FRANK'S IN PIKEVILLE

EXTENDS THANKS

To Prestonsburg And All of Floyd County

We have reached and passed the half-way mark of our first year in Pikeville. It was a pleasure indeed to receive the genuine welcome accorded us upon our arrival in Pikeville and the opening of our third shoe store last February 11. For the many, many courtesies and compliments paid to us during the past eight months, even though words cannot express our true appreciation, we offer our most sincere thanks. We shall continue to endeavor to return those courtesies whenever the occasion arises and to render the very best service and consideration possible.

FRANKS also operate shoe stores in Ashland, Ky., and Huntington, W. Va. Our buyer has the sole responsibility of selecting and buying Men's, Women's and Children's Shoes for the three stores. He attends all shoe shows in New York, Chicago and St. Louis and is assisted by fashion and factory representatives in making the best selections of styles for the season's demand. Many of these styles are shown in Vogue and other leading magazines. To back up this national advertising we must stand back of the quality in every pair of shoes we sell.

You are cordially invited to visit our store any time you are in Pikeville. We assure you the utmost in courtesy and fairness. When in Ashland visit our store on the corner of 14th street and Winchester avenue—and in Huntington our new store at 319 9th street—in the heart of downtown Huntington.

Quite by accident, a British physician, Dr. Leewenthal, discovered that a pain killer, Amidopyrine, was also a drug par excellence in the treatment of Measles. During National Employ the Physically Handicapped Week, October 5 to 11, and every week--remember ABILITY not disability COUNTS

"YOU START MONDAY---
I KNOW YOU'LL MAKE GOOD"

FACTS if you need workers

- ◆ Practically any job can be filled by some physically handicapped worker.
- ◆ Ability of the individual impaired job applicant—his skills, experience, and physical capacity must be weighed against the requirements of the specific job. BUT THIS IS TRUE IN THE PLACEMENT OF ANY INDIVIDUAL, not just an impaired person. THE ONE ESSENTIAL CONSIDERATION IS THAT THE NATURE OF THE IMPAIRMENT BE CLEARLY UNDERSTOOD.
- ◆ GET IN TOUCH WITH YOUR NEAREST STATE EMPLOYMENT SERVICE WHEN YOU HAVE JOBS TO FILL.

YOU bet he'll make good—thousands of physically handicapped persons are making good every day in all kinds of highly skilled and unskilled jobs in light and heavy industry. In fact, according to a new Department of Labor survey, conducted in cooperation with the Veterans Administration, physically handicapped persons when prepared for and properly placed in jobs, are as good or better workers than unimpaired persons. This survey shows physically impaired workers as a group (1) had fewer work injuries (2) no greater absenteeism (3) production was as good in most cases and better in many.

During NATIONAL EMPLOY THE PHYSICALLY HANDICAPPED WEEK, we are calling these facts to the attention of the manufacturer, the retailer, wholesaler, service manager—all employers and the general public so that all will remember when it comes to jobs—ABILITY not disability COUNTS.

- ◆ If you are severely handicapped, and do not have skills to sell an employer, you should visit the nearest local office of your State Employment Service and discuss your job problems. They will discuss available training opportunities with you and assist you in making a selection.

Aladdin never had a lamp like this...

INFRA-RED LAMPS... for a hundred farm purposes

THE wonder of an Infra-Red heat lamp is that the moment its infrared energy strikes a surface, it is transformed into penetrating heat. Among the countless uses of infra-red heat on a farm are: supplemental heat in poultry and livestock buildings; as a source of heat in brooders; as an aid to drying freshly painted or glued articles; for therapeutic heat application to farm animals.

USES FOR POULTRY—A Heat Lamp is excellent for both heat and light in poultry houses—furnishes adequate heat in coldest weather for hover-type chick brooders; as supplemental heat in laying houses—use it above feed troughs to keep wet mash from freezing—helps keep litter dry... FOR LIVESTOCK—A Heat Lamp hung above a sow discourages building of a nest and is ideal in maternity pens for quickly drying white-born pigs, lambs and calves, as it provides warmth away from the weight of the mother's body... it provides dry heat for therapeutic treatment of caked udders, animal wounds and muscle strain... IN THE TOOL SHED—In the farm shop it can be used to heat cold machinery or parts to thin cold, hardened oil or grease. It thaws frozen pipes and radiators, makes cold car and tractor motors start easier—contracts water pumps from freezing—helps in drying of freshly painted or glued surfaces... FOR PLANTS AND FLOWERS—For warming hotbeds—for ripening fruit which requires concentrated heat-to germinate seeds—for drying seeds and grain to protect plants from untimely frost.

