Mining deaths hit record low

Times Staff Report

Data from the U.S. Department of Labor released this week indicates that mine fatalities fell in 2009 to an all-time low for the second consecutive year.

Coal mines recorded 18 mining deaths and metal or nonmetal mines recorded 16 mining deaths, for a combined total of 34 deaths nationwide, a drop from last year's total of 52 deaths.

According to department officials, a key factor contributing to the record low number of deaths include enforcement of the Federal Mine Safety and Health Act of 1977 and continued implementation of the Mine Improvement and New Emergency Response Act.

Of the 34 deaths reported, 11 coal miners and 14 metal or nonmetal miners died at surface mines, while seven coal miners and two metal or nonmetal miners died at underground mines.

Election ballot begins to grow

by SHELDON COMPTON
STAFF WRITER

Now that the first of the year has passed, several candidates have filed paperwork to either run again for their respective county offices or try to unseat an incumbent as a challenger.

Among those filing this past week include Gregory Scott Nelson for county coroner and Connie Hancock for property valuation administrator. Nelson's father, Roger Nelson, served as the county's coroner for several years before retiring last year and Hancock is running for reelection.

There were several filings in three of the county's four districts for magistrate, with only District 2 seeing no new candidates.

In District 1, incumbent John Goble filed to run again to secure the position he has held for the past four years on the fiscal court, while seeing two challengers file, as well.

One of those challengers, Gerald DeRossett, served for several years as District 1 magistrate before Goble defeated him for the job four years ago. Another filing to run against Goble for the seat is Cecil Jarrell. All three men live in Prestonsburg.

In the District 3 magistrate race, incumbent Donny Daniels has now filed. Daniels, of Melvin, had intended to file late last month but did not. Also this past week, Daniels was joined by challenger Mike Lafferty, of Printer.

GETTING READY

Debbie Blackburn, of Prestonsburg, loaded groceries Thursday afternoon, just ahead of a predicted snowstorm. Blackburn, like many in the region, ventured to crowded local stores in the last few days to prepare for the storm.

Area braces for next bout of winter weather

by SHELDON COMPTON
STAFF WRITER

A cold front many thought would pass by following this weekend is now expected to last through next week, while several more inches of snowfall have been the main topic of weather reports since Monday.

Temperatures have dropped into the teens consistently for most of the last week across the region, dipping into the single digits overnight in some instances, and now state and local agencies alike are beginning to warn people to stay indoors and take precautions.

Kentucky's Health and Family Services Cabinet issued steps to avoid hypothermia earlier this week, just as several inches of snow were blanketing the region.

Some of those steps include wearing appropriate clothing made of synthetic and wool fabrics, avoiding consuming alcohol outdoors, as consuming alcohol can actually speed the loss of heat from the body, and staying as dry as possible.

"When the thermometer drops, people are at increased risk for hypothermia," said Cabinet Commissioner William Hacker. "Steps should be taken to prevent this very serious — and sometimes fatal — condition."

In addition to the threat of cold, bad road conditions and concerns for such things as keeping water lines from freezing are also some practical aspects of getting through a cold spell.

Officials with the Kentucky Division of Water have advised residents to wrap hot and cold water pipes in insulation or layers of newspaper, covering the newspapers with plastic to keep out moisture. Also, allowing a trickle of water to run from a cold faucet

Inmate sentenced for attack

by JARRID DEATON
FEATURES WRITER

PIKEVILLE — An inmate at the United States Penitentiary Big Sandy has been sentenced to 15 years and eight months in prison for assaulting a corrections officer with a prison-made weapon on June 14.

Steven Michael Reid, 48, pleaded guilty to the charges in August. Reid, originally from Norfolk, Va., admitted that he stabbed a corrections officer with a two-foot-long spear-type object that was coated with feces. Reid was indicted on the assault charge and possessing a prohibited object in July.

According to the office of the United States Attorney, Reid made the weapon by rolling up two magazines and attaching a sharpened piece of Plexiglas to the end. Reid admitted that he stabbed the officer in the stomach with the weapon through an opening in his cell door. Before the assault, Reid coated the tip of the weapon with feces.

Reid's sentence will run consecutive to his 20-year sentence imposed on Feb. 25 for the assault of another USP Big Sandy employee. Under federal law, Reid must serve 85 percent of his prison sentence.

The investigation into the incident was conducted by the United States Bureau of Prisons. The government was represented by Assistant U.S. Attorney Robert M. Duncan Jr.

Schools unveil new system to communicate with parents

by JARRID DEATON
FEATURES WRITER

Parents of children in the Floyd County School District now have a new way of finding out when school has been canceled and other important announcements, as the Floyd County Board of Education adopted a new communication system for 2010 that sends out a phone call with important messages within minutes.

SchoolCast is a system that allows parents and guardians of Floyd County students to be contacted by the school or the district's central office with messages on home phones, cell phones, or via email. The system launched this past week with an introductory call from Supt. Henry Webb.

"This system will be used when an entire school's parents or all of the school district's parents should be contacted at the same time," Webb said. "The tool will enhance our channel of communication to parents and staff. We are very excited about the flexibility of this communication tool and the many options that will be made available. The responses have been very positive."

According to information provided by the Floyd County Board of Education, each school will have the capability to utilize the tool as a parent communication system at the individual school level. The system can also be used when specific groups of students need to be contacted, such as when a teacher needs to contact all parents of a particular class, or a coach need to get information to parents of all of his or her athletes.

The system can also be used to notify parents about things like special events, late-running buses and after-school activities.

Governor touts job creation, education in State of Commonwealth address

FRANKFORT — In his third State of the Commonwealth address, Gov. Steve Beshear reminded legislators Wednesday of their bipartisan successes in job creation, education and budget balancing — despite a plodding economy and dismal budget outlook. He asked legislators to come together again to solve the state's worst budget forecast in generations.

"With a mindset of cooperation, we've made government work again for the people," said Gov. Beshear. "I pledge to Kentuckians from west to east that I will continue to operate with this spirit of cooperation."

Gov. Beshear pointed to the successful overhaul of the economic incentive program, changes to the pension system, and the protection of the main K-12 education funding formula (SEEL) as examples of what state government can accomplish when leaders set aside political differences.

"In these troubled times, Kentuckians need hope, and they need help," Gov. Beshear said. "I refuse to use this recession as an excuse not to move forward."

The governor outlined four goals to help the state survive the recession and position it for future success: creating and maintaining jobs, supporting families through the recession, attacking systemic problems hindering state progress, and making state government more efficient and transparent.

Create and maintain jobs

Gov. Beshear touted the success of the bipartisan overhaul of the state's tax incentive programs, which streamlined and modernized business development incentives. The new program, Incentives for a New Kentucky, allows existing businesses to take advantage of tax incentives to reinvest and create new jobs. In November alone, businesses applied for incentives that would create 1,100 jobs and maintain another 1,400. Strategic application of federal stimulus dollars saved another 4,200 jobs in the state.

Support families through recession
Gov. Beshear worked to secure expanded unemployment insurance benefits for those out of work, used federal stimulus funds to fully fund health-care benefits for the most vulnerable in the Medicaid program and began a $2.9 billion program to get aid to families more quickly. An initiative to register more children for health insurance led to health coverage for 36,000 children through the Kentucky's Children's Health Insurance Program (KCHIP). And he helped needy Kentuckians secure $17 million worth of prescription drugs by improving access to low-cost or free drug programs.

Attack systemic problems hindering state progress

The Governor said that protecting the SEEL formula, the main funding mechanism for K-12 education, has been one of his proudest achievements to date. Gov. Beshear said he plans to do "everything humanly possible" to protect education funding. He also outlined several legislative priorities to attack systemic long-term problems facing Kentucky, including:

- raising the allowable high school dropout age;
- simplifying the transfer of credits

among community colleges and four-year institutions;

- increasing funds for smoking cessation; and
- increasing accessibility to KCHIP, the health insurance program for children.

Make government lean, efficient and open

Gov. Beshear thanked legislators for their assistance in continuing to balance the state budget while preserving key areas of education, health care and public safety.

Since taking office, Gov. Beshear has cut the budget six times, reducing spending by approximately $900 million and shrinking the executive branch to its smallest size in two decades. Next week, the Governor will unveil a new series of efficiency measures designed to continue ensuring every tax dollar is wisely spent.

"We are living in historic times, and this recession has shaken the confidence of many," Gov. Beshear said. "But out of adversity can come opportunity, and that opportunity is ours to seize."

Many ways to follow legislature

FRANKFORT — As always, members of the public are welcome to attend legislative committee meetings and floor sessions while lawmakers are at the State Capitol for the General Assembly's 2010 session. But there are ways for citizens to stay in touch with the legislative process even if they can't make the trip to Frankfort.

The Kentucky Legislative Web Page is updated daily to give citizens the latest legislative updates. Web surfers also can see for themselves the issues before lawmakers by browsing through bill summaries, amendments, and resolutions. The Web site is regularly updated to indicate each bill's status in the legislative process, as well as the next day's committee-meeting schedule and agendas.

In addition to general information about the legislative process, the Web site also provides information on each of Kentucky's senators and representatives, including their phone numbers, addresses, and legislative committee assignments.

The Kentucky General Assembly also maintains toll-free phone lines to help citizens across the state follow legislative action and offer their input.

People who want to give lawmakers feedback on issues under consideration can do so by calling the Legislative Message Line at (800) 372-7181. People who prefer to offer their feedback in Spanish can call the General Assembly's Spanish Line at (866) 840-6574. Anyone with a hearing impairment can use the TTY Message Line at (800) 806-0205.

A taped message containing information on the daily schedule for legislative committee meetings is available by calling the Legislative Calendar Line at (800) 633-9650.

Information on the status of each bill lawmakers are considering will be available on the Bill Status Line, (866) 840-2835.

