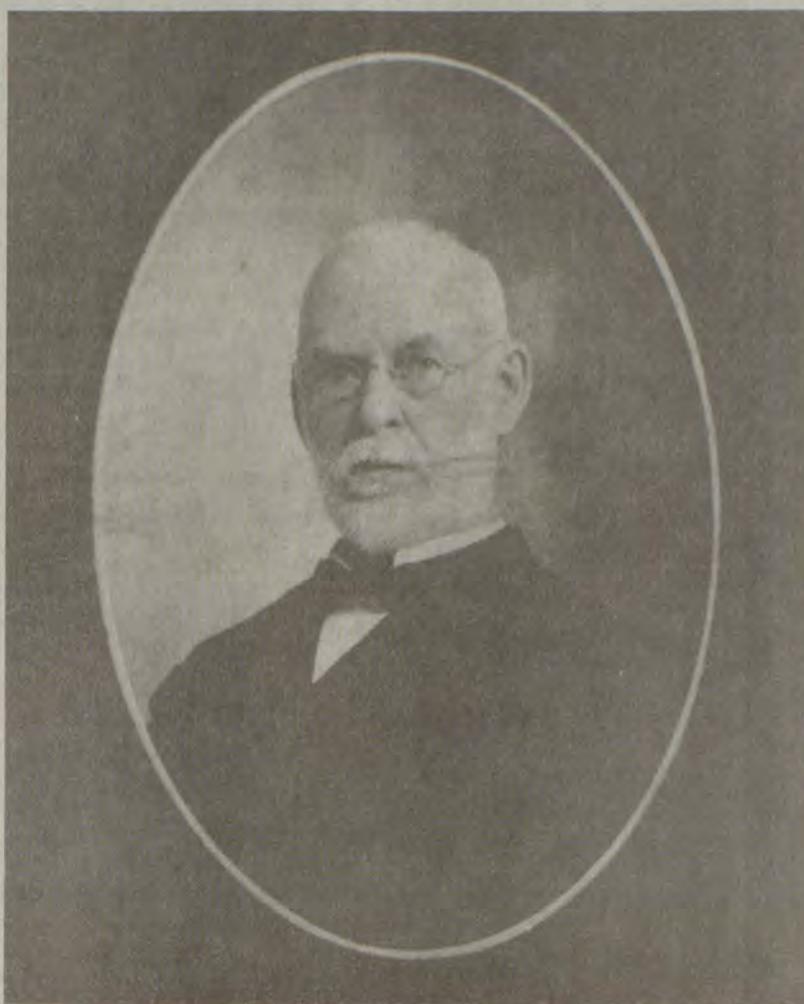

To Uncle Billy Johnson it was comparable to death and judgment. Billy told his neighbors, who had missed the event, "It went by so darned fast I couldn't count the spokes in the wheel." (sic)

John Henry worked on the railroad for five years as a section hand, beating ballast and replacing ties. Now that he was earning a good living he married Emma Herald who gave him three children. This was the beginning of a marital adventure that ultimately brought him six wives, five of whom he outlived. He jokes about his marriages. "Some of these women died but I never starved 'em to death." He has two children by his present wife, the former Myrtle Allen of Pike County.

There were robbers in Canterbury's boyhood whose accounts would thrill any of today's youngsters. News traveled fast the day after Frank James and his crew held up the Huntington bank. And the posses beat the forests and roads trying to pick up their trail. John Henry and several other boys were passing over Buckhorn Hill from Gragston Creek to Queens Creek. There, by the side of the road, they began to pick up the coins thrown away by the fleeing outlaws. "There were pennies, nickles, and dimes, handfuls of 'em. Boy, we thought we were rich!"

When he reached adulthood, John Henry would go to Catlettsburg with wheat ground at a crossing of slate 15 feet deep. "The depth was the same as the length of your pick handles. No mining machines in those days."

To get a 'cut' of coal, the slate had to be dug out, and then you could shoot it down." His mining career lasted 32 years, broken only by a trip or two to Ohio where he unloaded iron ore, and some time spent as a fireman on the old Twelve Pole railroad where he fired a "pusher". This was the engine used to push loaded trains up Dingus Hill and through Dingus Tunnel near Canterbury Station, which was named for his people. Here he stayed for two years.

In its earlier days the Wayne Court House was called Trout's Hill for John Trout, a well-to-do businessman and farmer. John Henry's most vivid recollection was the hanging of Laburn Walker at Trout's Hill. Walker killed his cousin Alonzo Ferguson. It seems that everyone in the county went to his hanging.

"Talk about a crowded town... The hour came to hang Walker and I watched Sheriff Fisher Bowen 'pull the trigger.' I'll never forget that day. When the trigger fell, Walker dropped and his tongue protruded out of his mouth. I always slept in a bed beside my uncle, but that night I had to sleep with him."

The Vinsons were the dominant political family of Wayne County in its earlier days. "I knew James and Bill Vinson and Wash O'Dell. All of them were well-to-do... People called this courthouse crowd the Vinson Ring."

The wags composed ditties on the political bosses like the one they sang on Wash O'Dell:

"My name is Washington O'Dell,
I have a brother Bill;
We belong to the Vinson crew,
Headquarters at Trout's Hill."

When asked to explain his longevity and excellent health, John Henry says: "Be contented and satisfied with what you have. I've seen men with their heads down over things that I wouldn't give a thought." His favorite advice: "Don't let little things bother you — don't let big things come up." He bows to the years in only one respect. He uses glasses to read. He is an avid reader of western stories with plenty of action. But he has no use for the modern sex novels.

April 15: It's closer than you think

by Cindy Yates
Editorial Assistant

Now is the winter of our discontent.—William Shakespeare

Winter is bittersweet. It brings us family, holidays, and the New Year.

The New Year brings Christmas bills, snow, then a tease of warmth in temperature that makes us realize - with spring comes tax time.

It used to be so easy, when you think about it. Before we were a nation, we were a colony that knew we would be taxed automatically on everything, eventually.

We rebelled, some of us died, but we got our freedom from this.

Or so we thought.

Now, we have the IRS, which is a tad more difficult to get around than a king. We got what we wanted - taxation with representation. The IRS knows we won't dump our money into a body of water on principle.

By the time you are reading this, you will have less than 50 days to file with the IRS.

There seems to be a pattern in the psyches of every taxpayer alive, you fall into one of two categories:

those that are organized and, by April 15, can say "What, me worry?"; and those last-minute individuals that, for whatever reason, simply cannot manage to get things together until the last second.

Possibly a third category can be found in many individuals, which are the rabid W-2 seekers that begin asking January 1 of each year "When do our tax forms come out?"

Some persons still haven't been able to get their W-2s or other data needed to file. By the middle of February, if this information has not

Maybe you have stocks or CDs that you may have cashed in, therefore you are confused as to how to properly prepare your return.

Help is available if you feel you need the assistance of a professional, some things you should not try at home.

Go for reputation."

Recent changes in the tax system have bogged down the returns, as well. Electronic filing, which is a great way to go, can be slower now than it will be in the future, since the 1997 changes are still being implemented by the IRS, as well as the processing of claims.

One interesting bit of information is for those that qualify for the earned income credit benefits. If you are found guilty of fraudulence, you lose the right to file for EIC for ten years. If you simply mess up somewhere along the line in the return on the EIC calculations, you may lose the right to file for EIC for two years. Mistakes do happen.

"The IRS and the state are reasonable, they will work with you," Williams said, in case of mistakes.

Whether you or someone else files your taxes, Williams says "be truthful, and be ready to substantiate your return," in case of an audit. He also recommends keeping all records for seven years.

Finally, calm down. If you are reading this and still haven't filed your return, shame on you. Williams has already been working up until 10 p.m. nightly. Apparently some of our fellow Floyd Countians are a few steps ahead of the rest of us.

April 15 is closer than you think.

Three Categories of Individuals Likely to be Audited

- Those in cash businesses
- Professionals
- Those that take large, unusual deductions

Are you suddenly on your own?

You're a full-time student with a part-time job and, suddenly taxes are no longer just something your parents have to do.

Filing income tax returns isn't just for those with full-time jobs. High school and college students with part-time jobs, taxable scholarships, or interest or dividends may have to file, too.

Even students who can be claimed as dependents on other people's tax returns should check the tax instructions. They will need to file a return if their income goes over a certain amount. Students who don't have enough income to file, but who had taxes withheld from their paychecks during the year, may want to get a refund.

The kinds of income students may have to pay tax on includes wages, tips, self-employment income, investment income (including interest on a bank account), and taxable scholarships and fellowships. When students begin working, they fill out a Form W-4, "Employee's Withholding Allowance Certificate," to help their employer figure the amount of taxes, if any, to withhold from their paychecks.

At the beginning of the new year, students with income over the limit that applies must file a tax return. Most students can use Form 1040EZ. It's the shortest, simplest form. But if their income includes more than $400 of taxable interest or any amount of dividends, students must also use Form 1040A. Or, if they had any self-employment income, they must use Form 1040.

Many students may be able to use the IRS TeleFile system to file returns over the phone. Those who are eligible for this program will get a special TeleFile tax booklet. Follow the instructions in it.

To find out for sure who should file, order Publication 501, Exemptions, Standard Deduction, and Filing Information. Call 1-800-829-3676.

Can you make your fair share a little less?

CFP, CPA

It is that time of year again. It is time to get out the checkbook and send Uncle Sam his "fair share." It is also time to spend a few minutes looking over your income tax return and see if there is anything you can do to make next year's "fair share" a little bit less.

But how? Where do you start? You could reduce your income, but few would want to take that approach. How about you just lower your taxable income and not your real income. If done properly, this approach can mean significantly lower taxes next year. If you are a business owner or self-employed, you may even be able to lower your taxes this year.

Start by simply looking over each line item on the tax return, beginning with the highest dollar amounts. For most people, this is their salary or self-employment income. Remember, you want to lower the amount you pay tax on, not the amount you actually earn.

The most effective and easy way to lower your taxable employment income is to participate in an employer's sponsored retirement plan. These plans can have many different names such as 401k, Profit Sharing, 403b, or deferred compensation. While there are differences, the fundamental elements are the same. You simply direct that a part of your pay be contributed, the fundamental elements are the same. You simply direct that a part of your pay be contributed to a retirement account set up for your benefit and get a tax write off equal to the amount contributed. For example, if your salary is $50,000 and you contribute 10 percent and $5,000 to a 401k plan, you are only going to pay tax on $45,000. When you consider federal and state income taxes, this simple technique could lower your tax bill by a couple thousand dollars.

If you are a self-employed business owner or professional, making annual contributions business owner or professional, making annual contributions to a self-employed retirement plan may be the most effective way to lower your income taxes year in and year out. With maximum annual contribution rates of 15 percent to 25 percent, it is easy to see how effective these plans are in reducing taxes for small business owners, doctors, attorneys and other self-employed individuals. Additionally, all earnings on retirement accounts are tax deferred, resulting in much faster compound growth.

It is not necessarily too late to set up and contribute to a plan for 1998. If you do not have a plan already in place, you may want to consider a Simplified Employee Pension or SEP. Contributions are allowed right up until the time you file your tax return. SEP's are ideal for the same rigid ERISA requirements as other qualified plans.