CAUTION: If the heat lamps are close enough to wood, straw, or other material to char, they may cause fire. Care should be exercised in this connection.

The Brave Deserve Your Help

REGISTERED with the Kentucky Employment Service here and listed as active cases, hopeful of finding a gainful occupation and a chance of assuming the ordinary citizen's place in life, are 119 handicapped persons. Eighty-one are veterans.

These folks are of the gallant breed who want to earn a living, despite physical handicaps which have been known to daunt less hardy souls. Their thinking has not been twisted by the maiming blow of fate; they retain their pride and the spark of ambition that lifts humans above the soulless brute.

But they find jobs few, particularly in this section. Coal mine operators cannot employ a man who has lost an arm or a leg. There are other tasks that require agility of foot and the use of two hands as well as the guidance of an alert mind.

Then it is up to those other employers who have ordinary work for the crippled—work they can do as well as an athlete; or those who can put to work at a profit both to themselves and their employers those who are otherwise handicapped. There are, fortunately, such employers left.

It may be that this National Employment - the Physically Handicapped Week, October 5-11, will cause employers to stop consider their less fortunate fellow, take inventory of their needs and find a place for such as these.

How much more of inspiration there is in a man with empty sleeve bravely carrying on, working his way, than in the sorry spectacle of an able-bodied man loafing on a street-corner!

Whose the Blame?

CIRCUIT Judge R. Monroe Fields, of the Pike-Leitch district, recently drew the ire of an unknown number of persons scattered over the United States by sentencing thirteen-year-old Crawford Casebolt, of Pike county, to a life sentence at the Greendale reformatory school and the state reformatory at LaGrange.

Fortunately, John Young Brown, Lexington attorney, took an active interest in the boy's case, and so young Casebolt is now in the friendly environs of Parker Flannagan's Boys Town instead of on the "La-Grange second team" at Greendale.

Mr. Brown aptly describes this reform school that does not reform. Full credit belongs to Mr. Brown and Father Flannagan. But all evidence does not belong to Judge Fields. The circuit judge in the case was simply following the law. The boy had been given a juvenile hearing and, whatever the faults of that hearing, nobody had disagreed with him until Mr. Brown entered the case at the eleventh hour. The boy then was given trial by a jury. He was convicted and the jury, according to Kentucky law, fixed the sentence.

Judge Fields was powerless to grant probation, inasmuch as the severity of the penalty removed the case outside the jurisdiction of the probation law.

Kentucky law and the state's correctional system were almost wholly at fault. The jury, acting under the law, prescribed the penalty. The state has nothing better for a young law-breaker than Greendale. Kentucky has no real school for the errant young who need guidance rather than punishment, who need training for life rather than coaching in the hands of older criminals for a career in crime.

Whatever measure of blame the state deserves belongs to the elders of the boy and all other wayward boys and girls. Wherever a crime is committed by one so young, there is an older criminal in the background.

And tragically often that criminal is in the youngster's own home. Perhaps an unwitting criminal but guilty, nevertheless, of the awesome crime of permitting the ruin of a young life.

The laws of this state provide that a parent must have his or her child immunized against smallpox by the end of the first year of the life. This week, in this country, that law was being enforced.

But of the laws that might penalize a parent for criminal neglect of the life of his child other than from the physical angle little is said.

Section's Lumbering Problems Cited in Recent Report

Principal items of lumber production in Eastern Kentucky are cross-ties, specialty logs, staves, and mine props, said the annual report of the University of Kentucky's Agricultural Experiment Station, released in Lexington Monday.

The report also stated that forests occupy approximately 70 per cent of the land in Breckitt county and adjacent areas.

There are many problems to the production of lumber in the Eastern section of Kentucky and "returns to the owners of timber are limited," the report added.

Returns are meager, the station's specialists stated, because of the following reasons:

1. Small mills operating on sparse timber and on limited capital do not produce enough to encourage continuous or systematic marketing.

2. Many operators of processing equipment do not have the ability and machinery necessary to produce well-manufactured products.