A meme that could reform Congress

It's fine to hope, as we embark upon a new year. Need a theme for a dream? Then ponder this meme.

Wikipedia describes an "Internet meme" as "a phrase used to describe a catchphrase or concept that spreads quickly from person to person via the Internet." A simpler definition is "those annoying junk e-mails that friends send you after they've been told to pass something along."

Typical memes are no more than contemporary letters that contain rumors, urban legends, doctored photos, and gossip. They're a lot like dreams — creative, frightening, entertaining, and make believe. Busy people mostly ignore them, although some are quite funny.

Occasionally, a meme contains great wisdom for the ages. One such meme, which keeps showing up in The Gazette's opinion e-mail box, suggests a piece of legislation for Congress to approve in 2010. It's hard to argue with a word of it. Wise members of Congress should craft their own version and introduce it. Seriously. That would be a meme come true.

The meme, titled "This is how you fix Congress," was authored by "a fellow American." Anonymity is all the rage these days in political dialogue, and it's not necessarily a problem. Keeping names off of important ideas enables us to focus on principle, rather than personalities. That's one reason the founders wrote anonymously as "Publius" when they authored The Federalist Papers.

The "how you fix Congress" meme outlines a simple piece of legislation called the Congressional Reform Act of 2010. It's based on an understanding that serving in Congress is an honor, and not a career:

"The founders envisioned citizen legislators: serve your term, then go home and back to work," wrote the fellow American. The proposed act reads:

1. Term limits: 13 years only, one of these options: A. Two six year Senate terms; B. Six two-year House terms; C. One six year Senate term and three two-year House terms.
2. No pension: Members of Congress collect salaries while in office and receive no pay when out of office.
3. Congress participates in Social Security. All future funds flow into the Social Security system, Congress participates with the American people.
4. Congress members buy their own retirement plans, just as other Americans.
5. Members of Congress no longer vote themselves pay raises. Congressional pay rises by the lower of the Consumer Price Index, or 3 percent.
6. Members of Congress lose their current health care plan and participate in the system they created for other Americans.
7. Members of Congress are exempt from no laws imposed on other citizens.
8. All contracts with past and present members of Congress are void after Jan. 1, 2011.

(Obviously, number 8 is tricky, from a legal standpoint, but that has never stopped Congress before.)

The modern Publius who wrote this proposal knows it sounds impossible, but reminds us: "Congress has the lowest approval of any entity in Government. Now is the time Americans will join together to reform Congress — the entity that represents us."

The beauty of this idea lies in its utter simplicity. In a few words, it would rein Congress and limit the size and scope of government. It would restore to us a Congress of citizen legislators. It would end a system of government haves, who produce nothing, taking from a productive class that has become the have-nots. Would a member of the Colorado delegation please take up this cause?

Alas, it's just a meme worth no more than a dream. It's too good to come true, but one can always hope.

Our national pastime is brutal

by DONALD KAUL
MINUTEMAN MEDIA

Football is our national pastime. It used to be baseball — no longer.

It's hard to believe but there was a time when there was hardly a town or village that didn't support some sort of baseball team, be it minor league, semi-professional or amateur. Baseball players were national heroes. The World Series was a big deal. For six months of the year the sport dominated the water-cooler/lunch-room chitchat.

No more. Now it's the football, football, football. And it's not just six months a year, what with the draft and training camps and exhibition games it's more like 11.

It's all poor baseball can do to seize the nation's attention for a couple of weeks when it plays its World Series and even then its hold is tenuous. (Quick, who was the losing team in the World Series this year? I thought so.)

Yes, football is king; of that there can be no doubt. There's only one more thing that needs to be said about it:

It's a truly awful game.

It's a brutal game played by bullies for the enjoyment of people who would be at home watching gladiators fight to the death in the Coliseum of ancient Rome.

And, like ancient Rome, football uses its combatants like Kleenex, then discards them with hardly a thought.

Just before Christmas the National Football League announced its ongoing study of the effects of head injuries on players was so compromised by conflicts of interest that it was shutting it down.

After stonewalling critics and players for years on the subject of concussions and their aftereffects, the league finally acknowledged that yes, perhaps concussions were a bad thing.

"It's quite obvious from the medical research that's been done that concussions can lead to long-term problems," a league spokesperson said.

And just now they figure out that getting hit in the head repeatedly might be bad for you?

Dozens of cases of dementia, early Alzheimer's disease and cognitive decline among older players have surfaced in recent years. Autopsies performed on the brains of deceased players have revealed signs of unusual damage, traceable to brain trauma.

Nor is a head injury the only fruit of a career in football. Sports Illustrated recently ran a piece about Dave Pear, a former Pro Bowl defensive lineman and Super Bowl champion who ended a five-year playing career in 1980.

"I wish I never played football," he told the magazine.

Because of injuries he sustained playing football, injuries he was encouraged — indeed, required — to play through as a player, he walks with a cane, when he walks at all. He suffers from vertigo and memory loss and is in virtually constant pain. He has undergone eight surgeries in the past 18 years, including disc removal and rod fusion in his back, arthroplasty in a hip, as well as a neck operation.

The Sports Illustrated writer Jeff Pearlman, who has interviewed more than 150 former players on the subject, says that roughly 60 percent of them live with extraordinary physical pain as part of their daily lives.

Barry Sanders was a favorite player of mine. I thought that the Detroit Lions player the most spectacular running back I'd ever seen. I still think that.

He retired suddenly about 10 years ago and no one could figure out why. He seemed in good health. He was at the top of his game. But he quit.

Recently he revealed that in the summer before his retirement he'd gone to Texas for a golf tournament and seen Earl Campbell there.

If Sanders was the flashiest runner, Campbell was the one who best combined power and speed. He was a monster, a punishing running back who ran over people, then away from them.

And when Sanders saw him that summer, he couldn't walk. He needed a golf cart to get around. Earl Campbell, the indestructible. That's when Sanders decided to quit.

If football players were animals, then football would be, like dog-fighting, outlawed. The players are our pit-bull; we are their Michael Vicks.

Some national pastime.

Calories on menus: A consumer's right to know

by ANITA COURTNEY, MS, RD
TWENAS NUTRITION AND FITNESS COALITION

Buried deep in the health care reform bill is a common sense measure that could help reduce obesity and health care costs nationwide. A menu labeling provision would require fast food and chain restaurants that have 20 or more stores in the country to list calorie information on menus and menu boards. Information on fat, carbohydrate and sodium would be made available at cash registers for customers who request it. Currently there are no requirements for these restaurants to provide any nutrition information to customers.

Having this basic information at the point-of-purchase would allow customers to factor into their food selection then a large chocolate shake at Burger King has 950 calories, a piece of carrot cake from the Cheesecake Factory has 1560 calories and that a Quarter Pounder has 160 fewer calories than a Big Mac.

Though Americans spent $16.8 billion on fast food in 2008, we're pretty clueless about what's in it. Nine out of ten people underestimate calories in fast food menus by an average of 600 calories. Who knew that Denny's country fried steak and eggs has fewer calories than an order of French toast or that you would save calories by ordering two jelly doughnuts instead of a bagel and cream cheese at Dunkin' Donuts?

Apparently calorie sticker shock works. Studies in 14 scientific journals found that customers tend to order fewer calories when calories are posted in restaurants. The average reduction ranged from 52 calories to 105 calories per order. Though this may not sound like much, keep in mind that eating 100 fewer calories a day can result in a 10 pound weight loss over a year.

Another way that menu labeling works is that the food industry often makes products healthier when disclosure is required. After menu labeling requirements were implemented in New York City, Dunkin' Donuts reduced the calories in a Glazed Cake Stick from 490 calories to 360 calories; KFC reduced Firey Buffalo Wings by 110 calories and McDonalds cut 70 calories in a large order of French fries. Since mandated trans fat labeling went into effect in January 2006, the use of trans fat in the U.S. food supply decreased by 50 percent.

If menu labeling doesn't pass at the federal level, Kentucky stands ready to act. Sen. Denise Harper-Angel and Rep. Kelly Flood have will propose menu labeling legislation in the 2010 KY General Assembly if the federal bill is not successful. Their companion bills will mirror the federal legislation. We cannot afford not to act. A recent study from Emory University projected that over half of Kentuckian adults will be obese (not just overweight) by 2018. Obesity-related health care spending will increase approximately $1400 per person over the next decade if we do nothing.

The "consumer's right to know" has always been the American way. Fuel efficiency labels on cars, car labels on clothing and energy efficiency stickers on appliances are just a few examples of point of purchase information that have been mandated to protect consumers. Providing calorie information at the point of purchase will allow consumers to make informed decisions that can help lower health care costs in the long run.

Taylor set to guide Bears

New PC
baseball coach
back at alma mater

TIMES STAFF REPORT

PIKEVILLE — Pike County native Robert Taylor is headed into his first season at the helm of the Pikeville College baseball program. Taylor, a three-time all-conference selection during his career as a Bear, was named head coach of the Pikeville College baseball program in mid-May. Over the summer, Taylor didn't waste anytime preparing his program for the 2010 season. The Pike County product recruited several area players for the Pikeville College baseball program.

Taylor was the first player from Johns Creek High School to sign a baseball scholarship, and played one season at Liberty University for former New York Yankee second baseman Bobby Richardson.

He then transferred to Pikeville where he was All-KIAC for three years for his work as a catcher. He was the

All 'A' is a Classic

by RICK BENTLEY
TIMES COLUMNIST

It was 1990, I believe, my first winter as sports editor of the News-Express that it began.

That would mean this year's event, beginning Monday at the East Kentucky Expo Center, would be the 20th anniversary of the very first All "A" Classic. God I'm getting old.

In the beginning, I was skeptical. I wasn't sure I knew one thing: I feared this event would lead to classification in basketball as we have in football, and I was against that to the core. Still am.

