THURSDAY

This Town That World

THE LINCOLN DOCTRINE
Today (Thursday) is Lincoln's birthday, and we pause to note that the immortal Abe split rails but he was never one to quibble and split hairs. He operated on broad principles like the great man he was. Presidents and others have left behind great doctrines but I'll take Abe's: Charity for all and malice toward none.

MORE ABOUT PUDDLES

A few weeks ago, this column made some very remarks about what the well-dressed man will wear in Prestonsburg after taking a stroll on a rainy day, namely, a coat of mud. Since that time it has been suggested that we carry the matter further to point out some of the many reasons why the state should provide drainage for Lake Drive, near the Mayo Trail.

SOMETHING NEW

Among the new things in an old setting which this section now has is that little house on Honey Fitzpatrick's place, up Middle Creek, which bears this boldly "blamed inscription": "Two-Hale Vacation."

NO EASY ROAD TO LAKE PARK

First Reports Show; Need of Organization To Sponsor Park Cited

If a state park is to be established in the Dewey Lake area, there will be more to be done than the mere filing of a request, it was pointed out by a project engineer. Although Governor Lawrence W. Wetherby told an Ashland meeting several weeks ago that the chances of a state park in the reservoir area are excellent, there remain serious reports made as early as 1947 to Harold A. Browning, Commissioner of Conservation, and Russell Dyche, director of the Division of State Parks. These reports are not recent, but the need for a Dewey Lake Association to point out the need for such an improvement and its possibilities has been cited.

THEY'RE FISHING ALREADY

Fair weather already has brought to Dewey Lake a large number of visitors. Roy E. More, reservoir manager, said this week, as of last Sunday the number of visitors since Jan. 1 totaled 1,985.

Are at Home Friday
Fox Meade Memorial;
Hughes Heads Region

The Prestonsburg high school Black Cats defeated the Garrett Black Devils here Friday night in convincing fashion, 64 to 61. But on the following night were edged at Wayland 81 to 77, despite John Delmar Hughes' 45 point scoring spree for the Cats.

In the game against Garrett three other Black Cats for the first time this season broke into the two-figure scoring class. Dixon averaged 22 points, Lafayette, a substitute, 11, and Low, Hughes, 10. Conley led the Black Devils with 25 marbles.

Hughes' 45 points in the Wayland game brought his average to 28.3 points for 15 games, the best in Region 15. Grady Wallace, Betsy Layne center, set a new regional scoring record Friday night when he scored 57 points against Phelps high school, and trails Hughes in the averages by a single point. Low and Carpenter, Solersville guard, heads the area scoring parade with 71 points in 26 games.

There are four basic types of bugs fishing — surface, shallow deep and bottom. Judging by the huge tackle chests you see some anglers carrying, you need a lot of bugs to catch bass. Or do you? Just what is the minimum number of plugs you need? Could you get along with just one?

We asked Jason Lucas, who has the biggest tackle box I've ever seen, and he reluctantly admitted a guy who knows his fishing might be able to do so by clever manipulation of that one plug.

Now, I don't expect any bass fishermen will actually believe I mean for him to get along on one or two or even three plugs. But what follows should give you a hint of how to assemble a well-balanced selection of plugs. A huge majority of tackle boxes that we see are equipped for surface and shallow fishing only.

If you were limited to just one plug, Lucas suggested a floating shallow runner, perhaps of natural scale or an orange color. His type of surface lure on which he gets the most bass, isn't a surface lure at all but a float which he retrieves very, very slowly with occasional jerks of the rod tip. You could convert this into a deep plug by adding split shot or lead but you'd wreck the action.

If you were to be a two-plug angler, the other plug would be a sinker. One that sinks quite slowly does very well to depths of six or eight feet—and a slow sinker hovering in midwater looks most natural when worked slowly with little jerks and dead pauses.