If a company plan is not available, traditional IRA's provide some tax relief. IRA

The most effective and easy way to lower your taxable income is to participate in an employer-sponsored retirement plan.

Taxpayer Relief Act

What's in it for you?

(NAPS)—The Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997 provides relief on your tax bill, but complex codes mean little relief when it comes to preparing to file your return. To help you better understand how the new laws impact you for 1998 and beyond, the tax professionals at H&R Block have developed the following summary of changes to five major tax categories.

Individual Retirement Accounts

Beginning January 1, 1998, you can invest in a new IRA that features no tax deductions for contributions but tax-free withdrawals of principal and earnings. Also, IRA investment options are broadened. A spouse's IRA deduction is not affected by the other spouse's participation in a retirement plan. For 1998, the income caps for deductions rise to $60,000 on a joint tax return ($40,000 single). Cap increases continue for several years until reaching $100,000 for joint filers ($60,000 single).

Home Sales

You can now claim the maximum exclusion on the sale of a home every two years. However, the exclusion is subject to complicated rules based on your filing status, years of ownership and residency, and unforeseen circumstances, such as changes in health or place of employment.

Education

A credit of up to $1,500 a year per person will be available for the first two years of post-secondary expenses. Another credit of up to $1,000 per year per return is available for expenses paid after June 30, 1998. Special rules apply to both credits. Other changes include an above-the-line deduction for interest on certain education loans, an exception to the early withdrawal penalty for IRA distributions used for higher education expenses, and the availability of an IRA earmarked for education purposes.

Capital Gains

To receive long-term treatment, capital assets sold after July 28, 1997, must be held for more than 18 months. The prior holding requirement was more than 12 months. You will benefit from much lower rates if you hold assets more than five years. Assets purchased after December 31, 2000, and owned more than five years will be taxed at a maximum of 18 percent. People in the 16 percent tax bracket will pay a maximum rate of 8 percent starting January 1, 2001, on the sale of an asset held longer than five years, regardless of when it was acquired.

Child Tax Credit

A credit of up to $400 per child under 17 in 1998, and a credit of up to $500 per child under 17 beginning in 1999. This credit is not automatic, but rather tied to the number of children you have, your economic status and other tax credits for which you have applied. It is allowed in addition to the exemption amount for each dependent child. The benefits phase out at $110,000 of adjusted gross income on a joint return ($75,000 single).

For more information on the new tax laws, visit H&R Block on the world wide web at www.hrbblock.com or call your local H&R Block office today.

Charitable contributions made tax-smart

WHAT YOU CAN DEDUCT

As long as you itemize on your tax return, you may deduct gifts to religious or charitable organizations, such as churches and synagogues and groups like the Boy Scouts, Red Cross, and YM/YWCA.

You also may deduct contributions made to scientific, literary, and educational organizations, as well as to organizations devoted to the prevention of cruelty to children or animals or those that foster amateur sports competitions.

Deductible gifts to charity can take many forms. You can deduct cash contributions equal to 50 percent of your adjusted gross income (AGI), and any excess contributions can be carried forward for up to five years. You also can make donations of property - from used clothing, to furniture, to computer equipment - and earn tax deductions. When you donate property, your deduction is generally equal to the fair market value of the property at the time you give it, not its original cost.

To make the most of your charitable contributions, consider donating appreciated capital gains property that you've owned for more than 18-months, such as shares of stock or a mutual fund. When you donate long-term property that has appreciated in value, you generally earn a deduction for the property's fair market value and never have to pay capital gains tax on its appreciation. Contributions of appreciated capital gains property are generally limited to 30 percent of your adjusted gross income.

WHAT YOU CANNOT DEDUCT

Generally, gifts to individuals are not deductible. You also cannot claim a deduction for political contributions, gifts to labor unions, donations to homeowners associations, or gifts used for tuition. Payments made partly as a contribution and partly in consideration for goods or services furnished by the donor by the charity - referred to as quid pro quo contributions - are not fully deductible.

For example, if you buy a $100 ticket to a charity concert performance and the equivalent ticket normally costs $40, you may deduct only $60.

If you choose not to attend the event and return the ticket to the charity to be resold, however, you may deduct the full $100.

WHEN TO MAKE YOUR DEDUCTIBLE CONTRIBUTIONS

To qualify for a deduction in a given tax year, you must make your gift by December 31. That includes checks or properly endorsed stock certificates mailed by New Year's Eve or a gift charged to a bank credit card by that day.

DOCUMENTING YOUR CONTRIBUTION

Canceled checks are sufficient documentation for cash donations under $250, but you'll need more proof of your generosity if you donate $250 or more. The rules require that you have a receipt, letter or other statement from the charitable organization listing the amount of the cash donation, or for contributed property, a description of the property donated. In addition, the receipt must state whether or not the charity provided any goods or services in exchange for the cash or property. Where a charitable organization provides goods or services in exchange for contributions over $75, the organization must provide the donor with a good-faith estimate of the value of the goods or services provided.

For non-cash contributions over $500, you must complete Form 8283 and attach it to your tax return. If the non-cash contribution exceeds $5,000 ($10,000 for gifts of closely held stock), you also may have to obtain and attach a written appraisal. A summary of the appraisal should be attached to the tax return to substantiate the deduction. (Additional requirements apply to contributions of art if you are claiming a deduction of $20,000 or more.) There is no appraisal requirement for publicly traded securities for which a market quote is readily available on an established stock exchange.

CPAs recommend that you make sure that you have adequate receipts and other documentation for your charitable gifts. Doing so will make the preparation of your tax return a little easier next year and give you peace of mind in knowing that should you be audited, your records are in order.

Taxpayer Bill of Rights

(IRS) — In 1996, a second Taxpayer Bill of Rights increased the protection of taxpayer rights in complying with the tax laws and in dealing with the IRS. It also established the Office of the Taxpayer Advocate, who has broader authority to take any action permitted by law to help taxpayers who would otherwise suffer a significant hardship due to how the IRS is administering the tax laws.

In any dealing with the IRS, people are entitled to fair treatment by IRS employees, privacy, representation and the right to appeal an IRS examiner's findings. If their problems are not solved through normal IRS channels, people can get special help through the Problem Resolution Office. Want more information? Call 1-800-829-3676 for Publication 1, Your Rights As a Taxpayer (or Spanish-language Publication 1SP, Derechos del Contribuyente). Another taxpayer right has been strengthened as a result of the Taxpayer Browsing Protection Act. People have the right to confidentiality of their tax information. It is now a misdemeanor for employees and contractors of federal and state governments to willfully inspect another person's tax records without authorization. The IRS will notify any taxpayer whose records were illegally inspected when a person is criminally charged for the browsing.

Congress opens the doors to home-office deductions

There's some good news and some bad news about the home-office deduction. The good news is that as a result of the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, taxpayers who use their home offices for management or administrative purposes may eventually qualify for a deduction, as long as they have no other fixed office location to substantially conduct those activities. The bad news is that this new rule doesn't go into effect until 1999. So, for now, the Kentucky Society of CPAs points out that individuals working from a home office need to take the time to understand the current laws if they want to keep out of trouble with the Internal Revenue Service (IRS).

EXCLUSIVE USE AND REGULAR BASIS TEST

Currently, your ability to claim a home-office deduction is, with two exceptions (i.e. inventory storage and day care), contingent upon your using an area in your home exclusively and regularly as your principal place of business. That means that your office can't double as the den or playroom when you're not using it. To meet this requirement, it's wisest if a separate room in your home is dedicated to your work activity — whether it's a sun room, basement office or bedroom sitting room. The point is, you shouldn't use the room for any other activity.

You also may deduct certain expenses of operating a separate structure not attached to your home if you use it regularly and exclusively for your trade or business. Keep in mind that although you must use the office regularly, and exclusively for your business, you still can work part-time and claim the deduction. Moreover, if you are an employee who uses the office regularly and exclusively for the business of your employer, you may qualify for the deduction only if working from your home office is for the convenience of your employer and not just helpful in your job.

THE PRINCIPAL PLACE OF BUSINESS TEST

The regular and exclusive tests remain the same under the new tax law. However, another rule currently in effect that will change with the advent of the new law is the principal place of business test. Currently, to meet this definition, your office must be the place where you spend a substantial number of your working hours and most of your business income must be attributable to your activities there or a place to meet with clients or customers.

Under this rule, sales people and consultants who meet with clients outside the home but do all of their administrative work in a home office are not eligible to claim the deduction, even if they have no other fixed office location. In a landmark Supreme Court case, for example, an anesthesiologist who worked in several different hospitals but prepared patient reports and other paperwork in a home office was denied a deduction. Currently — and remember these rules are in effect for another year — if the activities of your home office are not as central in producing revenue as those conducted elsewhere, a home-office deduction will not be allowed.

THE NEW TAX LAW

The principal place of business rule will change for tax years beginning after December 31, 1998, opening the door for more people to claim the deduction. As of that date, a home office may qualify as a principal place of business as long as it is used to conduct administrative or management activities. So, for example, the physician who does his or her paperwork in a home office would qualify for the deduction. In addition, to claim the deduction, you also will have to show that there is no other location where you conduct substantial administrative or management activities. You will still have to meet the exclusive use and regular basis tests.

ESTIMATING THE DEDUCTION

The new tax law does not change how you calculate the amount of the home-office deduction. First, you figure the percentage of your home used for business (i.e., compare the square feet of your office space to the total square feet in your home). Then, you apply this percentage to the total of each qualified expense. Generally, you may deduct a percentage of your real estate taxes, mortgage interest, utilities, home insurance premiums, depreciation on your home, and even some repairs. For self-employed individuals, the home-office deduction cannot exceed the income derived from the use of the home office. Disallowed expenses due to the net income limitation may be carried to subsequent years and treated as home-office expenses in a later year.

Employee home-office deductions are considered miscellaneous expenses and are deductible to the extent that they, along with other miscellaneous expenses, exceed two percent of your adjusted gross income (AGI). Phase-out rules apply to employee deductions as they do to all itemized deductions. The Kentucky Society of CPAs emphasizes that the best way to guarantee your deduction under the tax law is to have the documentation to back it up.

Understanding capital gains...A taxing exercise

The lowering of the capital gains tax rate from 28 percent to 20 percent for most taxpayers has investors all over the country reviewing their portfolios. For those individuals who are scrambling to make year-end tax moves, the Kentucky Society of CPAs provides an overview of the capital gains tax and some suggestions on minimizing its effect.

There is also a ten-percent maximum rate on capital gains for those taxpayers whose tax on such gains would otherwise be 15 percent. This applies to long-term gains after May 7. Finally, the maximum rate of 28 percent still remains on long-term gains of collectibles such as art, coins, stamps, antiques, and gems.

paid plus any expenses associated with buying, holding, and selling the property. If the property was a gift to you, your basis generally will be the same as the donor's basis (called a carryover basis). If you inherited the property, your basis is the fair market value of the property at the time of the owner's death (unless the executor selects another method of valuation). Capital gains are reported on Schedule D.