I suppose, all these years later, it's safe to say that probably won't happen.

So it's safe to say that while I wasn't excited the night the small-school coaches in the 15th Region came together for a press conference in the Commons Area at Pikeville High School, I've grown pretty fond of the old girl.

And so on Monday night, I'll be excited about the 2010 edition. The All "A" has meant many things to me. Here's a run-down of a few of them:

PC knocks off Temple Baptist, wins fifth straight

TIMES STAFF REPORT

PIKEVILLE — Seven players reached double figures and the home team absolutely dominated the glass as No. 8 Pikeville College rolled past Temple Baptist College 12-7 Tuesday night at the East Kentucky Expo Center.

Pikeville improved to 12-1 with its fifth straight win, including three in four days.

Two Bears who normally don't provide a lot of points led the team in scoring on Tuesday, with junior Ryan Whitaker and sophomore Chris Puckett tossing in 20 points each. They did it on minimal shots, combined to hit 15-of-20 from the field.

In addition, the guards crashed the glass hard. Whitaker had 11 rebounds to lead the team and record his first double-double of the season, while Puckett had six boards.

Ten different Bears had at least four rebounds, helping the team to a 66-23 domination on the glass.

Whitaker and Puckett were followed by sophomore Kane Belcher and freshman Trevor Setty with 14 points each. Senior Jona Clark and junior Justin Hicks had 13 points apiece. For Hicks, his points came in only six minutes of playing time.

Temple Baptist also had five players in double figures, led by Jamar White's 23 points on 4-of-7 shooting. Freshman Milen Kostov followed with 15 on 3-of-5 shooting from outside. Peter Jackson followed with 13, while Tyler Watts nailed 4-of-9 from the arc to finish with 12. Micah Simms added 10.

The Rams were 13-of-32 from the arc for 40.6 percent shooting.

Pikeville will be off for nine days until opening league play when it travels to Campbellsville to face the Tigers on Thursday, Jan. 14. Tipoff for the Mid-South Conference matchup is scheduled for 8 p.m.

Rich Brooks walked off the field following a loss to Tennessee in a regular-season finale. Brooks served as the second to last game for Brooks as Kentucky head coach. He announced his retirement earlier this week. Longtime assistant Joker Phillips is the new Kentucky head coach.

Phillips takes over UK football program

TIMES STAFF REPORT

LEXINGTON — For Joker Phillips and University of Kentucky football, the future is now.

Designated as UK's head coach of the future in January of 2008, the plan became reality on Wednesday when Phillips was appointed the head of the program after Rich Brooks' retirement.

Phillips is only the fifth Kentucky alumnus to become head coach of the Wildcats and the first since Jerry Claiborne, who led the Cats from 1982-89. Phillips' appointment also has significance in that he is the Wildcats' first African-American head football coach and only the second in the history of the Southeastern Conference.

"Joker is a native of the Commonwealth, an alumnus of the University, a letterman and a person who has been an integral piece of our last four bowl victories in program history," said Mitch Barnhart, UK's Director of Athletics. "He bleeds blue and believes in the foundational principles that Coach Brooks has put in place for the program."

Phillips recently completed his fifth season as offensive coordinator and seventh as wide receivers coach in his current tour of duty at his alma mater. Kentucky improved its scoring average and total offense in each of the first three years under Phillips' direction.

The yearly progression reached its zenith when Kentucky scored a school-record 475 points during its 13-game schedule in 2007, helping spark the Wildcats to a second-consecutive Music City Bowl championship. UK's average of 36.5 points per game ranked 15th nationally.

Total offense also was a highlight of the '07 season. UK's total offense of 5,764 yards was the second-highest total in school history. The average of 443.4 yards per game is fourth in UK annals.

Phillips' offensive style has shown flexibility and balance between the run and the pass. During his time as offensive coordinator, UK has had a 3,000-yard passer (Andre Woodson, who accomplished the feat twice), two 1,000-yard receivers (Keanan Burton and Steve Johnson) and a 1,000-yard rusher (Rafael Little, who reached the mark twice).

Balance is shown by the fact that Kentucky led the SEC in passing yardage in 2007 while also rushing for 2,021 yards, 155.5 yards per game and 4.2 yards per attempt. All three rushing marks were UK's best in a dozen seasons, since 1995. The '07 season was the first time in school history that UK averaged at least 250 passing yards per game while rushing for at least 150 yards per game.

As wide receivers coach, Phillips has mentored some of the best in school history.

Burton, Johnson, Dickey Lyons Jr. and Derek Abney With Burton, Johnson and Lyons leading the way, along with tight end Jacob Tammie and tailback Rafael Little, Kentucky was the only team in the nation in 2007 that had five players with at least 1,000 receiving yards during their careers.

After massive graduation losses from the '07 squad — losing Woodson, Burton, Johnson, Tammie and Little to the NFL — Phillips showed his ability to adapt and adjust during the last two seasons, turning in some of his most astute coaching performances.

Injuries, inexperience and a disciplinary dismissal forced Phillips and quarterbacks coach Randy Sanders to juggle four QBs — Mike Hartline, Randall Cobb, Morgan Newton and Will Fidler — in 2008 and 2009. Even though there was a rotation of players in the offense's most important position, Phillips figured out a way to generate enough points to win seven games each season.

Despite fielding a virtually new offensive lineup in 2008, and losing his potential starting quarterback on the first day of fall practice, Phillips still managed to finish in the top half of the SEC in scoring offense while helping the Wildcats win a third-consecutive bowl game.

The 2009 season showed more of Phillips' ability to adapt to a changing landscape. After five games, with Hartline as the starting quarterback, Phillips had the perfect balance he was looking for with 167.4 rushing yards and 167.4 passing yards per game. But when Hartline was injured, and a true freshman stepped into the starting role, the Wildcats became tilted heavily toward the run.

And, even though everyone in the stadium knew UK had become a run-first offense, Phillips managed to keep the opponent off-balance and score sufficient points to win five of the last eight games, including ground-breaking victories on the road at Auburn and Georgia. For the season, Kentucky rushed for 191.2 yards per game and a 4.5 average per carry, the team's best marks in 14 years.

In addition to his coaching, Phillips also is a highly effective

Blackcats falter late in road game at Lawrence Co.

by STEVE LEMASTER
SPORTS EDITOR

LOUISA — Prestonsburg had fought its way to a 42-all tie with host Lawrence County Tuesday night. However, Prestonsburg, looking to lock in its first win of the season, struggled in the final quarter. Saving its best for last, Lawrence County outscored the Blackcats 21-8 in the final eight minutes to win 63-50.

Four Lawrence County players reached double figures in the scoring column as the host Bulldogs pulled out the win. Lucas Frasier led Lawrence County offensively, scoring a team-high 16 points. Larry West, a new addition to the Lawrence County roster, chipped in 14 points. Wade Skaggs scored 13 points and Blake Bradley added 10 for the Bulldogs.

Lawrence County outscored Prestonsburg 15-8 in the opening quarter and took a 36-27 lead into halftime.

Visiting Prestonsburg pushed the 15th Region runner-up from last season in the third quarter, outscoring the Lawrence County club 15-6. However, with the game even, Lawrence County opened the fourth quarter in strong fashion and limited Prestonsburg to eight points in a single quarter for the second time in the non-district game.

Michael Atkins added six points and Joel Baldwin chipped in four as Lawrence County prevailed.

Senior guard Michael Burchett scored a game-high 20 points to lead the Blackcats offensively. Junior guard Warren Blackburn chipped in 10 points for the Blackcats as two different Prestonsburg scorers reached double figures.

Other scorers for the Blackcats included senior guard Kyle Gearheart (seven points), junior center Corey Carter (six points), junior forward Seth Carter (three points), freshman guard Bryson Williams (three points) and senior forward Cameron Tinker (two points).

Prestonsburg is scheduled to visit South Floyd on Saturday, weather permitting.

Hunter education instructor course slated for Jan. 16

TIMES STAFF REPORT

PRESTONSBURG — The Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife will conduct a hunter education instructor course on Saturday, Jan. 16 from 9 a.m. until completion. The course will be conducted at the Dewey Lake Fish and Game Club.

The course is open to anyone 18 years or older who has completed the hunter education student course.

After completing the course, an instructor may conduct hunter education courses, which are required by hunters born on or after Jan. 1, 1975.

Kinzer Motorsports releases early racedates

Floyd County driver, raceteam to debut
at Volusia Speedway

by STEVE LEMASTER
SPORTS EDITOR

ALLEN — The Kinzer Motorsports team released the opening dates of its 2010 schedule on Monday. Veteran Dirt Late Model driver Brandon Kinzer will compete behind the wheel of his No. 18 Late Model for the first time this decade at the Volusia Speedway Park in Barberville, Fla.,

Feb. 8-13. In all, six Dirt Late Model events will be held at the Daytona Beach area venue with first-place payouts ranging from $7,000-$10,000 to win.

Kinzer claimed feature wins in two different series last season, prevailing in a Battle of the Pucgrass Series-sanctioned race at 201 Speedway and finishing out in front during a Southern Regional Racing Series race at Green Valley (Ala.) Speedway. The veteran driver also made the starting field for the coveted "Show Me 100" feature race during the 2009 season.

Brandon Kinzer will open the 2010 season at Volusia Speedway in a series of races.

tive recruiter, as his straightforward, likeable personality earns the trust of young players and their families. He served as UK's recruiting coordinator in 2003-04, giving up that post because of his additional offensive responsibilities, but continues to be deeply involved in recruiting.

Phillips' abilities in that area have become known across the country, as he has been identified as one of the nation's top recruiters by SI.com and Rivals.com.