This mark that I mean fishing where the water is rarely over 10 feet deep or so will generally do best with a slow sinker. But where it's over that, unless you have the patience of Job, you'll want something that goes down faster, perhaps a metal lure. For really deep water my favorite is a small, heavy metal pork-rind lure.

A chin, flatfish one will weave and wobble too much to go down very rapidly and the smaller they are you'll have much action of its own at reasonable speed, if it needs the action of the rind. A simple spinner-bait at its head not only gives it a flash but sets up a slight jiggle that gives the rind a good action.

Cedar Cove Spring, near Frankfort, was the source of the first public water-supply system in Kentucky established in 1891. The water was transported to Frankfort by wooden pipes.

Eagle Scout Wallace
Representing Council
Before Governor Today

Eagle Scout Ourial Wallace, of Troop 21, sponsored by the Men's Bible Class of the Prestonsburg Methodist Church, has been selected to represent the Lonesome Pine Council in a report on Scout achievement to Governor Lawrence W. Weatherly today (Thursday).

This annual program at the state capital is a part of the state-wide celebration of Boy Scout Week, which marks the third birthday of the founding of the Boy Scout movement.

Eagle Scout Wallace was nominated by Lonesome Pine Council as a candidate to represent Region Four in a report to the President of the United States; however, another Scout from Youngstown, O., was selected by the Regional Committee for this honor. Wallace has had four years' experience in Scouting, and has served as patrol leader, senior patrol leader, and junior assistant scoutmaster. He has been on the honor roll at school for three years, participates in the school band, and is a member of the Key Club. He is active in Sunday School and church.

The report which Wallace will carry to Governor Weatherly will carry that Lonesome Pine Council has the largest increase in membership of any Council in Kentucky during 1952. The Council started the year with 2,100 Scouts enrolled in 106 units, and ended 1952 with 2,461 Scouts enrolled in 146 units, representing an increase of 361. This was the third highest record in Region 4 out of 43 Councils, according to figures received by the regional office.

Another outstanding achievement of the Council during the year was the building of a new Scout camp on Dewey Lake, representing an investment in materials and cash of $45,000. During its first season of operation, the Camp was frequented by 435 Scouts and 28 leaders. Floyd district led the Council to camp attendance with 121 Scouts and eight leaders.

There was more advancement by Scouts than at any time in the Council's history during 1952. A total of 1,380 merit badges were passed by Scouts in the Council. A total of 380 Scouts achieved the second class rank, 110 Scouts became first class, 69 Star, 12 Life, and four became Eagle Scouts.

The program of Cub Scouts for younger boys, 8, 9, and 10 years of age, showed a steady increase. At the end of the year there were 225 Cub Scouts enrolled in 16 Cub Packs, as compared to 16 Packs at the beginning of the year.

Explorer Scouting for older boys, over 14 years of age, grew from 120 Scouts at the beginning of 1952, to 178 Scouts at the end of the year. There were 178 Explorer Scouts enrolled in 18 units, as compared to 92 Explorers in five units at the beginning of the year.

For the first time, the Lonesome Pine Council did a good job of reaching boys in all age groups, from eight to 17 years.

FLOYD NATIVE RESIGNS POST

Burchett-Marland Till Accompanies Resignation From State Police Job

Major details of the resignation of Floyd C. Cavanaugh, former Floyd County man who rose to prominence and political power in West Virginia, has resigned his position as chief of state police, it was revealed in dispatches from Charleston, last week. The row between him and Gov. Marland touched off the political horse head in the Mountain State in 1933.

Burchett served as head of the state police under Gov. Marland. Cavanaugh's resignation and shortly before the expiration of his term was accompanied by the outgoing governor. Political donors saw in this action an attempt to force Cavanaugh to resign. Burchett, as head of the police for another term. What the observers did not know was the sudden eruption of the feud.

Burchett said in a statement that Governor Marland had outlined to him a plan of consolidation and "streamlining" within the state police department which was to include the elimination of the Hamilton detachment, and at least five others.