Understanding the Nanny Tax: Who owes what to whom

If you have a housekeeper, maid, nanny, or even a babysitter who qualifies as your employee, you have certain tax responsibilities. As an employer, you may be liable for Social Security and Medicare taxes, as well as federal and state unemployment taxes when the wages you pay your employee exceed certain amounts. If you're confused about how much you owe and to whom, the Kentucky Society of CPAs offers the following information to answer your questions.

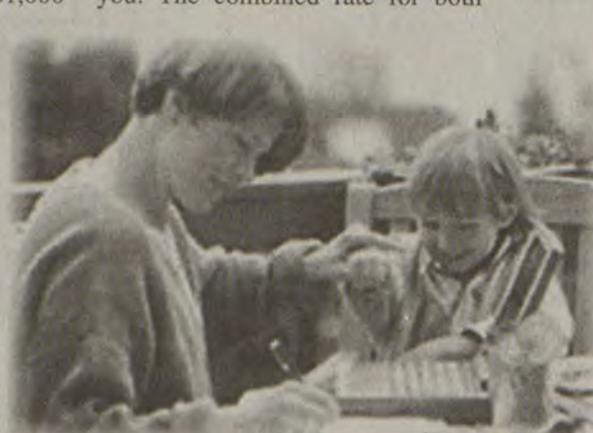

FUTA TAXES

If you pay cash wages of $1,000 or more in a calendar quarter, you are liable for paying federal unemployment tax (FUTA). This tax is put into a fund used to help pay unemployment benefits for people who lose their jobs. Unlike FICA, this tax is paid entirely by the employer. The rate is 6.2 percent of the first $7,000 of wages paid to each employee.

In addition to FUTA, many states that impose unemployment taxes on household employees require quarterly payments. You should contact your state employment office to determine your state tax obligations.

FEDERAL INCOME TAX

You are not required to withhold federal income tax from your employee's paycheck. If your household employee asks you to withhold income tax and you agree, you will need to have your employee complete Form W-4, Employee Withholding Allowance Certificate. Use the tax tables in IRS Publication 15 (Circular F) to determine the correct amount to withhold.

Nannies must pay taxes, too, but it's up to the nannies' employers to withhold the taxes.

you and your employee is 15.3 percent of the employee's taxable income. You deduct the employee's half (7.65 percent) from his or her paycheck. You also have the option of paying the employee's portion yourself, in which case the amount you pay represents taxable wages to the employee and must be included on the employee's Form W-2.

The wages you pay to household workers under the age of 18 are not subject to FICA taxes (unless that work is their principal occupation), nor are amounts paid for household work provided by your spouse or your children under age 21.

In addition to understanding "who owes what," employers of household workers must also know "to whom" they report and pay employment taxes. Back in 1994, Congress revised the reporting rules for household employment taxes to ease the reporting burden for household employers. Under this law, the taxes you owe on household employees are reported on your federal income tax return. Schedule H, Household Employment Taxes, is used for this purpose.

To file Schedule H, you must have an Employer Identification Number (EIN). You can get an EIN by contacting your local Social Security Office and requesting an SS-4 form.

As an employer, you are also required to complete Form W-2 to report employee wages and withholding for the preceding year. You must supply your employee with his or her W-2 Form by January 31 of the year following the year of payment. You then report this information to the Social Security Administration by sending them Copy A of Form W-2 by the last day in February. The employee and IRS also should get a copy of Form W-2. If you have more than one worker, you'll also need to send Form W-3, Transmittal of Wage and Tax Statements.

For 1997, you can report and pay the entire bill for employment taxes for household employees with your 1997 return, without incurring late payment or estimated tax penalties. However, beginning in 1998, employers of household help will be required to pay employment taxes as part of their estimated tax payments.

Just because the capital gains tax has dropped doesn't mean you should cash out of your investments. If you don't need the cash and aren't planning to reinvest the funds, hold on to those high performing stocks. Remember, a stock you bought for $10 a share may soar to $100 a share, but you don't owe a penny in taxes until you sell the stock. If you don't sell an asset, your beneficiaries can inherit it without ever owing taxes on the appreciation that occurred while you owned it. Sell off losers to offset your gains — If you picked a real winner a few years ago and sold it this year, consider unloading one or more of the losers in your portfolio. You can use long-term losses to offset long-term gains, and reduce or eliminate the capital gains tax on your profit.

Give it away — Another way to avoid the capital gains tax is to give the property to charity. When you donate appreciated long-term property, you can deduct the full market value of the property at the time of the contribution and avoid capital gains tax on the appreciation.

CPAs advise that the capital gains tax is just one factor in tax planning. Be sure to consider your long-term financial goals when making any tax-related decisions.

Why companies choose leasing

Tax Deductible Lease Payments:

If a company purchases equipment, the IRS depreciation schedules require that most equipment be depreciated over seven years and in the first year the depreciation is limited to only six months. Therefore, the effective depreciation schedule is seven and one-half to eight years. With a properly structured lease, the lessee can write off the entire investment in a much shorter time period creating significant tax savings early in the life of the equipment. This appeals to profitable companies that have significant tax burdens.

Matching Cash Flow:

Since most investments in equipment involve capital budgeting of some type, whether formal or informal, leasing offers a way to match the revenue generation capabilities of the equipment to the cash outlay for the equipment. It also offers the ability to adjust payments to seasonal fluctuations in revenue generation.

Off Balance Sheet Financing:

Companies are constantly evaluating the proper mix of available financing components. When used in conjunction with debt and equity, leasing provides an avenue to reduce overall leverage which is important to suppliers, banks and other providers of credit.

Conservation of Bank Lines:

Typically, a business has only a few options for financing its growth of current assets. Depending upon the borrower's loan exposure and the bank's lending comfort level, leasing can be a way to reserve a company's borrowing capacity for financing inventory and accounts receivable.

Conservation of Working Capital:

the equipment up on a fixed asset schedule and keeping up with accumulated depreciation. It may also require recording capital gains or losses when the equipment is taken out of service.

Simplified Capital Expenditure:

Larger companies tend to have bureaucratic approval processes for capital expenditures. Because of this, many managers choose leasing because of its faster and easier approval process. Once the lease payment is included in the budget, it gets re-approved each year. This also explains why December can be a busy month for leasing as budget dollars not spent are often con-sument rather than lost.

Manufacturing Companies:

Because manufacturers are capital-intensive, they are prime candidates for leasing. Manufacturers include metal fabrication companies, wood products, cabinetry shops, machine shops, food processors, plastic injection molding and printing companies.

Distributors:

Distribution companies are currently going through significant changes. Many are changing and telephone systems. Historically, they have leased office equipment and furniture.

Medical practices also have leasing needs. Technology advances create a constant need to upgrade equipment.

Hospitals and Clinics:

Hospitals and clinics lease for the same reasons physicians and dentist lease equipment, office furniture and billing systems.

Contractors:

Contractors use all sorts of sorts of equipment. The most capital-intensive contractors include heavy highway construction, paving contractors, grading contractors, and commercial roofing contractors.

Retailers and Restaurants:

All retailers need display cases, stockroom shelving, and computer systems. Others need ovens, stoves, coolers and freezers. Point of sale technology continues to be in demand in this industry. Restaurants run the gamut from fast food to upscale dining.

Transportation Companies:

Trucking companies, local delivery services and health care patient transportation services all need leased vehicles that tend not to qualify for traditional automobile dealer leasing programs.

Municipalities:

These entities lease a lot of equipment because of certain budget constraints. Local school boards, water/sewer and electric authorities, and fire/police departments usually are lessees in addition to city and county governments.

Tax break for terminally ill

When President Clinton signed the "Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996" into law, it meant that individuals with cancer, heart disease, Alzheimer's disease and other chronic and life-threatening illnesses could receive the proceeds of "living benefits," such as viatical settlements—the sale of a life insurance policy for cash-free of any Federal income tax.

"This was an enormous victory for the millions of Americans—particularly the elderly—who are financially devastated by life-threatening and chronic illnesses," said John Banks, CEO of Viaticus, Inc., the nation's largest viatical settlement company, owned by the CNA Financial Corporation. "This step by Congress allowed a significantly larger group of people in need to benefit from this new financial option."

The "living benefits" provision, which was championed by Representative Jim Bunning (R-Kentucky), benefits two large groups of Americans—(1) those diagnosed with a life-threatening illness, such as cancer, heart disease, AIDS, Alzheimer's disease or Lou Gehrig's disease; and (2) those with certain chronic illnesses, many of whom are elderly.

Approximately two million Americans are diagnosed with a life-threatening illness each year. Many more suffer from severe chronic illnesses.

"I've been very involved with changing the tax code to allow people with terminal illnesses to sell their life insurance policies and receive the proceeds tax-free," said Representative Bunning. "The change will help those who are in the final stages of one of those dread diseases to live out their lives with dignity. By having tax-free access to their own funds, they will not have to worry about not having money for medical treatment, housing, and other necessities."

U.S. Representative Jerry Weller (R-Illinois), was also active in promoting the overall health insurance reform measure. He said the "living benefits" provision is an important component of the legislation.

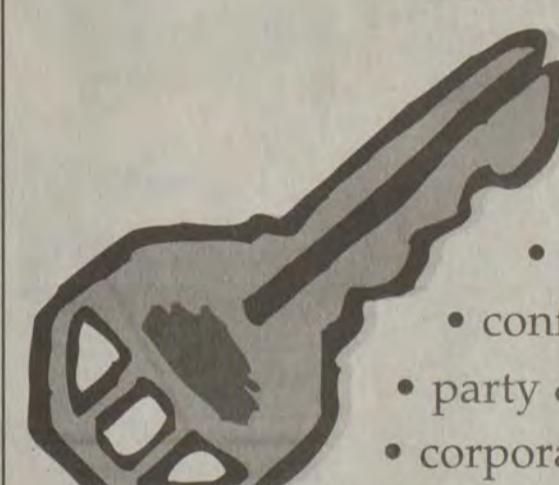

"For those who are struggling and need financial help now, our health reform bill offers them an opportunity to take advantage of their life insurance policy and receive payments in advance tax-free," Representative Weller said. "Many terminally ill people lose their ability to work and financially care for their families. This bill helps alleviate the burden and allows them to utilize their life insurance policy now, in a tax-free manner, when they truly need it."

(Contributed by J.R. Blackburn, with Dean Witter, Pikeville office)

Designed primarily to reduce the federal deficit and balance the budget, the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997 contains changes in tax law that could have a significant impact on your financial strategy now and in the years ahead. This historic legislation contains provisions that affect a variety of financial goals including: Capital gains tax rates; retirement savings, education funding, home sales, estate taxes and tax credits for many families with children.

How the act affects investors

Significant reductions in capital gains tax rates

The maximum rate for long-term capital gains from the sale of stocks, bonds and most other investments has been lowered from 28 percent to 20 percent. The law also creates a new ten percent capital gains rate for taxpayers in the 15 percent income tax bracket. The new 20 percent and ten percent rates are applicable to investments that have been held for longer than one year and sold after May 6, 1997, and before July 29, 1997. Investments sold after July 28, 1997, must have been held longer than 18 months in order to qualify for these new rates.