Phillips is a familiar face around Kentucky football. He played at UK from 1981-84 and was on the football staff from 1988-96. As a player, Phillips helped lead the Wildcats to appearances in the Hall of Fame Bowl in his junior and senior seasons. He finished his playing days tied for fifth on the UK career receiving list with 75 catches for 935 yards and nine touchdowns. He went on to play a total of three professional seasons with the Washington Redskins of the National Football League (1985, '87) and with Toronto in the Canadian Football League (1986).

As a coach, eight of his teams have gone to bowl games, including Kentucky to the 1993 Peach Bowl, 2006, '07 and '09 Music City Bowls and the AutoZone Liberty Bowl following the 2008 season; Cincinnati to the 1997 Humanitarian Bowl; and Minnesota to the 1999 Sun Bowl and 2000 Microne.com Bowl.

Phillips is a native of Franklin, and was a three-sport standout — football, basketball and track — at Franklin-Simpson High School. He is married to the former Leslie Statnits.

Alice Lloyd men compete in Ozarks tournament

TIMES STAFF REPORT

PIPPA PASSES — The Alice Lloyd Eagles opened the 2010 portion of their season on the road, traveling to Point Lookout, Missouri, to play in the elite McDonalds Cam Jam Classic hosted by the College of The Ozarks Monday and Tuesday. ALC Coach JR Hammond's squad was faced with the unenviable task of facing two of the country's premier NAIA programs from the powerful Midlands Athletic Conference over the course of a two-day span.

First on the agenda were the Bellevue (Nebraska) Bruins. Last season, Bellevue finished with 24 wins and advanced to the Elite Eight of the NAIA National Tournament. This season, Bellevue was the preseason No. 12 team in the nation. After a rocky start, the Bruins entered Monday's contest playing their best ball of the season as they were riding a seven-game winning streak compiled against stiff competition. In this matchup, Bellevue showed why they are playing as well as any team in the country by defeating the Eagles 111-65.

In posting the victory, Bellevue exploded for 59 first half points and shot an outstanding 57.5-percent from the field for the game (including 10-of-21 from beyond the arc), while limiting the Eagles to only 36.8-percent shooting.

For ALC (4-7), three players reached double figures in the scoring column. Junior guard Daniel Combs led the Eagles with 13 points and a team-high six rebounds. Sophomores Nick Brumback and Van Ferguson contributed 12 and 11 points, respectively. For Bellevue (11-6), Ouseynou Diop paced with double figure scorers with 23 points.

In game two on Tuesday, Alice Lloyd faced host College of The Ozarks Bobcats (Missouri). Last season, Ozarks advanced all the way to the NAIA National Championship game before falling to the nation's top team (Oklahoma Wesleyan) 60-53 and finished the season with 25 wins.

This year, Ozarks started the season on shaky ground. The preseason No. 5 squad in the nation had several new players, still learning their roles. Because of this and the additional fact that they have played a strong schedule, COTO won only two of their first eight contests. However, since its last loss on November 20, COTO has been clicking on all cylinders and has exploded for seven consecutive wins by an average margin of 15 points per game.

The contest started well for both teams, but after a bucket by Eagle guard Van Ferguson put ALC up 11-9 with 15 minutes remaining in the first half, the Bobcats exploded. Over the next eight minutes, they ripped off a 31-11 run, and when the dust settled, the score stood 40-22. Ozarks, at intermission, the margin was still 18 (60-42).

In the second half, after a bucket by COTO forward Derrick Williams at the 15:56 mark made the score 70-47 in favor of the Bobcats, Alice Lloyd made its move.

Sparked by three three-point baskets from junior guard Will Jones, Alice Lloyd ripped off a 17-6 run over the next 5:40, and when power forward Nick Brumback connected inside the paint at the 10:06 mark, the deficit was only 10 (76-66). This prompted an Ozarks timeout.

Unfortunately for the Eagles, Ozarks regrouped and were able to maintain their lead the rest of the way. Alice Lloyd sophomore Brandon Hayes connected on a ten footer to cut the lead to seven (92-85) with 1:37 remaining, but that was as close as the Eagles could get.

For ALC (4-8), Ferguson paced all scorers with a game-high 23 points. Brumback contributed 14 points along with a team-high seven rebounds. Jones and junior guard Daniel Combs added 10 points apiece.

For Ozarks (10-6), Williams led the way with 21 points. Forward Jared Howerton added 19 points and a game-high 11 rebounds for the home-standing Bobcats.

After the long trip home, Alice Lloyd has been preparing to open up conference play on the road at Richmond, Ind. on Saturday, Jan. 9. The Eagles are scheduled to face Indiana University-East in a 2 p.m. showdown.

The Eagles are slated to return home on Jan. 13 for a men's/school's doubleheader versus Brescia. Game times are set for 5:30 and 7:30 p.m., respectively.

Top-ranked PC women's bowling team dominates two Vegas tourneys

TIMES STAFF REPORT

PIKEVILLE — The Christmas break was good to the Pikeville College women's bowling team, which dominated two tournaments in Las Vegas and ascended to No. 1 in two of the three polls. The Lady Bears won the 2009 Collegiate Shoot-out and then Las Vegas Invitational. That resulted in a move to the top of the power ratings and came just after they were named No. 1 by the Bowling Writers Association of America.

The men handled themselves well in Vegas also, posting a team seventh in a 44-team field at the Shoot-out and fifth in the Las Vegas Invitational.

The Lady Bears won the 2009 Collegiate Shoot-out, the women had teams finishing Nos. 1 and 3 in the 19-team event. The individual honors came to Pikeville as well, with Lady Bears finishing 1-2-3 to lead seven of the Top 14 finishers.

Senior Jennifer Wright took medalist honors, finishing six games at 1318. Sophomore Kim Yioulos was second with a finish of 1272, while senior Nichole Burk was third at 1242. Senior Ashley Stahurski was seventh at 1209, sophomore Megan Kyle ninth with 1110, sophomore Chelsea Giam 10th at 1104 and senior Rocky Sullivan 14th at 1078.

On the men's side, eight Bears finished in the Top 100, led by Zachary Maddox, a sophomore from Anderson, S.C., who finished with a six-game total of 1158. Freshman Burton Banta came in 31st with a total of 1146, while junior Jeremy King was 33rd at 1140, one pin ahead of freshman Ross Crider. Freshman Chad Carden was 45th with a total of 1125, junior Seth Wagner tied for 56th at 1112, freshman Jonathan Crews 63rd with 1096 and freshman Kyle McInerney 66th with 1094.

The action then moved to the LVI, where the Lady Bears not only one the tournament but finished the nine games with a 677 pinfall advantage over second-place Wichita State. Pikeville B was seventh.

Pikeville completely dominated individually, with five of the top six finishers. This time Sullivan finished atop the standings with an average of 216.4, followed by Yioulos at 212.1. Senior Sarah Ciernano was fourth at 202.56, followed by Wright with 195.1 and Burke at 190.56. Stahurski was ninth with an average of 189.78, while sophomore Melia Bennett was 35th with an average of 186.38, just ahead of Kyle's 186.13.

In men's action at the LVI, junior Reno's Chris Jones celebrated returning to his home state by making the all-tournament team. His 214.56 was good for fifth in the tournament to lead nine PC bowlers in the Top 100 finishers. Freshman Mark Allen followed in 26th place, averaging 199.33. Crews came in 40th at 195.6, with Burton 49th at 192.44. Junior Jimmy Cheff was 56th thanks to an average of 19.56. McInerney 66th, 188.56; junior Jesse Hawkins, 80th, 186.44; sophomore Richard Lane, 85th, 184.78; and Crider 91st, 183.44.

Pikeville's bowlers will be back in action Jan. 16-17 in the Hoinke Bearcat Classic in Cincinnati.

team MVP as a junior when he led the squad in home runs and was the leader in RBIs all three seasons.

During the summer of 1992, Taylor played professional baseball for the Kentucky Colonels of the Frontier League.

"I had the pleasure of coaching Rob both at Pikeville College and with the Rifles," said Pikeville College AD Robert Stages. "I believe Rob's baseball knowledge is second to none and have confidence he will be a tremendous addition to our staff of coaches at Pikeville College."

Taylor's hire has drew rave reviews from several of his fellow college baseball coaches.

"Coach Taylor is not only a good 'baseball man,' he is a good man," said Keith Madison, the former coach at Kentucky who now heads Score Ministry. "He is a coach who truly cares about the players. He doesn't just coach baseball, he coaches baseball players. His knowledge, passion and character are evident in his coaching."

Taylor spent five years as an assistant coach at Morehead State University, serving as hitting coach, pitching coach, recruiting coordinator, third base coach and catching coach. During his time there, he coached 11 All-SEC players and 2005 OVC Player of the Year Lance Seaton.

Taylor is married to Paige Blair Taylor. They have an eight-year-old son, Shane.

The Pikeville College baseball program will open the 2010 season in February.

Classic

— It was the first year The All "A" was held in the T.W. Oliver Memorial Gym at Pikeville High School, and the Panthers had a senior who would use it to secure quite a name for himself. Murray Garvin was a nice player, the post on that Panther team, but many felt his role in the initial All "A" would be that of stepping stone.

As in, the first step on Jody Thompson's run to a state tournament.

Thompson, a senior at Feds Creek, didn't disappoint, scoring 39 points that night. But Garvin would have the last laugh, leading the Panthers to a thrilling win over the Vikings in what would be their first step to winning the first 15th Region All "A" Classic.

Garvin's single-tournament point total would stand for years. His legacy stands today.

— It was the next week that I saw something I'll never forget.

The first state All "A" Classic was played in historic Memorial Coliseum on the campus of the University of Kentucky. The tournament opened early, playing all eight first-round games in one day. For some reason, I was there that morning and was glad I was. I got a picture of the ball being tossed in the air to start the very first game of the very first All "A" Sweet 16.

Oh, yeah. The official who tossed it in the air? Phelps native Ancie Lee Casey.

