THEY MAKE FAMILY RIVALRY OF BASS FISHING CONTEST

A Prestonsburg couple at this stage of the fishing season has the lead in both the largemouth and small mouth divisions of the fishing contest sponsored by the Floyd County Fish and Game Club.

Mrs. Arthur Goble's five-pound, four-ounce bass, caught on a darter lure, heads the largemouth division, and the smallmouth caught by her husband on a popper fly, tipping the scales at exactly the same notch is the leader in that department. Mrs. Goble's catch was only a quarter-inch shy of 22 inches and the smallmouth netted by her husband was exactly 21 inches.

Fish are judged for the contest by their length. Actually, the longest bass caught and entered in the contest is the five-pound, five-ounce largemouth caught by Fred Wells, of Lanesville, on an Old Skipper flyed bass. Turner, of Drift, measured 20 1/2 inches and weighed five pounds, two ounces.

Leader in the crappie division also is a woman, Mrs. L. O. Mayo, of Austin, who entered a 13 3/4-inch fish which weighed two pounds, four ounces. There already have been many entries from crappie fishermen. Among the largest of these are a 14 1/2-inch caught by Palmer Hamilton, of Ligon, and a 14-inch longer entered by Steve Starn, of Martin.

All the bass and crappie listed were caught in Dewey Lake. There has not been an entry in the walleye and carp divisions. Jack Turner, secretary of the fish and game club, said.

Condemned Daughter Avenger Was Pioneer Virginia Preacher

By HENRY P. SCALF

The condemned man stood on his knees and preached, what was said that Lewis Horton was gone, too. By men and women of his faith, the greatest sermon delivered by any of his elders. Having finished, he began to sing a song upon which he had labored in his cell complete before the day of execution. Ever afterwards, it was called The Vance Song. His people and flock sang it for generations in the Primitive Baptist Church. The condemned author was Elder "Abner" Vance.

He had come to the hills of the upper Clinch River from North Carolina about the year 1790. His family was locally prominent there. A nephew, John Vance, became the governor of the Old North State. Elder Vance, though coming from a prominent family of the state of his origin, was poor in the world's goods. In Southwest Virginia, he sought only to garner souls for his faith. The Lord would provide.

He settled near the present little town of Raven, built a cabin, cleared a small farm and preached to the backwoodsmen. It is said that more than 1,000 souls were converted by him in the rugged valleys of Southwest Virginia and over the hills on the headwaters of the Forks of Sandy.

When not preaching the elder was roaming the wilderness of his parish, gun in hand, stalking game. He dug, quack, chirpy, quack, and when the day's hunting and roosting were over he would build a campfire, feast on the flesh of a deer, and after that read from the Bible he carried. As the night deepened, he sang the old hymns of his church. Tired from the exertions of the day, he would utter a prayer and fall asleep upon his arm and rifle.

He did not kill for sport's sake but only to satisfy the whimsy of hunters. Hunters came upon him in the forest to find him watching the wild things play and feed. In a land where hunting and roaming the wilderness was the usual custom with the pioneers, Elder Abner Vance was noted as a sportsman with the long rifle of the period. It was said that next to his faith and family he loved the forested hills.

Life went on for a quarter of a century with the elder and his family. The many children grew to adulthood and with the exception of a daughter, all married. When the father came home from the circuit he was riding, preaching, furling and constituting new churches on the frontier, he neglected that daughter who blossomed into a beautiful woman. Of all his many children, she was his favorite.

He was not pleased when a neighbor, Lewis Horton, came courting the remaining daughter of the family. For one thing, Horton was middle-aged. The overpowering objection though that the elder interposed in the eyes of courtship was an intimate suspicion of the wealthy Horton's motives. Horton had the reputation of a libertine and a rascal. He forced his daughter to see him. The web that was to ensnare the Elder Vance was tightening around him.

It had, indeed, begun two years before in 1813 he had been summoned to serve as a juror in the trial of John Elliott for the murder of Eli McLaughlin. McLaughlin and the sheriff of Russell county, Hugh McFarland, were staunch friends. Judge Peter Johnston, father of Gov. Joseph E. Johnston, of Civil War fame sat upon the paternal bench whose jurisdiction covered a wide circuit of counties in Southwest Virginia. He was a friend of McLaughlin and McFarland.

The John Elliott referred to in this article moved to the present Elliott county, Kentucky in about the year 1810. He was the father of Judge John M. Elliott, former Prestonsburg resident, who was assassinated at Fankfort in 1879. Elliott's trial of John Elliott was marked by the testimony of the Elder Vance. The 11 others wanted to send Elliott to the gallows. Vance doctored a small panel sentence because most of the evidence was circumstantial. Like many a case before and since, the determined juror had his way. John Elliott was sentenced to nine years in the penitentiary.

The 11 jurors who sat for the maximum sentence on Elliott were angry and discussed the obligatory Vance with Sheriff McFarland. The sheriff did not forget the man who had lightened the sentence on the murderer of a friend.