Beginning January 1, 1998, when an individual participated in an employer's sponsored retirement plan, income limits for fully deductible IRA contributions will gradually be increased over the next several years, ultimately doubling the current limits to $50,000 for single tax filers by 2005 and $80,000 for joint tax filers by 2007. (For 1998, income limits for making fully deductible contributions will be $30,000 for individuals and $50,000 for those filing jointly.) In addition, spouses of active participants in employer-sponsored retirement plans who are not covered by their own plans can make fully deductible IRA contributions, regardless of whether they are wage earners, if the couple's adjusted gross income is $150,000 or less in 1998. Also, IRA account holders will be able to make withdrawals without penalties before the age of 59 1/2 if the funds are used to purchase a first home or to pay expenses associated with higher education. (The home withdrawal has a lifetime maximum of $10,000.)

• Enhanced Traditional IRA. The act enhances the traditional IRA and creates two new IRA alternatives, the Roth IRA and the Education IRA.

New and enhanced Individual Retirement Accounts (IRAs)

• Roth IRA. Beginning January 1, 1998, a new type of IRA called the Roth IRA will be introduced. Eligible participants may make a contribution of up to $2,000 per year. All contributions will be non-deductible; however, earnings accumulate on a tax-deferred basis. Withdrawals will be tax-free if the account has been open for more than five years and the investor is at least age 59 1/2 is disabled or dies or the funds are used to fund a first-time home purchase ($10,000 lifetime maximum). Any distribution not meeting the five-year rule and any of the other four requirements will be taxable to the extent distributions exceed previous contributions. The ten percent premature distribution penalty will apply unless one of the exceptions to the penalty for distributions from traditional IRAs applies.

The adjusted gross income limits to determine whether investors are eligible for the Roth IRA begins at $95,000 for the single taxpayer and at $150,000 for those filing jointly. Those who income falls above the limits to be eligible for a Roth IRA or to deduct a traditional IRA contributions can still make non-deductible contributions to a traditional IRA.

Please note that eligible taxpayers can contribute to both types of IRA each year, but total contributions cannot exceed $2,000.

• Education IRA. Beginning January 1, 1998, a third IRA category, the Education IRA, will allow individuals who fall within certain income limits to contribute up to $500 per year per child to this account until the child reaches the age of 18. Like the Roth IRA, contributions will not be tax deductible, but the earnings accumulate on a tax-deferred basis, and there will be no taxes on withdrawals, provided the funds are used to pay for the child's qualified higher education expenses.

Consult your tax adviser and your investment professional

This legislation offers welcome tax relief and creates many new opportunities for individual investors. To help you make the most of the new tax environment, now is the time to turn to an investment professional who is well-versed in the new law and its implications. He or she can help tailor an investment strategy that suits your particular needs.

Until now, money received from viatical settlements and other such benefits have been subject to Federal income tax. Several states, such as California and New York, have already made such funds free of state income tax.

The viatical settlement industry has grown rapidly during the past few years, due to increasing demand for the new financial service and widespread awareness of its value among medical professionals, social workers, employee benefits professionals, and others.

Laboring for tax deductions: What employees need to know

Give yourself a tax break. The Kentucky Society of CPAs points out that many employees pay for business-related expenses out of their own pockets but often don't realize that this may entitle them to a tax deduction. Now is a good time to take a tally of your 1997 employment-related business expenses and determine if you qualify for a tax deduction.

First, it's important to understand how the tax law treats employee business expenses. These are generally considered miscellaneous expenses which are deductible to the extent that your total miscellaneous deductions exceed two percent of your adjusted gross income (AGI). Other miscellaneous expenses include costs associated with the production of income and fees for tax preparation.

If you had a 1997 AGI of $50,000, you need more than $1,000 of qualified miscellaneous expenses to claim a deduction on your tax return. Here's what you should include.

- Educational expenses — You may deduct educational expenses for schooling that either (1) maintains or improves the skills necessary for your job or (2) is required in order for you to retain your current employment. Deductible expenses include tuition and books.

- Work clothes and uniforms - The cost of clothes that are required for your job, but are not suitable for general wear away from work, such as uniforms, are typically deductible. You also may deduct the costs of cleaning such clothes.

- Publications and subscriptions - Unreimbursed amounts paid to obtain professional and industry journals, books, or subscriptions qualify as deductible miscellaneous expenses.

- Travel expenses—Unreimbursed travel expenses may be deducted in full if they were incurred during a business-related trip while traveling away from your office. Generally, you must have stayed overnight to claim the deduction. Deductible expenses include air, train, bus and taxi fares; automobile and other transportation expenses, lodging costs, and other ordinary and necessary expenses.

- Meals—You also may deduct 50 percent of your meal costs when you are traveling away from home on business. In addition, if you entertain clients or other business associates, you can deduct 50 percent of your meal costs, as long as you discussed business immediately before, during, or after the meal.

- Automobile expenses - There are two ways to calculate a deduction for automobile expenses. You may use the actual costs for expenses, such as gas, oil, insurance, repairs, maintenance, and depreciation, or you can use the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) standard mileage rate, which is 31.5 cents per mile for 1997.

You may also deduct the business portion of parking fees and tolls. Be aware, too, that if you use your car for both business and personal reasons, you must allocate your expenses between the two, and of course, have appropriate documentation to back up your claim.

- Conventions and seminars - If you attended a convention or seminar in your industry or on a topic directly related to your business and are not reimbursed by your employer, the cost of attending the program, including registration, travel, and 50 percent of meals, is deductible. However, if your trip was primarily for personal reasons, such as vacation, you may not deduct the cost of the travel.

If you find that by adding all of these expenses you're very close to the 2-percent threshold that qualifies you for a tax deduction, consider taking a long-postponed business trip or attending a seminar on an educational topic to boost your miscellaneous expenses for the year.

You should keep in mind, however, that to claim unreimbursed employee business expenses as deductions, they must be "ordinary and necessary" for your employer's business and directly related to that business.

Prepare now for next year's taxes

This time of year, most people would rather forget about taxes and tax returns altogether.

After going through the arduous process of collecting W-2s and 1099s, of filling out 1040s and Schedules A,B,C,D, and SE (among others), most taxpayers are relieved to close the books, much less look ahead to next April 15.

But, the fact is, now is the best time to plan ahead for next year's tax return. With this year's return fresh in mind, you'll be better able to look at ways to improve your record-keeping and payment systems.

Start by putting together a filing system

Here are some tips to make your job easier next spring:

- If you haven't already set up separate logs for your business travel, entertainment, and auto expenses.

- Keep track of tax deductible charitable contributions. Get a statement from the charitable organization verifying contributions worth over $500. You'll need a professional appraisal for any contributed items worth over $5,000.

- Set up files for non-reimbursed medical expenses, self-employed health insurance, and child care expenses.

Maximize current-year deductions

For example, if you're thinking of buying a house, remember that the "points" paid on a mortgage can be written off all at once. Consider using a Home Equity Loan to consolidate installment loans for which interest payments are not deductible.

Here's one last thought. A wise older man once said, "I look forward to paying taxes, because it means I'm making money." The secret is in keeping as much of what you make as possible. And good planning is the best way to do that.

The Roth IRA:Answers to Some of Your Most Frequently Asked Questions

by Edward Miller
Financial Consultant
Smith Barney, Inc.

All IRAs allow annual contributions and tax-deferred growth. However, complexities arise with respect to who can establish these accounts, as well as the tax implications of distributions. The Roth IRA, created by the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, has many investors asking about its potential tax and retirement planning benefits. Here are some answers to the most frequently asked questions.

What is the Roth IRA?

As a savings alternative to the Traditional IRA, the Roth IRA provides the opportunity to invest your after-tax dollars, benefits from tax-deferred growth and, most importantly, receive tax-free distributions at retirement. This IRA also gives investors greater flexibility to use their retirement assets to help fund intermediate to long-term goals, such as first-time home ownership and higher education, as well as a comfortable retirement.

Who is eligible to open a Roth IRA?

Eligibility to contribute to a Roth IRA depends solely upon your level of earned income or that of your spouse. If your adjusted gross income (AGI) is below $95,000 (single) or $150,000 (joint), you may make a full annual contribution to a Roth IRA of up to $2,000 or 100% of income, whichever is less. Partial contributions are permitted for singles whose AGI is between $95,000 and $110,000 and married couples whose AGI is between $150,000 and $160,000.

Two major pluses: There is no age limit on who can contribute to a Roth IRA, and participation in an employer-sponsored retirement plan has no impact on contributions to a Roth IRA.

Are contributions to a Roth IRA tax deductible?

No. All contributions to a Roth IRA are nondeductible, regardless of income.

How are distributions from a

Roth IRA taxed? One of the great benefits of a Roth IRA is that your funds are not tied up, since you may withdraw your contributions at any time without tax or penalty. Withdrawals of accumulated earnings on your Roth IRA contributions are tax-free and penalty-free if held for five years or more and any one of the following applies:

- over age 59.
- used for first-time home ownership ($10,000 lifetime limit) disability
- distributed to beneficiaries upon IRA holder's death

Ordinary income taxes are due when:

- one of the above situations occur, but the account is open less than five years
- used for qualified higher education expenses incurred by the IRA holder or an immediate family member
- used for medical expenses exceeding 7.5% of AGI
- used for health insurance after receiving unemployment compensation for more than 12 weeks

Ordinary income taxes and a 10% penalty are due when accumulated earnings are withdrawn for any other reason.

What happens when you convert a Traditional IRA to a Roth IRA?

Income and tax considerations arise when converting a current Traditional IRA to a Roth IRA. First, your AGI must be $100,000 or less (filing jointly or singly) to be eligible for a conversion. If you are married, you must file jointly. Second, the taxable amount of the converted funds (from earnings and deductible contributions) is subject only to ordinary income taxes upon conversion. The taxes for conversion made in 1998 will be spread over four years. Converted funds must remain in the Roth IRA for five years from the conversion to receive the favorable tax treatment on distributions.

Any distributions from a Roth Conversion IRA before the five-year period will be subject to a 10% penalty if under age 59.

contribution rules were modified recently and you may be eligible to make a larger contribution than in years past. Check with your advisor for details.

Another highly taxing item on your tax return may be investment income. Consisting of interest, dividends, and short term capital gains, investment income is usually taxed at your marginal or higher tax bracket. The result is that your investment earnings may actually be 40 percent less than you think. As a result of the incredible stock market returns of the last three years, many mutual fund investors are finding themselves with a lot of investment income resulting in increased taxes.

Those investors need to change the way those returns are generated. For example, I have a client that is invested in two mutual funds. In reviewing performance over the past year, we noted that each fund earned around 30 percent in 1997. A closer look revealed that most of the earnings of fund A were in the form of dividends, and short term capital gains, all of which are taxes at the client's highest marginal tax bracket of 40 percent. Fund B paid out very little in dividends and short term capital gains. It earned 30 percent because the underlying securities increased in value by 30 per-

Lady Rebs needs to stay focused at district

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

No team in the 58th District has dominated a district like the Allen Central Lady Rebels. For the past eight seasons, they have won six district titles and been runners-up the other two.

They lost to Betsy Layne in 1994 and fell to Prestonsburg in '96, both times by two points.

This year, first-year coach, Anthony Moore has guided the Lady Rebels to a perfect 6-0 conference mark and hopes to continue the school's tradition of appearing in the 15th Regional tournament next week.