— I mentioned Murray Garvin, and his sparkling first All "A". I mentioned Jody Thompson, and his amazing one-and-only appearance in the event. I mentioned point records that stood for years.

— And then they all came tumbling down on one incredible night.

Ask anyone who was there — and you could probably find 15, maybe 20,000 people who will claim to have been — and there's only one night of the All "A" Classic that really, truly matters. It was the night Randy McCoy delivered a regional championship to the "Last Big Town Before You Leave Kentucky."

It was the night Elkhorn City knocked off Allen Central. It was the night Todd Conley and Jeremy Hall left behind their "nice player" status and became legends.

One had 54 points. The other 48. Wait. Not the teams. The players.

I remember which was which too. Once I incorrectly wrote that Hall had the 54, Conley 48. I was corrected. By Hall. "It was Jeff," he said, calling Conley by his world-famous nickname. Not only did the Cougars win the title, but Conley took the single-game scoring crown from Hall in the same night.

I've seen a lot of things in my life. I watched Kentucky and Arkansas when they were ranked 3-4 in the country. I watched Richie Farmer score more than 50 points in the state championship game. I've watched two groups of young ladies win national championships for our local college in the sport of bowling where they compete not against smaller NAIA schools but against every school who sponsors bowling in the nation.

But I've never seen anything like the night I watched Conley set the record for three-pointers made in an All "A" game only to be passed by Hall who was then passed by Conley in the same game.

I'll go to my grave with that one on my mind. Even after Alzheimer's has claimed everything else, I believe I'll remember that night.

— And then there was Super Bowl Sunday.

Last Super Bowl Sunday, Richmond had been blanketed by an ice storm. Nobody could get there. Very few there had electricity. It forced a day's delay in the tournament. The semifinals and finals of the boys' bracket would have to be played in the same day. Even worse than the Sweet 16, they'd be played only a few hours apart.

Didn't matter. It was just one of the stories we'll tell about the day a Pike County team finally won a state basketball title.

It was what it's all about. Elisha Justice starred. His teammates stood tall. His coaches guided the ship to perfection. And thousands of blue-clad Shelby Valley fans, probably numbering fans of every school in the county if not the region, cheered their lungs out. Can history repeat itself this year?

We begin finding out Monday night.

'Amanda's Bill' heading to House floor for a vote

FRANKFORT — Legislation known as "Amanda's Bill" that would allow Kentucky courts to use GPS monitoring in dangerous domestic violence order situations cleared the House Judiciary Committee Thursday.

The committee amended Amanda's Bill—filed as House Bill 1 by House Speaker Greg Stumbo in memory of Amanda Ross, who was shot and killed in Lexington last September—to include language that would allow counties to purchase or lease GPS (global positioning system) for pretrial release of some jail inmates. Stumbo explained that the bill would help counties contain their rising jail costs while giving courts access to GPS equipment that could protect victims like Ross.

"We think it will help (counties) financially, and once the system is in place, the courts can use the system for domestic violence protection as well," he said.

Stumbo presented the bill alongside Ross's mother, Diana Ross, and sister Carrie Ross. Diana Ross told lawmakers she was "compelled" to speak to the committee to honor Amanda and to help others.

Ross said Amanda used the legal system to protect herself from her former fiancé, former state lawmaker Steve Nunn, who is now charged with her murder.

"Despite those efforts, we still lost Amanda. Our state can do better, and I ask that you help us do so," Ross said.

No homicides have been reported in any states that currently use GPS monitoring in domestic violence cases, Stumbo said. Fifteen states now allow their courts to use GPS to protect domestic violence victims, he added.

Similar to GPS systems in automobiles or cell phones, GPS worn by individuals track a person's movements by GPS technology encased in a bracelet or other device which a person is ordered to wear. Under Amanda's Bill, judges would be allowed to order the use of a GPS device if an evaluation shows a domestic violence case is dangerous enough to warrant use of the device.

"The whole focus has been on getting a bill to this committee that we think would be workable and would provide a tool to the judiciary," Stumbo said.

HB 1 now goes to the full House for its consideration.

Diana Ross is thanked by House Speaker Greg Stumbo after the House Judiciary Committee approved legislation Thursday aimed at protecting domestic violence victims. Stumbo's legislation, House Bill 1, is known as the "Amanda Ross Domestic Violence Prevention Act" in honor of Ross's daughter, who was shot and killed in Lexington last September. The legislation would allow judges to determine if dangerous domestic violence offenders should wear electronic devices that can monitor their locations.

Candidates

Incumbent Ronnie Akers, now joins challenger Dean Hall in the race for magistrate in District 4.

Another incumbent filing this week was District Judge Eric D. Hall, who is seeking another term in the 31st District, Division 2.

Two others filed to run for election in the upcoming May primary this week, both of them hopefuls for positions as constables.

Roger Rowe, of Prestonsburg, filed to run for District 1 constable along with Barry Hopkins, of Minnie, who has filed paperwork in hopes of winning the race for District 3 constable.

At least one another packet was picked up at the county clerk's office as of Thursday afternoon, according to clerks. The filing packet requested was for the position of county judge-executive, which would give sitting Judge-Executive R.D. "Doc" Marshall his first challenger.

The deadline to file is Jan. 26 at 4 p.m.

that is farthest from the water meter is another means of avoiding having water freeze off during cold spells.

If, despite your efforts, your water lines freeze off and you cannot locate or reach the frozen area, officials suggest that you call a licensed plumber if possible.

Roadways had just started clearing from earlier in the week and this past weekend when snowfall again started Thursday afternoon, sending road crews out to apply salt to iced over primary and secondary roads.

Officials say they are doing the best to prepare for the conditions until the cold front passes.

Your Heart is Talking Are you Listening?

We all know heart attack is the No. 1 killer of men in the United States yet every man experiences heart attack in a different way. You don't have to have all of the symptoms—or even the most common ones—to be having a heart attack.

When it comes to your heart, you can be your own best friend...but you have to listen.

• Chest Pain

This is the major sign of a heart attack for men. The pain is often described as crushing, burning, tightness or pressure. It often starts in the center of the chest and radiates outward. Seek care immediately.

• Shortness of Breath

An inability to breathe, or the feeling that you're just not getting enough air, is another important sign. Seek immediate medical attention.

• Upper Body Discomfort

Men who've had heart attacks also report feeling pain or discomfort in the arms, back, neck, jaw or stomach. You may have one or more of these symptoms, or none.

• Other Signs

A feeling of anxiety, uneasiness, dizziness, persistent nausea and cold sweats are all signs that can occur before or during a heart attack.

Whether you're a man or a woman, if you have one or more symptoms of a heart attack, call 9-1-1 right away. When it comes to your heart, time is muscle. The quicker you act, the better your chances of a complete recovery.

The heart experts at King's Daughters stand ready 24/7. Our accredited Chest Pain Center averages a door-to-balloon time of just 52 minutes. That's significantly better than the national standard of 90 minutes. And we do every major heart procedure—and more of them than anyone in the region.

Your heart deserves expert care.

PMC raises approximately $350K for heart institute

PIKEVILLE - Pikeville Medical Center raised approximately $350,000 for its Heart Institute during a New Year's Eve Ball held on Dec. 31, at the Mark V Lounge in Pikeville. All proceeds raised from the event will go towards purchasing an EP (Electrophysiology Study) Lab. The project is expected to cost $1 million.

An EP Study is a precise procedure that provides critical information that is crucial to accurately diagnosing and treating heart arrhythmias, or abnormal heart rhythms. During the study, an electrophysiologist collects data about the flow of electricity during actual events.

As a result, EP studies can help locate the specific areas in the heart tissue that give rise to the abnormal electrical impulses that cause arrhythmias. This detailed electrical flow information provides valuable diagnostic and treatment information. Based on this data, the specialist may choose to place a pacemaker or perform radiofrequency ablation, which freezes or burns the cause of the abnormality.

To prepare for this unprecedented advancement in healthcare, Pikeville Medical Center hired Dr. Michael Antimisiaris, the region's only electrophysiologist.

Dr. Bill Harris, an interventional cardiologist in the Heart Institute, said the addition of Dr. Antimisiaris provides Pikeville Medical Center a complete continuum of care when it comes to cardiac services.

"I worked with Dr. Antimisiaris when I practiced in Lexington years ago," Dr. Harris said. "He is a wonderful physician who cares deeply about the diagnosis and treatment of his patients. A good EP doctor is hard to find, and I believe we have found one of the very best."

When patients ask about electrophysiology studies, Dr. Harris said he likes to use a simple analogy.

"I like to say that we, the interventional cardiologist, are the plumbers and the electrophysiologists are the electricians," Dr. Harris added. "Sometimes you need to have an electrician come in and see if everything is working properly."

During the New Year's Eve Ball, patrons were treated to a performance by 1960s music icon Bobby Goldsboro and The Trendells before ringing in the New Year in style.

Pikeville Medical Center had plenty to celebrate in 2009. The hospital was recognized as the National Hospital of the Year recipient by the American Alliance of Healthcare Providers, surpassing other leading medical facilities such as The Mayo Clinic, The Cleveland Clinic, Johns Hopkins, Duke University and Vanderbilt University Medical Center.

Additionally, PMC was recognized by Modern Healthcare

Magazine as one of the nation's "Best Places to Work." The hospital's Heart

Institute also attained national accolades in 2009, becoming the first hospital in Kentucky - and among the first 10 medical facilities in the nation - to earn the highest accreditation by

'S.W.A.T.'

by TOM DOTY
Times Columnist

Police drama meets "Magnificent Seven" styled action in this remake of the classic ABC series that focused on the special weapons and tactics squad of the Los Angeles Police Department.

This one starts off with a bang, actually several of them, as armored thieves shoot it out with the LAPD while trying to flee a bank heist. Two robbers make a break for their getaway vehicle and are gunned down, while the other thieves wisely opt to stay in the bank and announce that they have hostages.