He said it was on this subject that he and the governor had one of their first disagreements. He related that he first asked the governor who was to do regular patrol work in counties like Lincoln, that the governor had refused the "sheriffs will have to take care of any work" and that he had replied: "The people and the press will not let you do this."

Governor Marland's office quoted the governor as saying he and the superintendent had talked for an hour and a half on different things. The statement continued that the consolidations mentioned had been brought up as possibilities but not as set policy, and that the governor was interested in having a maximum number of officers available for patrol work on the main highways of the state.

Later, and after the issuance of the statement, Burchett outlined in informal talks with newsmen, his relations with Marland and the story of the feud.

"Mr. Marland requested Governor Patterson to resign me. This I know."

"On January 12, I ordered the transfer of four men in the northern section of West Virginia, and ordered the transfer of district headquarters from Moundsville, so that the headquarters would be closer to the penitentiary."

"The men received their orders on the 14th. Mr. Marland, then still governor-elect, called me and seemed very hot about the transfers. He instructed me to hold up the transfers and said he wanted to see me."

"Earlier, about two weeks before the inauguration, Mr. Marland called me. He wanted to talk policy. I had already given him a complete list of men and assignments throughout the state. I went to his office in a day or two. He planned to streamline the operation of the department. He then told his plans for consolidation."

"I asked what would be done about criminal work in these counties and action from which men were to be removed. He said we're going to use the Sheriff for that work."

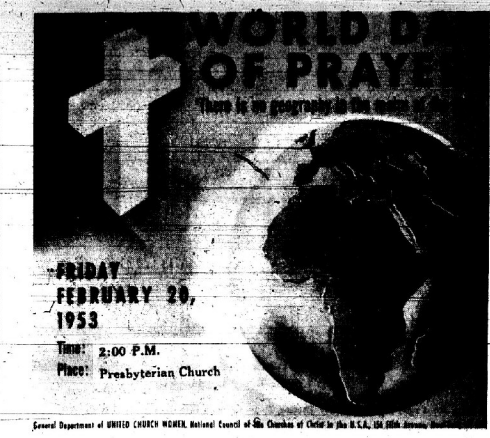

"I then said to Mr. Marland: 'Governor, I want to be fair and honest. Do you want my resignation? I know you can't make these moves. The press and the public will oppose them. If you want to do away with all state police powers except those over traffic, then let's get a bill through the Legislature.'"

"In his letter, the governor accused Burchett of 'dramatic and misleading statements.' At one point, he said Burchett had uttered 'damnable falsehoods.'"

"At his home in Huntington, Burchett made reply that: 'I don't tell lies.'"

Burchett, "B.B.", in his Floyd County native and friends, began his career as a coal school teacher at the mouth of Clark Branch of Buffalo Creek. He moved to Mingo county in 1913, first staying at a coal camp, then at a coal camp. He was employed as a clerk at the Charleston store owned by the Norfolk & Western Railway Co. He went from Charleston to Vulcan where he was N. & W. store manager at Vulcan.

Then he went with the Tug River Wholesale Grocery Co. as a salesman, serving until 1934. He was elected as sheriff of Mingo County in 1936, sheriff of Mingo County from 1937 through 1940. He was elected to the State Senate in 1942 and left the Senate in 1945 to become superintendent of the state police.

Along with several other folks we have entertained visitors at our house for the past two weeks, the untold kind that just walk in and take over; take over appetites, take over activities and if there's a sense of humor lurking in the horizon, those tallupians of the germ world take deadly aim at this commodity, too. The common name for the condition caused by this group of parasites—since they thrive on the bodies of others—is flu.