With that in mind, Moore is not ready to let his ball club forget that playing a number four seed is not an automatic win. They must first go out and take care of business in game before playing game two.

The Lady Raiders will meet South Floyd in tonight's tournament opener, and the Lady Raiders could be a stronger foe even though Allen Central owns two easy victories over them.

This is a very, very talented basketball team that has played well in the final three weeks of the season, although they have lost two of their final three games. They put a scare in top-ranked Belfry, ran all over Sheldon Clark and gave Whitesburg all they wanted before losing.

Now it is tournament time. The second season is here and a time to forget what happened yesterday and take care of the business at hand.

To do that, the Lady Rebels will need to concentrate on the matter before them. They can not look ahead to the regional tournament.

When you start looking at this year's team, you will see some very familiar faces. Players who have been here many times over. Like seniors Misty Scott, Crystal Martin, Karen Wallen and Gina Hall. But, there are others who know the thrill of winning. Jessica Martin, Natalie Cooley, Jennifer Hopkins, Shanna Howell and the list goes on and on.

Of course, Hall is in her first year, choosing not to play her first three seasons. Cooley is lost for the tournament with a knee injury.

But this is a long bench and sitting almost down to the very end of it is a group of freshmen that will bring back memories of the Wiley-Moore era.

But the players get even younger than frosh when you consider the play of eighth-grader Ramanda Music. Music has started all season for the Lady Rebels, and is the team's leading rebounder. She is averaging close to 10 points per game.

The tandem of Scott, Martin and another Martin is what makes the Lady Rebels click. All three must be on their game. If they escape South Floyd they will have to contend with either Betsy Layne or Prestonsburg in the finals.

Jessica Martin is a real work horse around the basket and anywhere on the court. She is the kind of player a coach likes to have. Sometimes she starts other times she doesn't but the horn sounds for the final time, you know that Martin has played and played well. She is a strong rebounder. Just a hard worker on the boards. She can shoot the three's or take the ball to the basket. Good offensive rebounder.

Misty Scott runs the team at the point. She has been through it all and knows how to lead. And lead she must, because tomorrow's are for only those who win and Scott knows that.

Scott is a solid player and veteran of many basketball games. She can bury the three or slash to the basket. She has a pat on her famed leaner in the middle.

Crystal Martin has shown that old form she had as a freshman. She sat out her sophomore season and returned last year as a junior. Martin is quick and gives the opposition fits in working the base lines. She doesn't shoot too many treys but will pull up and hit the short jumper as well as lay the ball in. An excellent free-throw shooter and a top rebounder.

You have to love the play of Jennifer Hopkins. Hopkins is a "zone buster" by the way she shoots the treys. No doubt the team's top defensive player. Affectionately called "Hoppy," she doesn't hop around when she plays defense. She has a way to ignite a team and get them rolling.

First off the bench will be either Howell or Wallen. Wallen plays the forward positions while Hall relieves at the guard spot.

Wallen is a director on the court. She is one of the top rebounders for Allen Central. An occasionally scorer, Wallen likes to dish the ball off to the open person.

Howell is just a hard-nosed basketball player who doesn't know what it is to back down on the court. Her strengths are many and being able to score is one of them. Handles the ball well at the point or the two guard.

Gina Hall gives help in the middle and, as mentioned before, is only in her first year of basketball on the varsity at Allen Central. But what a contribution she has made this season. A strong rebounder and inside player.

Jennifer Brown has good size and plays down in the paint area. A good rebounder and inside scorer.

The rest of the bench is young, very young. But what talent they have. They are a coach's dream to have as young players and what a future for Allen Central girls' basketball.

Jennifer Risner can run the team and shoot the treys. A very knowledgeable player on the hardwood for a young one. She is already a solid defensive player.

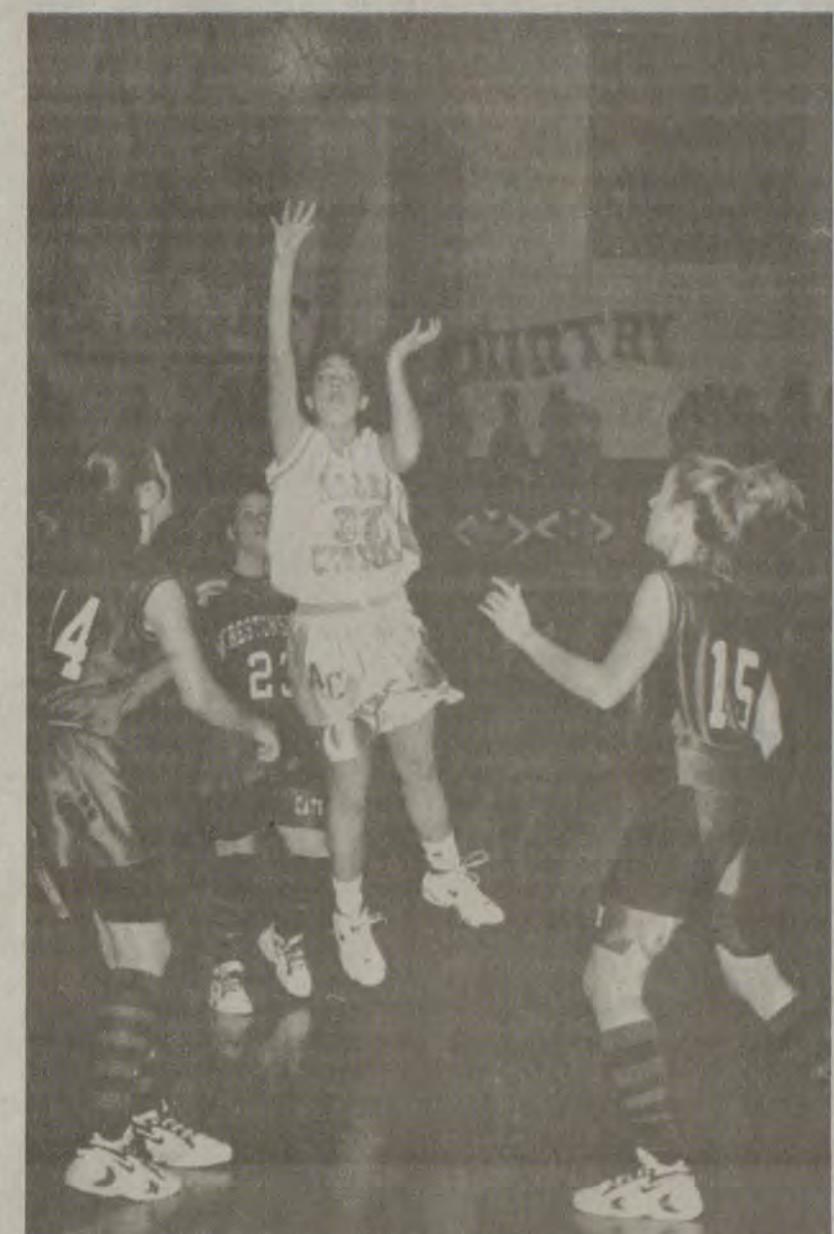

Shannon Sizemore gives the added height for the Lady Rebels, and can score right off the bench. Instant offense. A good shooter from 10-12 feet out. Works hard on the boards.

Barbara Prater is the type of player that, once she is in the groove, can destroy a defensive from three-point land. She has good speed and handles the basketball decently.

Rebecca Smith is smooth around the basket and has a soft touch. She is going to be a big time player at Allen Central.

Susan Scarberry has size, desire and determination and all three combined makes a good basketball player.

If there is an area the Lady Rebels need to shore up on that is cutting down on their turnovers. This is a good team and could go far in the regional tournament if they get past South Floyd.

Coach Martin has enjoyed '97-'98 season

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

The last time an Allen Central Rebel basketball team missed appearing in the 15th Regional Tournament was in 1996, when Betsy Layne and Prestonsburg represented the 58th District.

Since then Allen Central Coach Johnny Martin has always had a team present in the big show that will happen at Elkhorn City this year.

For the Rebels, South Floyd stands as the hurdle Allen Central must leap if they are to keep the streak intact. Allen Central will meet Henry Webb's Raiders in the second night of the tournament that tips off Wednesday night.

This has been a team that has fans wondering how the veteran coach keeps turning out winners. Comments such as "Coach Martin is a tournament coach, he always has his teams ready." Or how about, "If anyone can get anything out of a player, it's Coach Martin."

Allen Central, the number two seed in the tournament, has been a team that has relied on quickness and defense all season. They had to. The Rebels have lacked the height they've had in the past seasons.

One thing the Rebels have going for them is their outside shooting, and they have an abundance of that.

Senior Todd Howard leads the Rebels in scoring with 26. One point per game average. Howard can burn a team from the three-point arch as well. He has 74 three-point baskets and has improved his free-throw shooting to 90 percent in the last 10 games.

"Todd has had a heck of a career," said the Allen Central coach. "A lot of people around the state don't realize that his average is the second best in the school's history."

The best was carried by Thomas Jenkins, now with the Morehead State Eagles. Jenkins averaged 28 points a game as a junior at Allen Central.

For Allen Central to pave a way to the regional tournament, Howard must take the lead and do just that — lead. Of late, the Allen Central scorer has been the target of some pretty stiff defense as he has seen all kinds of defenses. However, only Prestonsburg's John Ortega has been able to slow the scorer.

Gary Hunter has turned up his game another notch and playing with the ability that everyone knew he had. Hunter seems to be more confident on the hardwood now, something Coach Martin said he lacked in the previous two seasons at Allen Central, "and still does."

"Gary has had a very good year for us," said Martin, "but he still is hesitant in taking some shots."

Hunter will challenge the inside game of any team and also, like Howard, can shoot the three's.

Edmond Slone, if he stays out of foul trouble, can dominate an inside game with his quickness and being left-handed seems to help. Slone, once on his game, likes the short jumpers, the quick moves to the basket and can hit the treys also.

No one has improved their play like Nick Samons. Samons has a complete game now, offensively, but may tire on defense some. But he is a solid point guard and runs the team as well as anyone. The biggest improvement has been in his outside scoring, where he can consistently hit the three-point arch. A very good play-maker.

Jesse Hall fills the power forward slot and fills it well. Hall gives Allen Central some rebounding power on the inside but he, like the other four, shoots well from the three-point circle.

The Allen Central bench has gotten deeper as the season progressed, although it is very, very young.

"I have a good group of freshmen this year," said the Rebel mentor. "If I just had some size to go with them."

Larry Mullins, a freshman, is one of the first to come off the pines and gives relief at the point guard position. But Mullins, gives Coach Martin another solid outside threat, despite his lack of size. He is an excellent ball handler and sees the court very well.

Mullins started the game against Leslie County and Sheldon Clark.

Rodney Scott, a freshman, spells the big men around the basket, and what lies ahead for this young man is only good things on the basketball court. He has good size, good hands and average speed, but he knows what to do with the basketball. He also got the start against both Leslie County and Sheldon Clark.

No one works harder when he arrives on the court than Brian Jones. Maybe he works a little too hard, finding himself in foul difficulty often. But he bangs the boards and moves the opposition around when on the court. He has improved his scoring and is now contributing offensively.