Meanwhile, two members of the S.W.A.T. team (Gamble and Street) are able to sneak into the building. They opt to ignore their radios, which are broadcasting a "hold your fire" message, and take down the two suspects. Gamble lives up to his name and shoots through a hostage to nail his target.

The men are brought before their irate captain, who informs them that they are off the unit and will have to work as equipment clerks. Gamble refuses to accept this banishment and resigns, while Street takes the hit. Later, the pair argue when Gamble assumes that Street sold him out to keep his job. The incident has hurt the stay in the bank and announce that they have hostages.

Editor's Note: For years, Floyd County Times founder and former publisher Norman Allen wrote a weekly column that looked at Floyd County through his eyes. His columns are being reprinted due to request.

A fond wish in which we all join:
May the fuel shortage be short.

HOW ABOUT THAT?

This new zoning to keep some of us on "slow" time has its quirks. The same man who lost his coat reminds me that a body could leave Louisa, only 40 miles away, at 8 o'clock, say, and arrive here before the time he started, or vice versa, he could leave Prestonsburg for Louisa, and on arriving there, learn he'd been almost two hours making the short drive.

DON'T SAY THAT!

Several acquaintances have been inquiring after my plans about open house, now that we're in new quarters. None of their comments excited me till one started to say I ought to have a housewar—and I stopped him right there, in mid-syllable.

Old Christmas set for Sunday at May House

by FLOYD DAVIS

Everyone knows there are twelve days of Christmas. We sing about them, we time the hanging and removal of our Christmas decorations around them, we even trace the origins of religious schisms and disputes to them. But how did it begin?

The 12 days originated from a change in the Christian calendar in the year 1582. The Julian Calendar, in use since the time of the Roman Empire, was proving to be inadequate to the precise measurements of time required by the European Renaissance and the budding Age of Reason. Pope Gregory XIII introduced a new calendar, our present Gregorian Calendar, to correct this deficiency. Since Pope Gregory had no authority outside the Catholic Church, nations were slow to adopt the new calendar, especially Protestant countries who viewed most things Catholic with suspicion. England and her American Colonies did not adopt the new calendar until 1752, some 24 years before the American Revolution and more than 150 years after the founding of the Jamestown Colony in Virginia. This meant that the ancestors of Eastern Kentucky's current residents were already deep into the frontier before the Gregorian Calendar was implemented in America and that their isolation would encourage resistance to the change.

The Gregorian Calendar was eventually accepted in the Appalachian Region, but the date for the original Christmas, Jan. 6, was preserved in folk lore and is still remembered and celebrated. Some called it "Little Christmas", others looked to the Church calendar and celebrate Jan. 6 as Epiphany, the coming of the wise men. But most simply called it Old Christmas and celebrated it on January 6th as the end of the Christmas season (which is why Christmas decorations are generally removed by this date). Legends and folk-traditions grew up around the holiday, the best know of which is that barnyard animals kneel to pray at midnight on January 6th—something my father claimed to have actually witnessed when he was a young man. By the 1960's, Appalachia's isolation had been broken and the celebration of Old Christmas was nearly lost. However, a Prestonsburg resident and musician, Edith Fitzpatrick James, revived the tradition through her music students and reintroduced the celebration of the holiday to new generations.

This Sunday, Jan. 10, between the hours of 2 and 5 p.m., the May House Foundation and the Friends of Middle Creek invite the community to join us in the celebration of this traditional holiday and the close of the Christmas season at the Samuel May House in Prestonsburg. Light refreshments will be served.

Sunday is anniversary of Civil War battle

by FLOYD DAVIS

It was January 1862, and the Civil War was going badly from the Union's view. An overzealous captain had nearly sparked a British-American war by forcefully removing two confederate diplomats from a British ship in mid-ocean; most of the Union Army sat inactive in Washington with Lincoln and George McClellan (commander of the Union Army) barely on speaking terms; and in eastern Kentucky a Mexican war hero and a future president of the United States prepared for battle along a flooded stream called Middle Creek.

This Sunday, Jan. 10, the Friends of Middle Creek and the Kentucky National Guard, Prestonsburg Post, will assemble at the Middle Creek National Battlefield at 11 a.m. to commemorate the 148th anniversary of this battle to recognize and honor the soldiers that fought there. Please join us there to honor those men and to recognize the role the Civil War played in Eastern Kentucky's history.

5 bad foods

In a world where the list is king, doesn't it make sense to know what not to eat in addition to what you should eat? That's how I look at it and you know how much I love me a good list! The foods you should never eat are deserving of their own list too, doncha think? But I've done one better on this particular list. While I've named the culprit in disturbing your peace (health and weight), I've also named the hero in restoring your well-being (big applause now). Let's get right to business then and get rolling with this list. If you stick with me, you'll know how to dodge these negative nutritional bullets and make better choices at the grocery store and when dining out.

Culprit #1:

Deep Fried Anything. Sorry, but if you order deep fried, make deep fried or even use the words deep fried, you might as well look for a cardiologist at the same time. Deep frying is positively the worst possible choice for having anything prepared. And don't let the words, "lightly fried" fool you either, as in tempura! It's all wickedness!

Hero #1

Sauteed for Flavor. This cooking technique uses minimal oil (preferably olive oil) and gives your food the flavor and complexity you're looking for. I sauté my green beans after steaming them in olive oil (not virgin, that's too fine an oil for beans), a lot of fresh garlic, a little sea salt and a liberal grinding of fresh pepper. Unbelievable taste with very little fat and no bad fat, either.

Q I am a nurse, and I was recently diagnosed with an MRSA infection on my leg. The last time I took care of a hospital patient with MRSA was six months ago. Could this infection of MRSA come from a patient I saw that long ago, or did I get it somewhere else?

A MRSA (methicillin-resistant Staphylococcus aureus) is a subgroup of the bacteria which causes staph infections. Typically, penicillin-based compounds are used to kill staphylococcus aureus bacteria, but this particular strain does not respond to that treatment.

Like all staph infections, MRSA usually begins with small red bumps that look like insect bites or pimples, followed by large, painful abscesses. If these bacteria move into the body, serious and even life-threatening infections can occur.

Staphylococcus aureus bacteria account for 80 percent of all skin infections. Of those 80 percent, 20 percent fall into the MRSA subtype. Many years ago, MRSA was less common and reported only in the hospital setting. Now it occurs in the community setting as well, hence the newer name, CA-MRSA, or community-acquired MRSA. In recent years, we have seen CA-MRSA contracted among children in schools and day care centers and by people of all ages in the community at large. These bacteria do respond to certain medications, including the antibiotic vancomycin, which is often used with drug-resistant bacteria.

As for your question about contracting a delayed MRSA infection from contact with a patient whom you saw six months ago—that is highly unlikely. Most bacteria are not able to live outside of the body for more than a few hours.

That said, given the right environment, temperature and humidity, bacteria can grow anywhere, and they could potentially survive for a few months. This would require a wet surface containing certain nutrients bacteria need to grow—and it would require that the surface not be washed for several months. I should hope that such conditions would be impossible to find in any hospital setting.

Even then, just touching a contaminated surface will not necessarily give you an infection. Intact, healthy skin resists most bacteria and prevents its penetration. Infections most often occur when bacteria enter a break in the skin, such as a cut, scrap, insect bite or cracked dry skin.

As a nurse I am sure you are well schooled in "standard precautions"—a term that encompasses the medical practices used to prevent the spread of infection within a hospital. Standard precautions include wearing gloves while changing dressings, making beds or drawing blood. All such patient interactions should be preceded and followed by thorough hand-washing, especially when the patient has an infectious condition. When standard precautions are strictly followed, a skin infection should not spread from patient to nurse or vice-versa.

GOOD HEALTH

'Heart disease' covers lots of territory

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Can you give me a good definition of "heart disease"? I find the phrase very confusing. —A.T.

ANSWER: It's confusing because it covers so much territory and deals with so many different conditions. The most prevalent form of heart disease is coronary (heart) artery disease—CAD, a buildup of cholesterol, fat and other materials in the arteries that supply the heart with blood. The buildup obstructs blood flow to the heart muscle, and the result is angina (chest pain) with partial obstruction, or a heart attack with complete obstruction.

Heart-valve disease constitutes another group of heart ailments. The heart has four valves that keep blood moving from one heart chamber to the next and prevent backflow of blood into the chamber it just left. A valve can narrow and present an obstacle to the free flow of blood, or it can leak and allow backflow of blood. For example, a narrowed mitral heart valve is mitral stenosis; a leaky mitral heart valve is mitral regurgitation.

The heart is a muscle. Diseases that directly affect the heart muscle are cardiomyopathies ("cardio" is heart; "myo," muscle; "pathy," disease). Some are inherited. Others develop on their own. This is another large group of heart diseases.

Congestive heart failure arises when the heart becomes such a weak pump that blood backs up into the lungs, causing shortness of breath, and into the rest of the body, causing ankle and feet swelling. Congestive heart failure may result from any of the above three heart conditions.

Heartbeat disturbances—arrhythmias (uh-RITH-me-uh)—come about from a misfiring of the inborn electrical activity of the heart. Atrial fibrillation is a common arrhythmia. Arrhythmias often disturb heart pumping and lead to heart malfunction.

Congenital heart disease is another group of heart diseases. They are defects in the way the heart formed during embryonic and fetal development. Holes in the partitions that separate the heart chambers are examples of congenital heart disease.

Congestive heart failure, a common consequence of heart disease, is discussed at length in the pamphlet on that topic. Readers can order a copy by writing: Dr. Donohue—No. 103W, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Enclose a check or money order (no cash) for $4.75 U.S./$6 Canada with the recipient's printed name and address. Please allow four weeks for delivery.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am very worried about my 68-year-old boyfriend. He has type 2 diabetes. He eats sugar without control—cakes, ice cream, regular soda pop. Most of the time, his sugar is over 300, sometimes over 480. He takes medicine for his diabetes, so he thinks he can eat whatever he wants. What can happen? —G.A.