3. The products offered, especially the lumber, do not sell well in competition with products from the large mills which still are cutting virgin timber in parts of Eastern Kentucky and competing regions.

"The position can be improved by better processing," the report said, "so as to increase the value of timber locally, by a less costly system of handling and marketing, and by educational work and continuous guidance which will co-ordinate logging and marketing with sound forestry practices and management."

ENROLLS AT UNION COLLEGE

Over 30 Improvements

Made at Ky. Elkhorn

In crediting the Kentucky Elkhorn Mining Company's 300-ton-a-day Columbia No. 2 mine with numerous recent safety advances, a federal coal mine inspector also praised an expanded coal-dust control program and several other precautionary measures in an official re-inspection report released by the Bureau of Mines. Fifty-six men were employed at the McDowell development when it was re-examined in August by Inspector Harold Wiley. More than 30 between-inspection improvements were listed by Inspector Wiley. They embraced generally adequate roof control, provision of suitable containers for carrying blasting materials, use of permissible explosives in an approved manner, face and roof tests before and after blasting, recording of daily fan inspections, erection of concrete-block stoppings between main intake and return airways, prompt closing of ventilating doors, purchase of two permissible flame-safety lamps, and pre-shift examination of stoppings for gas and other hazards. Also listed were audible warning devices for the locomotives, further precautions against electrical and mechanical hazards, plating of rock-dust at strategic points underground for fire-fighting purposes, 100 per cent washing of "hard" hats, maintenance of complete accident records, and a ban on using open-flame lights in the mine.

Although noting that some rock-dust had been distributed in the mine, Wiley recommended rock-dusting of several working entries to within 80 feet of the face as well as application of additional rock-dust in a number of other active areas. Use of water to alloy coal dust during cutting operations also was suggested.

As further aids in promoting safety, the inspector proposed maintenance of unobstructed clearance along the main haulage way, use of permissible trip lights and prohibition of certain risky haulage practices, correction of remaining electrical hazards, increased use of safety traps in free regions, direction of mine air to several working places, pressure-recording gauges and automatic stop-signals for the fans, universal wearing of safety-toe shoes, eye protection for workers exposed to flying particles, and prohibition of smoking underground.

"Beacon," New Name Of Koppers Coal

"Beacon Coal" has been selected as the trade name under which the coal produced and sold by Eastern Gas & Fuel Associates, Coal Division, hereafter will be known. It is announced by L. C. Campbell, vice-president and general manager, "Koppers Coal" the name under which the organization's coal has been sold for many years, will be changed.

"KENTUCKY IS MY HOME"

By THOMAS GRAHAM
(An address delivered before the Bar Association Meeting, Third District, Louisville, October 13)

Kentuckians in every way have had as fine a record as any state in the Union. The faith of the people in their state and in America has been their greatest asset.

During 1946, the state stood 11th on a per capita basis in the total purchases of U.S. Savings Bonds and more bonds were sold than in any other southern state except Virginia. Less bonds were redeemed by Kentuckians in 1946 than in any other southern state. This percentage record in finance speaks for itself as to the conservative character of our people who have always believed in the real value of life and live in respect for our constitutional form of government, both federal and state.

A true Kentuckian descends from individuals who believed in private risk-taking and initiative, who held that opportunity was more important than "security." We have often seen in recent years outsiders "leech" our state in various books and publications and figure us, percent-wise, last in everything. The character and integrity of our people is the real asset, and when the balance sheet is struck off, for instance, our admittedly financial difficulties.

Two weeks ago I had the pleasure of hearing Charles Kettering speak. He is one of our real Americans. His belief in the greatness and future of these United States is inspiring and inspiring in the eyes of so many "little men." This same faith should be shared by all of our citizens aspiring for the leadership of our Commonwealth.

We need local citizenship and interest in our industries and agriculture. Absentee ownership and monopolies of various kinds have been just as much a detriment to our development.

The people who work in these two plants are people who were born and reared in the community of which they are a part. They are not only small farmers and not only make money off of their agricultural products, but supplement their incomes by working in these factories. These people distinctly understand that wages paid have to be lower than wages in large factories in large industrial centers. They understand that the products of these factories have to sell at a lower price in order to compete with the large factories who have mass production and in turn a number of instances these employees own small amounts of stock in the company. Therefore, it can be readily understood that very few labor disputes arise and that this is a well-balanced plan, beneficial not only to the employees, but to the community in which the plant is located. I know of one agricultural county that has three small towns outside the county seat. There is a cement factory in the county seat, two small factories in one of the towns and a small factory in each of the others. To me this would be an ideal economic situation for every city and county within the great Commonwealth of Kentucky.