The first member of our family to tangle, head-on, with this heartless hoard was our ten-year-old son, Ralph, whose upbringing thus far has been reached; Ralph's Saturdays are spent at a local corral or riding the range mounted atop a theater seat in hot pursuit of Wild Willy or Roy Rogers. After a long day spent thusly, he comes home thirsty and headachy—due, no doubt, to bright sun and dry burning desert winds. On a recent Saturday, however, his usual lamentations were limited and he was soon asleep. A little exploration by Mama, plus the scientific aid of a thermometer, revealed torrid temperatures throughout.

Ralph, though, was not one to take it lying down, so his proceeding was intermittent with deep sleep, stirring to the tunes of a hill-billy musician whose sound waves would have drowned the center of a low aggressive hoard, and a Piano Red record. "It Makes No Difference Now"—all set to the tempo of 100 degrees temperature.

After about five days of the aforementioned aspirin-studded activities, Ralph was somewhat subdued, but not without a few more laughing battles.

The next target on the list was Mr. R. W. R. Senior's fight with the bug was as courageous a battle as I've ever seen. He would have his barrel chest, located slightly south of the diaphragm, and vigorously declare his determination to battle the thing out—on foot and he did—

Mr. Corlier talked tobacco production, timing and fertilization. Showing the use of a blackboard, saying that cigarette consumption is up, but bulky tobacco in the warehouses is disappearing, he drew the conclusion that manufacturers will soon be required to use high nicotine content tobacco. The reason he said, would be because farmers in seeking to grow more tobacco on reduced allotments would use lots of nitrogen. This would increase yields but raise the nicotine content of the product.

The sons of Floyd in marching away sang different songs. Some, called by Lincoln's first call to arms, were "We are coming, Father Abraham." Others, when not singing the martial David, hummed in duet or the lively Lincoln while comparing him to the David.

If You Remember...

The sun shone and the old man plowed for it was late spring. As he turned his team he could see the smoke rising from the house. Martha would be putting a fire in the kitchen stove. Overhead a plane dived. At first he thought it was a car and that it might be Jim who was in Ohio at work.

An hour and he sat upon his porch and smoked while the music ate and rested from the huge plow. Martha was putting in the kitchen and the old man heard the crash of a "merry" song. He knocked the ashes from his pipe and looked towards the field. The shadows were soft like the day before.

There was a sudden noise, the harsh labor of an aged car. It pulled up to the gate and a man motioned. The old man went out to the road and talked. He returned to the house as a man walks who carries a burden and would lay it down but fate wills that he cannot. We must tell Martha that Jim was dead. He had died the night before, and was dead when the foreman stopped the plow.

The neighbors were there soon after Aunt Martha screamed. Ohio later to talk and plan. One dashed down the road and another drove far away on a trip to Ohio. The old man sat on the porch until the shadows deepened. The chill of the night did not make him rise.

It was morning when he arose from the porch chair. All night the neighbors had sat with Martha who no longer cried but sat, too, as only those who sit and await the evidence of tragedy and death. Someone stirred the fire in the kitchen stove. A plane roared, no it was the neighbor's car that had dashed off to Ohio in the twilight of the day before. Brakes screamed and caught unevenly slowing the car against the paling gate. The driver burst open the car door and burst into the yard, his eager news stunning his hearers. They wondered why it had to be that rumor and late news had wings and served

Pikeville, Ky. — Three World War II veterans, one of them a Floyd countyman, finished their junior-college courses as the fall semester at Pikeville College closed recently.

Curtis Jervis, Endicott, and two Pike county men make up the class which completed the requirements for graduation from the school. All three will be candidates for diplomas at spring commencement May 28.

Jervis and Kenneth Chesney, Endicott, were enrolled in the teachers college at the college, and will be qualified upon graduation for the provisional elementary certificate.

Their group will be among the first to earn the certificate with two years' preparation, Dr. A. A. Page, college president, said. Requirements for fully qualified teachers will be raised to four college years on September 1.

Jervis, a private, first class, in the U. S. army in the European Theatre during the war, holds the United Combat Medal and the Purple Heart. The son of Jeff Jervis, Endicott, he is a Prestonsburg high school graduate.