ANSWER: You have justification to be worried. So does your boyfriend. Uncontrolled diabetes leads to artery hardening, strokes, heart attacks, nerve damage, kidney failure and blindness. Medicine is only a part of the treatment. Diet is the other part. He must limit his total daily carbohydrates, not just sugar. Carbohydrates are starches and sugars. The only way he'll come to grips with this is to talk to a dietitian or a certified diabetes counselor. He should do so quickly.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him or request an order form of available health newsletters at P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. ### Diva

Culprit #2

White Bread. Thud. Did you hear that? That's the sound of white bread landing in your gut. It's squishy, gooey and gluey and it's adhering to the sides of your intestines. Do you feel it? Blech. Considering the negative nutrition associated with denatured flour, why would anyone make that choice in this enlightened century? Lose the white bread already!

Hero #2

Sprouted Wheat Bread. Okay, check this out. When you sprout grain, then make it into bread, not only is a lot easier on your digestion, it's packed full of nutrients traditional bread doesn't have! Consider this: sprout your body looks at sprouted grain as veggies, not starch! That's good news if your thighs sprout inches just by eating a sandwich with two pieces of bread!

Culprit #3

Shortening and/or Margarine. Solidified fats get that way through a process called hydrogenation, which in turn, makes a multitude of sins called trans fats. Yes, we've all heard how bad trans fats are, right? Well, not only does margarine lower your HDL (good cholesterol) it also raises the bad (LDL). Lx-nay all the way on margarine (and it's evil twin shortening, which is essentially unflavored margarine).

Hero #3

Butter. Halallelujah and pass the butter already! Butter, though a definite saturated fat, will raise your good cholesterol unlike margarine. Just use it very moderately. Try better butter. Butter, unsalted butter and half extra virgin olive oil whipped together and kept in the fridge in a covered dish. Just like soft spread margarine only 300 times better!

Culprit #4

White Rice. Oh, My. Gosh. Are you really still eating white rice? This depiction of a grain is full of nothingness. The fiber is missing, the B vitamins are virtually unheard of and the glycemic load will take you one step closer to Type 2 Diabetes, if that's your go-to carb! Dismiss this!

Hero #4

Brown Rice. With three times the amount of fiber, more B vitamins as well as other nutrients, the carb load on brown rice is much easier on your body and a smaller amount will satiate, too. What's not to love about that, especially if you're trying to lose a few pounds?

Culprit #5

White Sugar. To quote

Gomer Pyle, "Surprise, surprise, surprise." I bet you knew sugar would be on the list, didn't you? How can it not be. Did you know that consuming white sugar will actually stunt your white blood cells from doing their important health preserving work? Yes, sugar impacts your immune system! It doesn't just eat your teeth and add to your belly fat, it disrupts immune function. Repent from your sugar eating ways and return to the healthy fold!

Hero #5

Dark Chocolate and Fruit. You thought I was going to list alternative or artificial sweeteners, didn't you? Studies have shown that people who consume diet drinks tend to gain weight doing so. Why is this? The hypothesis is you can't fool your body like you think—if it tastes sweet, your body may still react to it and gain weight. Strunks, doesn't it? But we need to LOSE our sweet teeth, people! That's the problem, not finding the golden panacea that tastes just like sugar. If you eat something sweet, have some fruit and an ounce of very dark chocolate (FULL of phytonutrients, yay!) Once you get over your addiction to sugar, this decadent treat (a bowl of fresh raspberries with melted dark chocolate drizzled over the top) will knock you flat. You'll happily say no to donuts!

the bumper strip which read, "Eat More Possum"—has, like the cat, brought in something again. It's a photograph bearing these lines of Walt Whitman's,

From this hour, freedom!
Going where I like,
my own master...

Reading that, you would expect to see an eagle in majestic flight, exploring the heavens in utter freedom. But the photograph alongside the poet's lines is that of a bird dog carefully climbing a woven wire fence, one paw atop the post, the other on the top strand, a hind foot at the top and his head stuck well forward, looking off there into the distance, as if shading his eyes in search of a bone that needed gnawing.

MYSTERIOUS VISITORS

Every community, I suppose, has at some time or other, its mystery. Ours still has two, as oldtimers still wonder who those two men were, whence and why they came, their antecedents, et cetera.

The first was known as Cap'n Jenks. No more, no less. He arrived, unheralded, walked into a farmhouse proceeded to "board among the scholars," so to speak, over a period of years.

Some surmised that he was an outlaw, hiding away from the law. Nobody ever knew. Nobody got around to asking him, and he never volunteered any information.

The burly individual sometimes would partake too freely of the grapes or "caww," and on such occasions would barge through a door, into a family's living quarters, seat himself, speak never a word, and chill all who beheld him with baleful glances from bloodshot eyes. At other times he worked about the places he visited, was tenderness itself to women and children.

Then one day he disappeared. Word came back later that he had been shot to death in a mountain cabin. He had walked inside a home, unannounced, without a knock, and a nervous householder had written him to Cap'n Jenks.

The other mystery figure is nameless. He didn't know his name when my father pulled him from Salt Lick Creek into which he had fallen from his horse on a winter afternoon. A neat, clean-cut old gent, he was, once we got him thawed out, but he could not tell us his name, or where he was from, or where he was going. He mentioned children but couldn't remember who or where they were.

He spent the night, ate breakfast the next morning, mounted his horse, said his goodbyes and rode off. As he left we noticed that he was wearing two ties, but put it down to the general pattern of his eccentricity and thought no more of it.

A few hours later, the mailman from farther up the creek left in the mailbox a large envelope addressed in a beautiful hand to my father. One of the ties he had worn, which was my Dad's, was in the envelope. But it was the note inside that I have never forgotten. It read:

I long have known that I am a kleptomaniac, but not till now did I know I was a kleptomaniac.

Ships that come to view and pass over the horizon to the unknown. It's a little late to bring these two into print, but I still occasionally wonder about them...as witness the foregoing.

Salome's Stars Weekly Horoscope

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Use that Arian charm to help make a difficult workplace transition easier for everyone. News about a long-awaited decision can be confusing. Don't jump to conclusions.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Although you might well be tempted to be more extravagant than you should be at this time, I'm betting you'll let your sensible Bovine instinct guide you toward moderation.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) An opportunity for travel could come with some problems regarding travel companions and other matters. So be sure you read all the fine print before you start packing.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Make an effort to complete your usual workplace tasks before volunteering for extra duty. Scrambling to catch up later on could create some resentment among your colleagues.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A financial matter could have you rethinking your current spending plans. You might want to check your budget to see where you can cut back on expenses until the situation improves.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) One way to make your case for that promotion you've been hoping for might be to put your planning skills to work in helping to shape up a project that got out of hand. Good luck.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Be careful about "experts" who have no solid business background. Instead, seek advice on enhancing your business prospects from bona fide sources with good success records.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Standing up to support a colleague's viewpoint—even if it's unpopular—can be difficult if you feel outnumbered. But you'll win plaudits for your honesty and courage.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) While progress continues on resolving that recurring problem, you might feel it's taking too long. But these things always need to develop at their own pace. Be patient.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Someone close to you might have a financial problem and seek your advice. If you do decide to get involved, insist on seeing everything that might be relevant to this situation.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A personal matter takes an interesting turn. The question is, do you want to follow the new path or take time out to reconsider the change? Think this through before deciding.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Moving into a new career is a big step. Check that offer carefully with someone who has been there, done that, and has the facts you'll need to help you make your decision.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your warmth and generosity both of spirit and substance endears you to everyone.

Can kids really wear out power-window switches?

by TOM and RAY MAGLIOZZI

Dear Tom and Ray:

When I was a kid, my siblings and I loved to play with the power windows — up a little, down a little, up some more, down some more, all the way up. Our elders always told us to cut it out because we'd wear out the switches. Now that I have kids of my own who love to do the same thing, I find it annoying, so I tell them to cut it out because they'll wear out the switches. But it makes me wonder — can you really wear out power-window switches, or were my elders fibbing, just the way I am? — John RAY: I don't think I'd worry too much about the switches, John.

TOM: No. Switches are cheap. It's the broken power-window motors and regulators that'll have you cursing the little rascals.

RAY: All of those parts — the switches, the motors and the window regulators (the mechanical pieces that actually move the glass up and down) — have thousands of cycles in them. But not an infinite number.

TOM: So, let's say you have two kids, and we'll assume the little tykes are confined to the back seat. On a three-hour trip to Grandma's, let's say each kid works one rear window — up and down, up and down, continuously. That's about 2,000 cycles right there. After a 4,000 round trip, if the kids aren't sleeping off candy corns after visiting Grandma.

RAY: If you make that trip once a year, within three years or so, you're going to need two window motors. And, depending on the car (sometimes you have to buy the regulator and the motor as one unit), they can cost anywhere between $200 and $500 per window!

TOM: So, you have two reasonable choices, John. One is to invent a coin-operated power-window mechanism. For a nickel or a dime, your kids will be able to raise or lower the window once, while contributing to their eventual repair.

RAY: Or you could simply limit the kids' playtime with the windows. You don't want to ruin all their fun, so give them a couple of minutes to play, and then when you start to smell smoke, tell them "Time's up," and deactivate their window switches (which you can do from the driver's control panel). Then, hopefully, they'll turn their destructive instincts to something less expensive, like opening and closing the ashtrays until their doors fall off.