The cities of Kentucky have been making every effort to build up their industrial position so as to supplement their too largely agrarian support.

ment industrially as has the unfortunately basic political philosophy against business in general indulged in our 1893 Constitution by men who were afraid of the future, were ideologically unfriendly to business and progress and would visualize the "Bright New Industrial Horizons in the South. It has always been my belief that our present Constitution has greatly retarded the economic development of Kentucky, especially of the mountain and rural areas.

Unfortunate Edward Sells, a member of the bar from this district, wrote in 1929 an outstanding book entitled "Kentucky Resources and Industries." Appropriations were dropped and interest lapsed regarding this subject in our state, but Alabama, North Carolina, Virginia and many other states took this book as their textbook and guide in developing their various state planning and economic commissions. We all know the results of these other states from an industrial standpoint. The next Governor should begin at this same point and have this original book on Kentucky Resources in Industries brought up-to-date and then take the necessary steps to put this book back into effect.

I quote from an address by Honorable John Whitaker:

"The program of two thousand factories for Kentucky in the next 10 years should be an attainable goal. My thoughts in that these factories should be small plants located in agricultural centers where the employees of these factories could live at home, have their agricultural products to rely upon as well as their own foodstuffs, milk, butter, eggs, vegetables and meat. In other words, there will be no additional housing problems nor feeding problems. I know a small town, 1,200 population, in an agricultural county of 25,000 population in which they have a small factory mill and also a small leather factory and tannery. The people who work in these two plants are people who were born and reared in the community of which they are a part. They are not only small farmers and not only make money off of their agricultural products, but supplement their incomes by working in these factories. These people distinctly understand that wages paid have to be lower than wages in large factories in large industrial centers. They understand that the products of these factories have to sell at a lower price in order to compete with the large factories who have mass production and in turn a number of instances these employees own small amounts of stock in the company. Therefore, it can be readily understood that very few labor disputes arise and that this is a well-balanced plan, beneficial not only to the employees, but to the community in which the plant is located. I know of one agricultural county that has three small towns outside the county seat. There is a cement factory in the county seat, two small factories in one of the towns and a small factory in each of the others. To me this would be an ideal economic situation for every city and county within the great Commonwealth of Kentucky.

The cities of Kentucky have been making every effort to build up their industrial position so as to supplement their too largely agrarian support.

ment industrially as has the unfortunately basic political philosophy against business in general indulged in our 1893 Constitution by men who were afraid of the future, were ideologically unfriendly to business and progress and would visualize the "Bright New Industrial Horizons in the South. It has always been my belief that our present Constitution has greatly retarded the economic development of Kentucky, especially of the mountain and rural areas.

Unfortunate Edward Sells, a member of the bar from this district, wrote in 1929 an outstanding book entitled "Kentucky Resources and Industries." Appropriations were dropped and interest lapsed regarding this subject in our state, but Alabama, North Carolina, Virginia and many other states took this book as their textbook and guide in developing their various state planning and economic commissions. We all know the results of these other states from an industrial standpoint. The next Governor should begin at this same point and have this original book on Kentucky Resources in Industries brought up-to-date and then take the necessary steps to put this book back into effect.

SHEDS DIRT...STAYS WHITE...

DU PONT HOUSE PAINT

CLEANS ITSELF!

Outside surfaces stay fresh and clean-looking when finished with Du Pont House Paint. Dirt and grime can't get a grip—rains just wash them away!

SELF-CLEANING Du Pont House Paint is so formulated that, as time goes by, a microscopically fine white pebble surface. Heavy rains wash the powder away, taking dust and dirt with it, and leaving the surface clean and white again. Excessive accumulations of dirt (particularly in sooty industrial communities or in heavily shaded locations) may delay or interfere with this process. Because this "self-cleaning" is gradual, the wearing qualities of the paint film are not abnormally affected.

SELF-CLEANING Du Pont House Paint is as durable as it is beautiful...protects against rust, rot, and decay...gives lasting beauty and protection. Costs no more than ordinary paints—saves repainting bills! Call on a reliable painter for your painting jobs.