"Nathan has been playing good basketball for us," said Coach Martin.

The Allen Central coach is not certain if he will return to the former lineup or stay with the younger players.

"I haven't decided just yet," he said.

Not many teams in the region, outside of Prestonsburg and Paintsville, have been able to match up with the Rebels. Coach Martin believes if his team makes the regional tournament, they will do well.

"South Floyd is going to be a real test for us," he said. "They are playing better basketball. They beat Elkhorn City and gave Shelby Valley a good game until the second half."

OFF THE PINES

Allen Central has others on the bench who can contribute and Jeremy Hayes is another one of the talented freshmen at Allen Central. John Goble is as good an outside scorer that you will find in the county and will get his chance to show is ability.

Add Josh Howell, Jon Hall, David Twiss, Patrick Martin and Leslie Slone and you have a long bench, but very young.

Needs strong outing

Allen Central's Edmond Slone (10) has been a consistent scorer this season and he will need to continue his play as the Rebels open district tournament play Thursday night at Prestonsburg. (photo by Ed Taylor)

Playing fundamental basketball priority for Bobcats

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

When the 58th District basketball tips off tonight, the Betsy Layne Bobcats will carry the distinction of being the only team in the county to have played the Prestonsburg Blackcats, the number one seed, close.

Tonight, the two teams will tangle for round three in a 8 p.m. start pitting the one seed against the fourth seed.

Both times the two teams faced off in the regular season, Prestonsburg held an 18-point lead at halftime. Both times, in the second half, Betsy Layne found a way to shoot their way back into the game.

"At Prestonsburg, after trailing by 18 at the half, we cut the lead down to three with four minutes to play," said Betsy Layne coach Tim Rice. "They came up here and had us down 18 points and we came back and cut it to six points with two minutes to go."

Coach Rice says the season has gone much as expected but there have been disappointing moments as well as good ones.

"Before the season started we went over our schedule and I thought we would win," Rice said. "I thought if we won ten games and improved during the year, I thought that would be a pretty good accomplishment after playing three players who never played much varsity ball."

Coach Rice said with the district set to begin his team is still not where he expected it to be.

"We played better ball at the first of the year than I had anticipated," he said. "We took a lapse toward Christmas and the month of January to where we just dropped down to where, what I thought, as low as we could go."

But the Bobcats have bounced back in February and is gearing for a run at the district title game. Prestonsburg stands in the way.

"We charted the film on Prestonsburg and on the first shots we out shot them by 10 or 12 percent. But the second and third shots, they were getting, was the difference in the game. They would shoot and miss and Jarvis would rebound and put it back in."

Rice realizes his young team will face one of the region's best and has to play their best basketball to pull out a victory.

"They have so many weapons that you can't say, 'let them beat us from outside,' because if you do they will," he said. "If you stop their perimeter game, they will kill you on the inside."

what defense they try.

"They have five, six or seven good players," he said. "It is hard to match up with them either with a zone or man-to-man. We have played them as well as we can with the talent level we have. In the district tournament, though, you don't know."

Betsy Layne will rest their hopes on the shoulders of senior guard Craig Johnson. Johnson is the team's leading scorer and also leads the team in rebounding, averaging just over seven per game. But Johnson has been the target of some trick defenses over the season but Coach Rice says that is no surprise.

"We anticipated that. I talked with Craig at the first of the year about it," said Coach Rice. "I told him he would see a lot of box-and-one's. Of course every night a team plays us, their best defensive player guards him."

Rice said he felt that Johnson was the premiere perimeter player in the region with his uncanny way of draining the three-point shot.

While Johnson may be collecting his points, he is going to need help from some young players. One of those is Scott Collins, a sophomore, who hasn't had the season many had expected him to have. But Collins is capable of breaking loose and scoring a lot of points.

Center Neil Newsome will have to shoulder some game responsibility as well. Newsome can score inside and is one of the team's leading rebounders.

What remains a mystery is the scoring output of sophomore Adam Tackett. Fans knows he is a capable scorer but he hasn't demonstrated that this season. But when it comes tournament time, Tackett is liable to turn it up another notch.

When Coach Rice spoke of his team he mentioned their inconsistency. But he also contributed that to youth, being a young basketball team. One sophomore who can burn the nets from outside is Justin Bartley, but he has been one of those who has shown inconsistency.

There some promising players on the Betsy Layne bench and Michael Gross is one of those. A left hander, Gross can shoot the lights out from the arch. Gross is the type of player who may be a little too unselfish. He needs to look more for his shot.

Bradley Brooks, a sophomore, is a good one. A hard-nose player in the and around the basket. A good scorer from 10-12 feet out, something that is missing with most teams today.

Doug Kidd has seen much playing time of late and here is a sophomore who can score from the three-point circle. Good man off the bench.

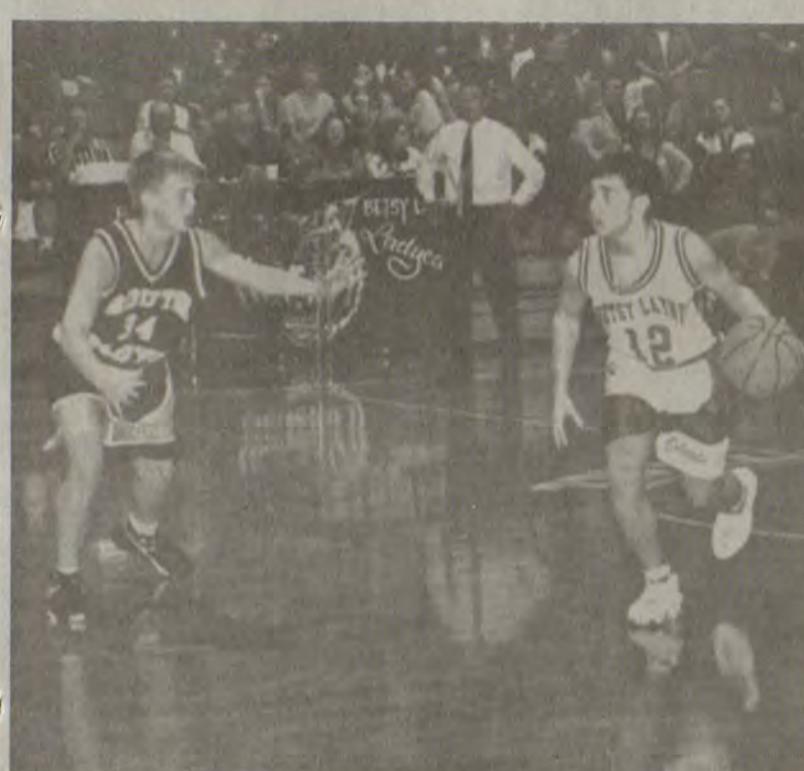

Byron Stapleton, Anthony Tackett, Dwayne Keathley and Kenneth Johnson give the Bobcats depth off the pines.

Rice said his team must play well and above all shoot the ball well.

Floor leader

Betsy Layne's Craig Johnson will have to be on his game tonight at Prestonsburg as the Bobcats meet Prestonsburg. Johnson is averaging over 20 points this season.

Newsome: Making big baskets essential for Lady Cats

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

Veteran Betsy Layne coach Bill Newsome has never had a losing season since he has coached at Betsy Layne High School. The Lady Cats have been one of the top success stories in the 15th Region and 58th District. But the Betsy Layne coach may be seeing the hand writing on the wall this year.

"We are on the verge of having our first losing season," he said, before his team faced Johnson Central last week. "As far as discipline goes, things have gone pretty well this year. I haven't had anyone quit the team. We haven't had any trouble."

But the Betsy Layne coach will tell you honestly that his team hasn't

"We haven't got as many wins and we haven't played as good as we wanted to," he said, "but we are not loaded with talent either. I'll just tell it like it is."

Betsy Layne faces Prestonsburg in Thursday night's first game of the 58th District tournament at Prestonsburg. But the Betsy Layne coach says the players are not down on themselves but believe they can win it.

"They have been talking about it in practice," said Newsome. "They are saying, 'Hey, we can beat Prestonsburg on Thursday night.' As long as we have them believing that, we can pull it off even though we are playing them on their home floor."

Prestonsburg claimed a 40-point win over Betsy Layne earlier in the season at the D.W. Howard Fieldhouse but had to hold on to win by three at home. Coach Newsome said his team had chances to win the game.

"A made basket here and a taking care of the ball late, and we could have own the game," he said. "We are still trying to fine tune our skills. Again, we are not loaded with an abundance of talent."

While the Lady Cats may not have the talent other teams have, according to their coach, still they have one of the top guards in the 15th Region in junior Jessica Clark.

Clark is a strong inside player but plays mostly on the outside. Why is she better inside? She takes the ball inside mostly and is hard to contain along the baselines. She has an excellent soft touch in close and hard to stop on the drive to the basket. She draws a lot of fouls and is an excellent free-throw shooter.

"Jessica, along with Amanda (Hall), is going to have to do it for us from the outside," said the Betsy Layne mentor. "Jessica has had a good season for us."

Clark is averaging close to 18 points per game and is dishing off assists at four a game. A good rebounder as well.

Hall runs the team at the point guard slot, although she is not a natural point guard.

"But she is the best we have out there," said Coach Newsome. "We don't have a true point guard, but Amanda does an adequate job for us."

Hall is the designated three-point shooter for the Lady Cats. She is quick and has good speed. A very good free-throw shooter.

"Both Jessica and Amanda are going to have to handle the ball and limited our turnovers to 10 or less against Prestonsburg," said Newsome.

Injuries have plagued the Lady Cats this season and Leslie Hopkins has been hurt of late. Rachael Thompson is listed as day-to-day in returning to the team.

"Hopefully, Rachel will be back," said Newsome. "She was supposed to get released Wednesday (today) and that is only one day before the tournament."

Leslie Hopkins hasn't been able to practice with Betsy Layne with a nagging injury. Her availability may be less than expected.

"Leslie is going to have to perform for us, if she gets back," said Newsome. "In practice she hasn't been able to go."

Hopkins is one of the "tall trio" that Betsy Layne has. Pounding the ball inside is very much part of the Betsy Layne offense.

"Heather Kidd has to come through for us," said Coach Newsome.

Kidd has been inconsistent this season and has lived in foul trouble. She is a strong rebounder, but is needed in the game more.

Sabrina Yates has had a strong last month of the season. As goes Clark and Yates so go the Lady Cats. Yates is dangerous around the paint area and gets a lot of old-fashioned three-point tries. A strong worker on the boards. She can score in the paint area.

Freshman Jenny Parsons has seen a lot of playing time and Coach Newsome said that she must be part of the offense against Prestonsburg.

"She has to perform good for us," he said. "She had a great game the other night against Prestonsburg. She played a great game."

Heather Hamilton will relieve at the guard spots and Coach Newsome said her contribution was vital.

"Heather has to come in and help us handle the ball when our girls get in foul trouble, and that is a lot, almost every game," he said.

Samantha Maynard is another that must contribute, according to the Betsy Layne coach.

"We have a good player in Denise Jones," said Newsome. "She is just a freshman but she has some confidence now and I have tried to show confidence in her all year. She tells me before every game, 'Coach, I'm ready!'"