Doctor needs a reliable car in the snow

Dear Tom and Ray:

I am a doctor living in an area that typically can get 6 to 8 inches of snow on the ground at some point in the winter. Snow plows are not always out on the roads when I drive. For this reason, I need a four-wheel-drive vehicle; however, I don't know if SUVs, like the Honda CR-V or BMW X3 or X5, are superior in snow to lower-riding all-wheel-drive cars, like Audis or Subarus. Do I really need to be higher up in an SUV, or could I get through snowdrifts in a sedan? I get concerned about it because I have to be at the hospital no matter what the conditions are outside. This dictates what I drive, even if gas mileage is poor. — Claire

TOM: Well, there are two issues that determine how well you get around in the snow.

RAY: One is traction. And for traction, any all-wheel-drive vehicle — car or SUV — will keep you moving on snowy roads. If one wheel is slipping on snow or slush at any given moment, one or more of the other wheels always will have enough grip to pull you through.

TOM: The other issue is ground clearance. If you have, say, 2 feet of unplowed, drifting snow on the roads, and you're driving a car whose floor is close to the ground, the car can get "hung up" on a hardened mound of snow — with its drive wheels unable to reach the ground. Granted, you'd have to be pretty unlucky to get hung up so that all four of your wheels were not touching the ground. But if you did, it wouldn't matter how many wheel drive you had — you wouldn't go anywhere.

RAY: But that's not an issue for you. Six to 8 inches of snow is what those of us in the great frozen north call "a light dusting." So you should have no trouble at all getting by with an all-wheel-drive car — some of which (like the Subaru Outback) have heightened ground clearance, too.

TOM: Cars generally are safer and more comfortable. They handle better, ride better and get better mileage. So, why suffer in an SUV all year if you really don't need one?

RAY: And besides, cars are easier to get in and out of. So you'll never have to suffer the embarrassment of stopping by the emergency room and asking a colleague to have a look at your SUV-induced groin pull.

the Society of Chest Pain Centers.

In 2009, PMC constructed two GE Healthcare Inova 3100 cardiovascular suites. Construction of a third suite is expected in 2010. The all-digital cardiovascular imaging system gives cardiologists the ability to view and treat coronary artery blockages that could cause heart attacks or other serious cardiovascular diseases.

Additionally, PMC has added a Mac Lab Hemodynamic monitoring system and vessel navigation software called IVUS, which is a phenomenal technology to make catheter insertion safe and effective. The hospital was also the first in Kentucky to purchase the Vivid E9 cardiovascular ultrasound, a 4D imaging device that allows physicians to precisely detect and diagnose pathology that they may not have been able to see before.

"We take great pride in providing world-class services to our patients," said Pikeville

Medical Center President and Chief Executive Officer Walter E. May. "With this commitment comes enormous costs, and events, such as the New Year's Eve Ball, allow us to raise the money necessary to continue to elevate our level of care to the highest of standards."

May, his wife, Pam, and Paul E. and Judi Patton served as the honorary chairs for the event. Mr. Patton, Kentucky's 59th governor, currently serves as president of Pikeville College.

"Since 1924, Pikeville Medical Center has played a vital role in providing quality medical services to our region," Paul E. and Judi Patton said in a letter to guests. "This has enabled our citizens to live longer and more productive lives because of the accessibility patients have to Pikeville Medical Center's world-class services."

The first releases of the new year included a real treat for the family and a few surprises.

■ "Cloudy with a Chance of Meatballs" — Family films work best when they're fun for everyone, and this adaptation of the children's book should appeal to the whole clan. The kids will love the goofy tale of an inventor who finds a way to control the weather by crafting a device that converts the atmosphere into fully prepared foods. Adults will dig the romance that develops between our nerdy hero and a struggling TV weather girl who lands the story. Middle-aged adults will also dig the eclectic cast, which mixes current stars with icons of the 1970s and 1980s. Only an animated movie could bring together James Caan, Anna Faris, Bruce Campbell, Mr. T, and Neil Patrick Harris.

■ "Adam" — You may have missed this drama/love story when it played theaters but check out the DVD for a thoughtful examination of the struggles of a man with Asperger's syndrome who falls for a young woman. The cast and careful approach make this so much better than a Lifetime Channel illness-of-the-week effort.

■ "The Final Destination" — The latest film in this series will definitely appeal to gore fans, but those searching for a thoughtful terror tale are advised to skip it. The story, once again, focuses on a group of youngsters who avoid a certain death when one of them has a premonition of their impending doom. The grim reaper is not amused, and comes calling. This one does not challenge the formula of previous efforts and simply exists to offer unbelievably complex death scenes. Fun if you liked the others, but frustrating if you were expecting the series to develop any new ideas.

■ "Ajita Wilson Double Feature" — Italian sex-education doesn't get much better than these efforts, which feature Ms. Wilson. Perhaps that's a misnomer as she began life as a mister but changed that status with a brief trip to a Swiss clinic. Here Ms. Wilson (who worked for big names like Dario Argento) struts her stuff as a stripper in one film and a prison escapee in the other. Both films are big on exploitation elements and feel like 1970s grindhouse fare. They aren't very challenging but they're sordid enough to make you feel like having a wash when they're over.

Next week the rentals will clean up their act with the release of the Iraq war drama, "The Hurt Locker."

Strange ... but true

by SAMANTHA WEAVER

■ It was American humorist Eleanar who came up with the following definition: "Statistics: The only science that enables different experts using the same figures to draw different conclusions."

■ The Emperor Charlemagne, who conquered much of Western and Central Europe during the first century, had an unusual relationship with his daughters. He refused to allow them to get married, but he evidently had no objections to their forming, shall we say, less formal relationships. He died on his illegitimate grandchildren and even gave money and gifts to their fathers.

■ If you look at a list of the names of the 50 states, you'll find every letter of the alphabet except Q.

■ For reasons unknown, a law in New Jersey forbids the sale of cabbage on Sunday.

■ You won't be surprised to learn that the most dangerous device that is common in the modern world is the automobile. You might be surprised to learn, though, that the second most dangerous is the stair step.

■ You've probably never heard of Countess Rosa Branicka, but she accomplished an amazing feat. In the mid-19th century, at the age of 63, the wealthy Polish noblewoman became ill. The diagnosis given by experts in Germany was breast cancer, and immediate surgery was recommended. For reasons unknown, the countess declined the treatment, then set about purchasing her own surgical instruments. Once all the tools were assembled, Branicka checked into a hotel in Paris and removed the tumor herself. Reports indicate that she healed well and quickly, and lived to the ripe old age of 82.

■ The only chemical element that is not a solid at a temperature of absolute zero is helium; it remains a liquid.

Thought for the Day
"I have not failed. I've just found 10,000 ways that won't work." — Thomas A. Edison department's profile (and the LAPD sure knows that song by now), so the captain brings in an old school S.W.A.T. leader, Hondo, to revamp the team. He goes right to work and enlists Street as his driver as he interviews several candidates. They include:

Lagoon

■ Deke — a street cop who can run very fast.

■ Sanchez — a feisty Latino whose tough guy reputation obscures the fact that she is actually a woman.

■ Burrell — a squeaky-clean rookie that no one trusts because he's an upstanding, non-cursing vegetarian.

Suffice to say that Burrell doesn't get the gig. Street gets reinstated alongside the new team members and we're off to the races with a training montage and the requisite team building scenes.

Meanwhile, an arrogant French crime kingpin gets nailed for diving with a busted tail light. This turns out to be a good deal for justice as he had just come back from slashing his uncle's throat. Unfortunately, the press gets hold of his status as an international criminal and they begin covering his every move and he finds that he likes the attention in a Britney Spears sort of way. He takes advantage of the coverage to offer a $100 million reward to whoever springs him.

This offer turns L.A. into something resembling "Thunder Dome." The stage is now set for our S.W.A.T. team to escort the French felon to a maximum security prison whilst an array of bad guys, with enough firepower to level Newark, N.J., make their move to collect the reward.

This exercise takes up the second half of the film, but it's totally worth it as things finally get moving. What ensues are a host of explosions, fist fights, betrayals and all manner of mayhem on a budget that would have funded the original show for 15 additional seasons (it only ran for two).

This all works well enough due to smart direction from Clark Johnson. Mr. Johnson brings a lot of class to the proceedings, which is no doubt cultivated while working on TV's "Homicide" and "The Wire."

Fans of those shows will see several familiar faces in the cast but where this film goes wrong are in its leading roles. Samuel L. Jackson is woefully underused as Hondo. He must play second fiddle to Colin Farrell, as Street, and it's a big mistake. Farrell is terrible here. His character is underwritten as well, and an opportunity to have him grappling with rating out his partner is totally botched.

He's outshined by LL Cool J as Deke and Michelle Rodriguez as Sanchez. Both actors get to show off their hard earned physiques and they get the better lines.

Even further down the cast you find some great work. Jeremy Renner ("Dahmer") steals every scene he's in as the strutting Gambler. He makes the rivalry with Street work, despite getting little back from Farrell. Josh Charles ("Sports Night") also makes an impression as the team's hot dog. His final scene with Jackson is a corker that leaves him without a chance of ever getting into S.W.A.T. 2.

Throw in a few cameos by members of the original cast (Steve Forrest has a blink-and-you'll-miss-it moment, but he's still a S.W.A.T. leader) and you've got a fine homage to one of the better cop shows of the 1970s.

Best line: "You only roll in John Woo movies. Not in real life."

2003, rated PG-13.

4 Out Of 5 Americans Are Unaware That Home Fires Are The Most Common Disaster Threat.

Preparedness is your best defense against deadly fires.
Use these checklists to make your home safe and prepare your family.

To prevent fires before they start:

- ☐ Never leave burning candles unattended
- ☐ Keep fuel (paper, clothing, bedding) at least three feet away from heat sources

To stay safe from fires:

- ☐ Create a home fire escape plan
- ☐ Practice your plan at least twice a year
- ☐ Install smoke alarms and escape ladders
- ☐ Replace smoke alarm batteries at least once a year
- ☐ Purchase and learn how to use fire extinguishers safely