We are informed that Abner Vance saw no signs that Lewis Horton was conducting a clandestine courtship of his daughter. He thought she had decided to abide by his wishes and not see the wealthy libertine again, but he said his wife found upon arising one morning, that she was gone from their household. A frantic search of the neighborhood revealed nothing of her whereabouts. They learned only of the fact that Lewis Horton was gone, too. Suspecting the worst, the distraught parents could only hope that Horton would marry her.

Months later, September 17, 1815, she came home behind Lewis Horton on a horse she slid to the earth and walked toward her parents standing in the cabin door. Horton did not dismount but said: "I've had my fun and I hope your girl is none the worse for it." To the pleas of the parents that he marry their daughter and save her from a life of dishonor, Lewis Horton laughed at them. Suddenly turning away from the gate, he uttered obscenities at the three and rode towards Clinch River.

Horton must have seen Vance go into the cabin and return with his long rifle for midway the stream he turned on his horse and cried at the enraged parent, "Shoot, god be damned!" But Vance withheld his fire and Horton rode near to the opposite shore of the stream. Here his horse lowered his head and began to drink. His back was to Vance, slowly up came the long rifle. There was a careful sighting. The bullet struck Lewis Horton, the evidence showed, "between the crossing of the gullies."

Horton fell into the edge of Clinch River and was dragged from the stream, sometime later, by a nearby farmer. He lived a few hours in the house of William Harden. Ever afterwards the place where Horton fell was called Horton's Ford.

He did not know of the existence of his daughter. He lived in a cave, a fugitive, but when public opinion was gauged right for a trial, Vance knew nothing of his family. In Russell county the two years he was a fugitive, but when public opinion was gauged right for a trial, Vance knew nothing of his family. In Russell county the two years he was a fugitive, but when public opinion was gauged right for a trial, Vance knew nothing of his family.

"FLOYD COUNTY'S DAUGHTER"

Descendant of the following unions:

My father's parents: John Stumbo and Artie Sizemore.

My mother's parents: Lackey Salisbury and Peggy Justice.

My wife's grandparents: Kennis Spurrlock and "Pretty" Betty Martin, John M. Holbert and Mary Allen.

Imogene is the only great-granddaughter which descended from the union of these eight families. These families have done much in building up and populating Floyd county. Through their children and grand-children, a great majority of all people descended from or married into this generation of people.

This is my only daughter and I proudly offer her to the service of our country, as she is not only my daughter but also Floyd county's.

ANYTHING we can do to help our county in its time of need, should be done freely and with enthusiasm. This we can do by supporting her as she is qualified and also DEPENDABLE. Let's give a woman the chance to show what she can do.

Your support and vote will benefit all of us and will be appreciated.

Sincerely and gratefully,

HEALTH NOTES

DE. MARVIN RANDOLPH

SAFE VACATION

Every year, millions of Americans are injured in accidents of varying degrees of seriousness. Many of the injuries occur in summer, when children and adults are indulged in sports and are traveling more than at other times of the year.

Children and adults alike count on vacation time for relaxation, fun and the restoration of physical well-being after months of work or study. The secret of avoiding accidents and getting full enjoyment of vacation lies in a little common-sense moderation and in being prepared for "summer emergencies."

Many of us, after a busy year, try to crowd strenuous physical sports into the short vacation period. Summer sports are fine, but we should not rush headlong into any sport. We should avoid over-indulgence until our bodies become accustomed to the unusual exercise.

Sun tan should be acquired gradually. A safe rule is around five minutes exposure to the sun during each day, then longer sunbathing periods as the skin becomes less sensitive.

Those who travel on vacation must be careful what they eat and drink. Fruits and raw vegetables should be carefully cleaned before eating. In unfamiliar territory it is essential to make certain of the purity of milk and water.

A knowledge of first aid is a valuable asset to anyone at any time. It is particularly helpful for vacation trips, and a small first aid kit might prove to be an important part of your vacation baggage.

A vacation's knowledge of "what to do until the doctor comes" has frequently prevented serious complications and even saved lives. Following accidents: Your family doctor or the local health department will give you instructions and literature on such things as artificial respiration for drowning, dislocations, victims of gas, smoke, burning, or poisoning by snakebites, or poison ivy, dandelion, etc.

HOW MANY OF THESE ARE IN FLOYD COUNTY?

Dumping grounds such as these are costing Kentucky taxpayers untold thousands of dollars each year and marred the looks of the state. This trash is on state highways in the central and western parts of the Commonwealth.

Prestonsburg, Ky., May 18, (AP)—County May 18, all highways in the Commonwealth are throwing away hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of trash each year, according to W. P. Curdin, Commissioner of Highways.

Everything from beer cans to dead livestock is being thrown on highway rights-of-way in some areas, and the problem has become one of the major headaches in maintaining Kentucky roads. Reports from all of the state's 11 highway districts show highway dumping to be prevalent.

Hundreds of thousands of dollars that should be going into better highways for Kentucky is being spent each year to clean up trash that motorists are leaving with the Department of Highways because a roadside makes a convenient place to dispose of it. Nearly a third of the time spent on maintenance by highway crews is going into cleaning up debris," Curdin said.