Sheena Akers is one of the top reserves for the Lady Cats and could start at a lot of places. She rebounds well, scores and plays solid defense.

When it is district tournament time, anything can happen

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

The second season. It is here. We have played since December 1, 1997 and now we have closed one season and ready for the second one.

The 58th District Tournament is being played at Prestonsburg this year and the old gym (opened in 1957) has seen a lot of good games, and a lot of good players have dribbled the basketball on its hardwood.

This year's tournament may not be as exciting as in past years with coach Jack Pack's Prestonsburg Blackcats a heavy favorite to win the boys' division and coach Anthony Moore's Allen Central Lady Rebels carrying the favorites role in the girls' ranks.

But as anyone knows, when it comes tournament time, anything can happen. A team that is not expected to do much, can all of a sudden rise and knock off a favored team. It is possible.

That is what makes the tournament so special. Anything can happen! Coach Pack's team finished with an unblemished 6-0 record in the conference, winning the conference title for the second straight year. The Blackcats will be shooting for their third consecutive district crown.

This ball club is so balanced and can beat you so many ways. But the Blackcats fell at home to Sheldon Clark in closing out the season. They played a gruesome schedule and could have gotten a little tired at the end.

Allen Central, like the Prestonsburg boys, went 6-0 in the girls' conference but did not look like a dominating team in doing so. They have struggled with their defense, handling the press and free-throw shooting. But this team won when they had to and that is why they are the number one seed.

Coach Moore's ball club suffered a loss of one of their key players since

BOYS

Allen Central continues to be threat to Prestonsburg in unseating them for a district title. But the Rebels have had trouble in containing the big men of Prestonsburg in the first two games. Of course, Allen Central must get past a good South Floyd team in the opening game.

Betsy Layne is the first to tackle the Blackcats in an attempt to unseat them as district champions. The Bobcats are the only county teams to play the Blackcats close.

South Floyd has come on strong in the final three weeks of the season. Could be that Coach Henry Webb has the Raiders ready for a final charge.

GIRLS

Prestonsburg has impressed me over the last six weeks. Coach Jackie Day Crisp team has gotten their game together and, after putting in the pressing game, has been scoring a lot of points off of it.

Betsy Layne has had an up and down season, but Coach Bill Newsome feels his team may be peaking now, and if so, it couldn't have come at a better time.

South Floyd will have to meet Allen Central in a first-round game and that isn't good. But Coach John Martin is not ready to concede the game to the Lady Rebels. He has his team playing better basketball. The tournament is always exciting, and even though some things may be missing from this year's event, still Prestonsburg is a great place to watch a ball game.

I love covering the games and writing about the kids. This will make number 10 for me, and I have enjoyed them all. Good luck to all our county teams. I'll be there and see you at the regional tournaments.

P'burg has complete team in run for title

The Prestonsburg Blackcats will be shooting for their third straight 58th District championship when the tournament gets underway this coming Wednesday.

The Big Show will be staged at the Prestonsburg Fieldhouse amidst all the glamour that a district tournament could have. The newly-painted Fieldhouse will come alive with fans, students, players and coaches when it tips off tonight.

Coach Jackie Pack has made a mark since coming to Prestonsburg three seasons ago. He has put together team and especially if you are a first-year coach.

That was the scenario for Prestonsburg Lady Blackcat coach Jackie Day Crisp as he took the helm of the Prestonsburg program this year and had to learn his players, teams he would play against, and what defense to play.

"It took me this long to learn what we could play and what system to put in," said Crisp in an earlier season interview.

But now it is tournament time and the new coach could have had his team just where he wanted them if bad luck had not hit.

As of this writing, it was doubtful that Shelly Greathouse would play again this year after suffering an injury against Sheldon Clark three weeks ago. Greathouse was the team's leading scorer with a 17 points per game average.

Coach Crisp said the scoring guard was more than just points on the scoreboard.

"I don't know if we can handle the press without her in the game," he said. "Her being on the floor helped us handle it a lot easier."

But Coach Crisp and the rest of the Prestonsburg team knows that basketball is a team sport and he may have his team primed for a run at a district championship.

While the Lady Blackcats did fare well overall during the season, they did play well against county foes and finished second in the conference, good for a second seed in tonight's district tournament.

Prestonsburg will face the Lady Cats of Betsy Layne, a team that has had a down season. But the last time the two teams squared off, Prestonsburg struggled to a three-point win.

With Greathouse out, the scoring slack has been picked up sophomore guard Brandi Wells and freshman Amelia Conley. Jessi Burke has come off the bench, by choice, in the second half of the season and done an excellent job. Burke felt that she could contribute more by doing so.

Phase three: His defensive ability goes unrecognized by many. His shot-blocking scheme intimidates anyone who journeys into the lane. No big man runs the floor as well as Jarvis.

But getting the ball to Jarvis requires timely passing and John Ortega is one of the best around.

Ortega, who plays the point for the Blackcats, sees the court so well and guides the team.

Ortega has stepped up his game

offensively as well and that has made Prestonsburg a better team. He is looking for his shots in the last month of the season and it has shown. Ortega is the team's top defensive player.

Samons is Mr. Everything on the floor for Prestonsburg. His experience as a basketball player cannot be measured just in points only. Like Ortega, he can make the pinpoint passes to the middle, pull up and hit the short jumper, or drain a three-pointer. His quickness and first-step speed is uncanny at times. His ability to wade in and get a key rebound is not unusual.

Joe Campbell is an unsung hero for this ball club. He is just a junior, but quietly goes about his duty of getting the job done. No one plays as hard as he does once on the floor.

Lost in the shadows, to the fans, not the coach, of Jarvis, Samons and Ortega, when the game is on the line, Campbell is the man to look to.

A solid defensive player, something he has improved on this year,

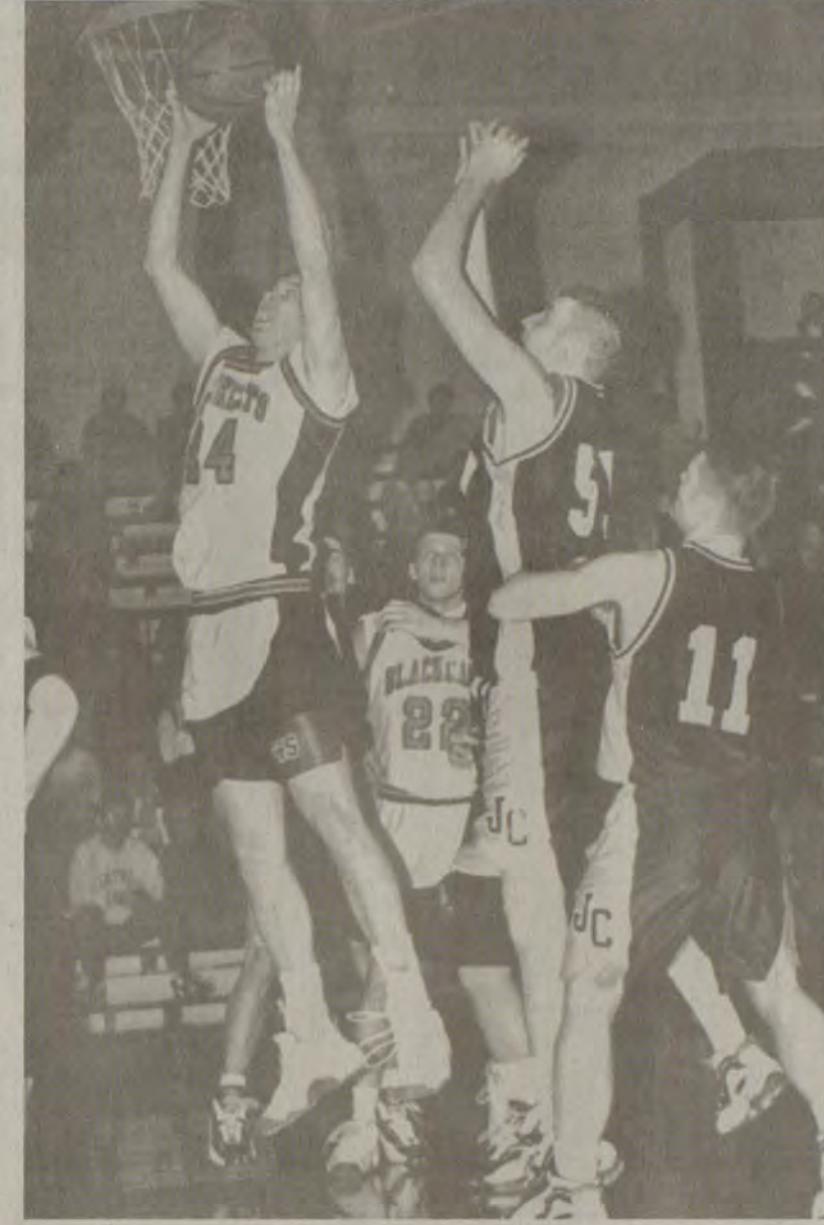

Campbell will step outside the circle and knock down a trey or he will shoot off the baseline and bury a long jumper. He is deceptively

Speed, speed and more speed. Then think of Crystal Sloane, who has also been a starter this season. Sloane is just quick. Her first step speed gives her an advantage over her defensive person. A good defensive player who knows how to use her speed well.

Kimi Nunnery is a very good basketball player. But she does not get the recognition of being a complete team player. She can score, yes. Rebound, yes. But she is always looking for the open person to get the ball to. She needs to look more for her shot.

Brooke Coleman, a freshman, and a sometime starter, is the spark plug for this club. Seems to just enjoy the game of basketball so much. She plays hard and is a solid outside threat from the arch. A good assist person and runs the court very well.

Sarah Mollett, as everyone knows, is a sophomore who transferred in at the start of the season. She gives Prestonsburg good size in the middle and can score. Needs to adjust more to the program but is going to be a good one.

Lady Raiders are playing better, but...

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

When it comes tournament time records of the regular season happenings don't really count except in fan appeal and seeding.

For the South Floyd Lady Raiders, finding a way to solve an old problem is the important thing right now. The problem needing solved are the Allen Central Lady Rebels.

New coach John Martin will hope to find a solution tonight when the two teams tip off the 58th District tournament at Prestonsburg in the very first game at 6:30 p.m.

There are some questions that must be asked.

Question: Can the Lady Raiders take care of the basketball against the Allen Central pressure defense?

Question: Can South Floyd shoot a good enough percentage from the field to score an upset of the number-one seed?

Question: Will the Lady Raiders find the free-throw line friendly, because Allen Central fouls a lot of their defense?

The answer to question number one will have to come from a more discipline half-court offense, once the ball arrives there. South Floyd has been a little lackadaisical on their passing around the perimeter this season. But in all fairness, they have shown a vast improvement under Coach Martin.

The answer to question number two will depend on how patient the Lady Raiders are on offense and the what kind of game Olivia Stewart and Misty Berger has. Shawna Hall shoots a high percentage inside, but can the Lady Raiders get the ball into the paint area against the 2-3 zone Allen Central will employ once they drop back into their half-court defense?