NO COURTESY CARDS
Cities that have installed parking meters are without authority to issue courtesy cards to public officials and business houses, allowing parking privileges not common to the general public, in the opinion of the Attorney General's office. "Otherwise, the purpose of establishing meters in the first instance would be defeated," the Attorney General was advised.

Highway Death Rate Running Ahead of 1952

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 1 (AP)—

Kentucky's highway death rate is running ahead of the 1952 rate, according to a report today by the State Police.

Through Jan. 27, there had been 55 fatalities compared to 44 in the same period last year.

There were 734 deaths for all of 1952, and 12,500 persons were injured, the report stated. Two figures are a gain of 17 killed and 1,300 injured over 1951. The number of accidents jumped from 28,004 in 1951 to more than 30,000 in 1952.

Sparking and drunken driving are the two major causes of last year's accidents, the report noted.

Year-old buses take the blame, too, to qualify.

LIVING FENCE IS ENVISIONED

By Using Multiflora Rose And Bicolor Lespedeza, Says Conservation Service

To increase food and cover for game, the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources will give landowners multiflora rose and bicolor lespedeza to use as a living fence in Floyd County.

Multiflora rose will make an effective living fence in as little as three years, with proper care. It is about eight feet high, and about one foot wide, and does not spread in cultivated or wooded land. It requires no maintenance and is a natural for contour fences. To some birds and small game it furnishes cover and protection against enemies.

Bicolor lespedeza will produce enough seed on one-eighth acre to winter a cover of quail. One-fourth acre is better, especially during unfavorable years like 1950. Most of the seed will fall in January and February, when other quail foods are scarce and covered with snow. Bicolor will not withstand grazing, but will grow on very poor soil, and along woods borders.

Other plants include black walnut, Russian olive, and Russian mulberry, which is a good post tree. Most of the plants will be distributed through the Floyd County Soil Conservation District and the R. Johnson, Soil Conservation Service technician, will advise farmers on where to make plantings and how to care for them.

Bernard Baldrige, conservation officer for Floyd County, and Terry McGowan, district biologist, will deliver plants to individual farmers or to a central location similar to fish delivery. They will also advise farmers on where to make plantings and how to care for them, or on any other problems regarding wildlife.

LAW CONSTITUTIONAL

Frankfort, Ky. — Constitutionality of Kentucky's real estate licensing law—applying equally to brokers and dealers, requiring written examinations of the part of licensees and maintenance of a minimum of one on the part of all—has been upheld by Judge William S. Anderson in Franklin Circuit Court. A group of Lexington brokers attacked validity of the measure.

See country farmers who grow 300 tobacco as a demonstration in 1953 are planning to grow it as their main crop this year.

In Garrard county, 21 4-H club boys add, girls have 22 calves on the largest number for several years.

The Week Ahead

AGAIN it's Brotherhood Week, the period between next Sunday and the next.

Those seven days are set apart to emphasize a pattern of living for the entire year—to point the way to tolerance to direct us away from prejudices and hatreds, to strengthen us in the humanities.

Brotherhood is simply the doctrine of love for all others. That is the theory and it is age-old. To get the theory into practice is the aim of this Week which will be emphasized in newspapers, editorials, a radio program broadcast by television and radio over the land. The gap between theory and practice is wide and hard to bridge, but slowly it is being closed.

Veterans' groups this year observed Four Chaplains' Day. That day commemorated the heroism of the four chaplains who, representing differing religious faiths, met death, arm in arm, on a sinking ship, their last thoughts on the same ultimate goal, their prayers directed to the same God, and their lives sacrificed for the same purpose—that others might live. That is Brotherhood.