The money being spent to pay crews to clean up trash and the money spent in repairing machinery that is damaged by beer cans, bottles and other pieces of rubbish can be estimated fairly closely, Curdin said, but there are other losses not suffered directly by the Department of Highways, that are incalculable.

The adverse effect that littered highways have on tourists that are bringing money into Kentucky can not be estimated, for instance. Not only the threat to health brought on by unsanitary dumping grounds on public roads.

Highway litterers are of two types—the deliberate and the careless—according to maintenance officials and both have an equal guilt in spoiling public property.

The deliberate set out from home with the week's garbage and deposit it on a roadside, often at a place where there has been dumping before and the result is soon a full-grown dumping ground covered with spoiled food, tin cans, bottles, old newspapers and dead dogs and cats.

The careless are the beer-can throwing type whose aim is to get small articles out of their automobiles and who shove bottles, cans, wrappings from lunchboxes and other items all along their route of travel. These items may not be as unsightly as a week's home accumulation of trash, but the bottles and cans can be death on a moving machine and they are hard to clean up.

Both types of trash throwers probably had a hand in littering a main four-lane highway west of Louisville recently to the extent that seven truck loads of rubbish were picked up by highway crews in a distance of two miles.

A dead calf and a dead dog were found side by side on a Middlesboro county highway, memento the health of those in the neighborhood and spoiling the atmosphere and scenery alike. Reports from throughout the state say that highway litterers have become favorite dumping places of some filling station operators who throw away large numbers of empty oil cans.

It is Curdin's hope that public opinion will force an end to the needless waste of highway dumping and he suggests that civic clubs, women's clubs and other organizations make it a project of theirs to conduct county-wide cleanup campaigns or maybe even a state campaign.

Hopkins, McLean and Muhlenberg counties are cited as the cause of place community action has taken great strides toward getting highways cleaned up. In the latter

BLADES OF BLUEGRASS

By BOYD KEENAN

Lexington, Ky. — Competition in the High School Drama Festival may not be as keen as that encountered in Hollywood and on Broadway, but take it from festival directors—it has its own drama.

This year's drama event, recently conducted on the University of Kentucky campus, offered festival audiences many treats that only high school productions could supply. One such treat, which became a high point of the entire affair, is cited by Prof. Wallace Briggs, director of UKE's Gunged theater and festival judge.

"In a playlet produced by a North Ky. Kentucky school group an accident occurred which, strangely enough, won the top award of the festival for its victim."

"A little fellow in this case was doing a nice job with his acting when the script called for him to be seated. The boy sat down—only to find that the chair wasn't there."

"I've directed hundreds of college students in drama programs but I've never had an actor keep his composure as did this young chap. 'Over my head, even if the curtain knocks you flat,' I always tell the students."

Without his chair, the youth was physically helpless for a second, but Prof. Briggs and the other festival judges testify that he "remained in character" through it all without so much as batting an eye. And, the calmness won for him the "Oscar" of the festival.

The drama festival is only one of many functions held for high school students during the spring months on the UK campus. Among them are the UK pageant, the UK pageant, which annually attracts hundreds of Kentucky youngsters. Events are directed by members of the University's Department of Education with the assistance of faculty members in such departments as music, drama and speech.

Under the University's overall program to serve people of the state it is estimated that more than 1,000 educational contacts are made annually through extension workers and other residents of the school.

TO THE CITIZENS OF FLOYD COUNTY:

As a candidate for the Democratic nomination for County Judge, I should like to review my qualifications for your consideration.

I attended high school at Prestonsburg and Maytown and worked my way through Caney Junior College. I have taught school for five years in areas of the county where there were no roads. I was born and reared on Middle Creek at Pyramid where there was never a road until three years ago. My life-long experience of wading through the mud gives me a sincere understanding of the problems of the people of this county who live in areas where the roads are unimproved or non-existent and I shall always be sympathetic to your problems and do my utmost to improve our system of roads as your county judge.

During the vacations between terms when I was teaching school I attended the University of Kentucky and Morehead State College where I pursued a course of study leading to the degree of Bachelor of Arts in Education. When I was nine months short of that goal I volunteered for service in the Army Air Force during World War II and flew in combat as a member of the crew of a B-17. After my return to the states I served almost a year as an instructor in the Air Force before I received a medical discharge as a result of injuries received in combat. My experience as a veteran and service man qualify me to cope with the problems of the ex-service man and those who will be returning from Korea.

Following my return from service, the good people of this county honored me by electing me to the office of county court clerk. I served you for four years and my knowledge gained while in that office will enable me to offer you an efficient administration as your county judge.

At the expiration of my term of office as county court clerk I enrolled in law school under the G. L. Bill of Rights and was graduated with a Bachelor of Laws degree in June, 1952. I then took the Kentucky Bar examination and passed it. I have been practicing law in this county since that time.

My experience as a teacher, a service-man, as your county court clerk and as a lawyer, qualify me to administer the duties of the office to which I seek nomination. I shall always appreciate your support.

Sincerely yours,
JARVIS ALLEN