Question number three is an easy one because the Lady Raiders have improved from the free-throw line.

There will be other questions, but they will have to wait an answer at another time.

South Floyd has known what it is to win three games in a row, because they accomplished that this season by winning over Piarist, Magoffin County and Millard. The Lady Raiders, in spite of having a 6-18 record heading into the tournament, are playing with a lot more confidence of late.

Whether South Floyd can pull off a major upset of the top-ranked Lady Rebels is considered a "silly question" by some. But you have to remember anything can happen in tournament play. You have to remember a 3-21 Wheelwright girls' team pulled off the shocker of all shockers when they upset a favored McDowell team in a first round game, only to fall to Betsy Layne in 1988-89 district.

The improved play of the Lady Raiders could be contributed to the improvement shown in Martha Crawford, just a sophomore. Crawford is the team's three-point scorer and plays the point. For Crawford, she must concentrate while facing the zone of Allen Central's. Moving with the basketball will be very important.

Misty Berger, Olivia Stewart and Shawna Hall are the trio that must get the job done on the inside. Hall is very effective inside and likes the middle shot from 8-10 feet out.

Berger can kill a defense if she is hitting from the arch. She is a good scorer from outside and runs the court very well.

Stewart, a senior, has really stepped up her game lately. She is a solid offensive player and is a hard worker on the boards.

Margaret Morgan will be at one guard slot and doesn't look to score that much. She is a capable scorer from outside but is a team leader.

OFF THE PINES

Remember. This is a young team that last year had nine freshmen which means this year they are sophomores. That is good for the future of South Floyd girls' basketball. But the lack of experience on the bench could be costly. But there are some goods on there.

For instance, Angie Tackett, the tallest player on the team. Look for Tackett in early to fill the middle position. She is a strong rebounder, but hesitant to put the ball up to the basket.

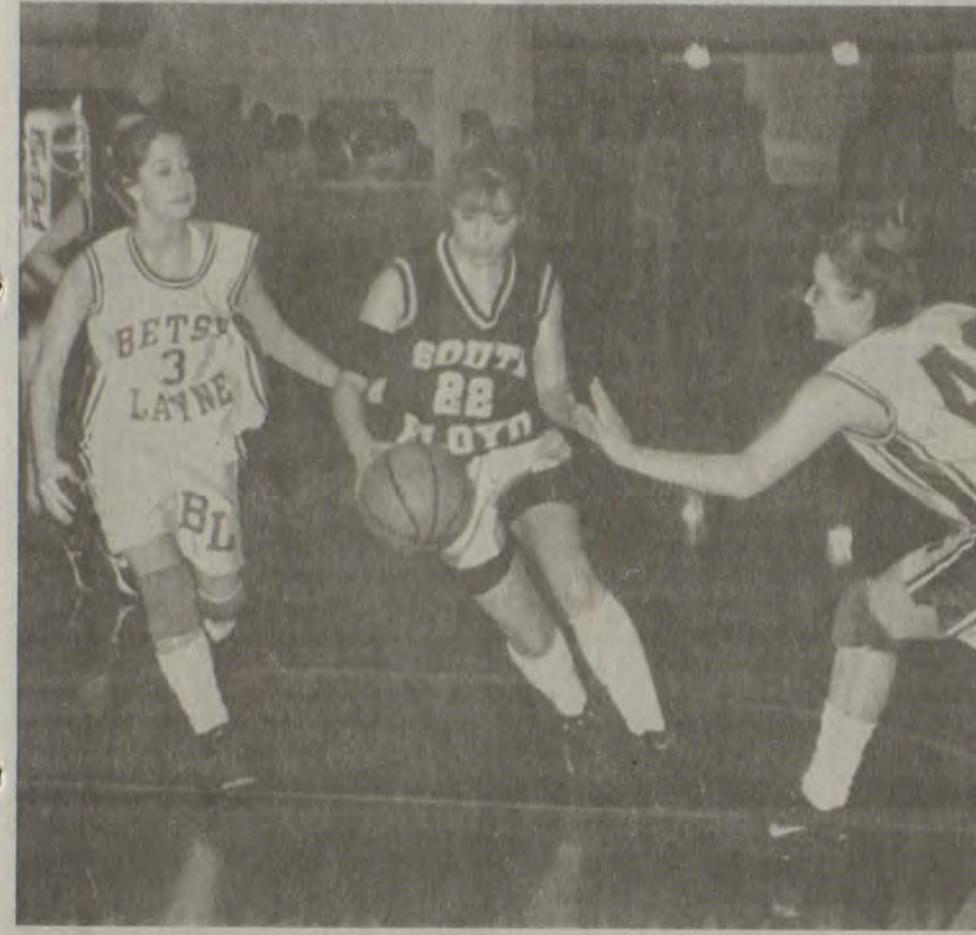

Monica Newsome, a freshman this year, is a very good offensive player who has seen a lot of playing time. A strong defensive player and outside scorer.

Lindsay Hall, a freshman, left-handed and just an outstanding athlete. Runs track and takes part on the cross-country team. She can run all day. Likes the short jumpers, and has been known to bury a trey now and then.

Minnie Tackett plays softball and is another of the many good athletes on this team. Strong inside player and handles the ball well.

New coach could be spark Raiders need

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

If the South Floyd Raiders' basketball team needs a spark for the 58th District tournament, which tips off tonight at

Raider scorer

Justin Holbrook (14) will need to put up shots like this Thursday night at Prestonsburg when the South Floyd Raiders meet Allen Central in a first-round game against Allen Central in the 58th District tournament.

Prestonsburg, then new head coach Henry Webb may just be the igniter.

The Raiders will meet number-two seed Allen Central in a 8 p.m. game on Thursday at the fieldhouse.

Allen Central owns two wins over the Raiders but this could be a different looking team that played the Rebels back on January 13, the first game that Webb coached as head man of the Raiders.

South Floyd looks to be playing with much more confidence in the final three weeks of the regular season. They owned a big win over Elkhorn City, the number one seed in the 60th District. They played well against Shelby Valley before losing to the Wildcats to close out their regular season.

While the Raiders lack the "luster player," they do have some very exciting and good players. This is a group of young men who plays as a team. They know each other and each other knows their limits.

The Raiders are a quick team which has some spring in their legs. They are a good rebounding team with a rather deep bench.

Justin Holbrook leads the team in scoring and brings more than just a double figure average (17 ppg). He is a leader on the floor and handles the basketball well. Holbrook can buried the trey or go hard to the basket.

Justin Paige, a junior, is a strong inside player and leads the team in rebounds. A solid inside/outside player, Paige also can hit the trey and likes the base lines.

Nick Compton may have a lot of football talent but he has basketball savvy as well. A strong leaper and plays hard all the time. Had been injured but is at 100 percent now. Compton is the type of player that can come out and dominate a game or seem to disappear at times.

Guard play is handled by a couple of good ones in Ryan Shannon and Coby Little. Little runs the team at the point and can not be left unattended or he will do more than light up your life; he will light up the scoreboard from the three-point arch.

Ryan Shannon plays the wing and don't let his size fool you. He can shoot the basketball from anywhere on the court and loves to take the ball to the basket.

If there is a success story for the Raiders it has to be the play of Timmy Butler who just has been amazing this year. Last year he dropped off from the team but came back this season with a new attitude and it has shown.

Butler is first to come off the Raider bench and many wonder why he isn't starting. But some players are just meant to come in from the pines and Butler is one of those.

His leaping ability is unmatched around the region, and we are mentioning the big timber he has had to face. A solid defensive player, Butler has developed his shot and can nail a trey with the best of them. He truly is a good success story.

To talk about determination and willingness to work hard, Ricky Ward is the two words. His work habit is second to none and he is very valuable to the Raiders. He has played of late and will give some quality minutes for Coach Webb during the district.

Nathan Reed has played all season and plays the middle for the Raiders. Reed is a strong rebounder and can take the short jumper in the middle. A good ball handler as well.

The rest of the Raider bench is young but has loads of talent. They are the talk of the region when you mention good young players. Landon Frazier gives help at the guard slots and has a nice touch from the outside.

Byron Hall is drawing the raves of many as a top notch sophomore. Contributing? Jimmy Stumbo has been doing that all season and is deceiving quick around the basket. Plays hard and fans like that in a player.

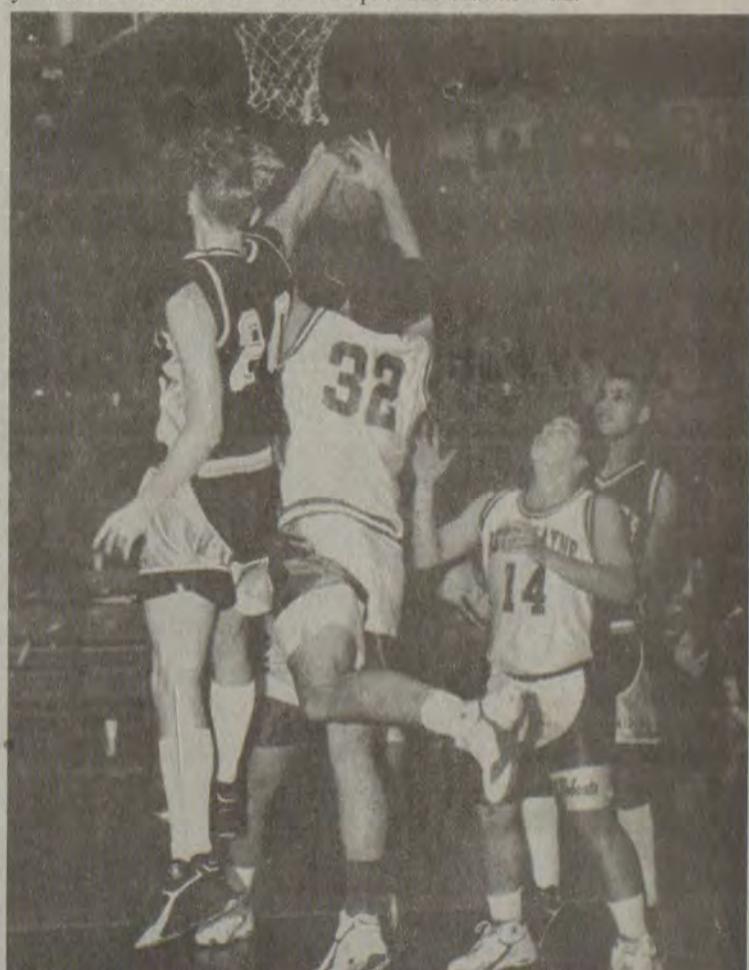

There are others: Kyle Tackett, P.J. Hall, and Ryan Manns. They all have contributed this season.

South Floyd will have to take care of the basketball against one of the better defensive teams in the region, Allen Central. The Raiders will have to shoot well from the floor and stop the running game of the Runnin' Rebels.

Coach Webb will have his team primed and if there is a need for some inspiration, he will provide that as well.

Good defender
South Floyd's Justin Paige (20) will help lead the Raiders into tournament play Thursday night when they take on the Allen Central Rebels. Paige is the team's second leading scorer. The Raiders dropped their two regular season games to the Rebels but closed out the regular season strong. (photo by Ed Taylor)