A wealthy man greets his poor neighbor on common ground, as one man to another, without condescension; a white man's life is saved by the skilled hand of a yellow surgeon; the glorious voice of a black singer claims the rapt attention of a fashionable white audience and draws enthusiastic acclaim; a white missionary lives and walks among savages and their disease and superstition, devoting his life to them—these are the things that spell Brotherhood.

It is perhaps no mere coincidence that Brotherhood Week begins immediately after the birthday of the immortal Lincoln is observed. The observances certainly have a strong relationship. Lincoln, somebody has said, is all men grown a little taller.

And it was St. John who wrote:

"If a man say, I love God, and hateth his brother, he is a liar; for he that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen?"

KENTUCKY
MARCH
By Lewis O'Leary

The insurance lobbyists who, company liability killed in committee in Frankfort a year ago thought the issue was dead they were very much mistaken.

The issue is very much alive in New York, thanks to Gov. Dewey, and bills will be introduced in practically all legislatures that meet this winter. Two years ago New York got a phony law that didn't mean a thing till after a year was involved in an accident. It was similar to the fake Kentucky statute which takes care of itself away from car owners who fall to satisfy judgments against them.

This question from an editorial in the New York Herald-Tribune may interest you:
"Governor Dewey is in a determined mood about highway safety. He is asking the Legislature for a law requiring every motor vehicle owner to have liability insurance. This seems only elementary reason—this 'no one is allowed to drive a car without being insured'—but the others are not so obvious, and are a constant reminder to the intelligent motorist. When an accident occurs, it is no comfort to know that the uninsured driver will therefore be compelled to carry insurance. The damage has been done, perhaps some one was killed."

Rep. William L. Jones, of Caldwell county, introduced a compulsory liability bill a year ago, and it died in committee. Jones couldn't get regular support enough to force the bill out for a free-for-all discussion. And if the newspapers of Kentucky uttered a single word editorially in support of the bill I didn't hear of it. This column had asked previously for an honest compulsory insurance law, but that was along all the endorsement the Jones bill got.

Next January it will be a different story. I believe Governor Wetherby will follow Dewey's example and insist that an honest law be enacted to protect motorists against car owners who kill or cripple victims and cannot be compelled to pay for the harm they do.

HEATS OFF TO CADILLAC!

Exhaustive tests made with 20 leading cars during the past year by Motor Trend Magazine, the great authoritative magazine of motoring, are reviewed in the February issue just out on the newsstands. Performance, Handling, Safety, Economy & Maintenance were the principal classifications of comparison.

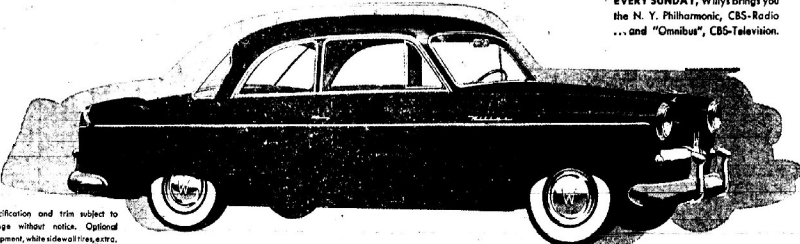

"FINAL STANDING" chart is shown here exactly as in Motor Trend Magazine. This publication stated all the above mentioned test factors were considered in its conclusions. You should read the entire Motor Trend article.

Aero Willys is proud to stand next to the "Standard of the World"

The FINAL STANDING Chart (above) tells a story of great importance to you and everyone who owns a car. It tells of the amazing record of the finest Willys car in 50 years, which combines both aerodynamic and automotive engineering.

This test, and many others, pile up new proof that the Aero Willys, built with the ruggedness of the world famous "Jeep" and designed with the superb styling and comfort of an airliner, has set new value standards in performance and economy. Willys dealers give you the most startling comparison of all in the new low Aero Willys prices. No matter what car you are considering, you owe it to yourself to drive the Aero Willys before making up your mind. Willys-Overland Motors, Toledo, Ohio.
