Knott County bans pain clinics

by SHELDON COMPTON
STAFF WRITER

HINDMAN — Pain clinics are a regional problem, drug officials say, but now one county has decided to ban them altogether within its jurisdiction.

The Knott County Fiscal Court passed an ordinance last week to ban pain clinics in that county, a move they are hoping will curb the overpowering drug problem throughout that county.

Officials with the Floyd County Fiscal Court could not be reached before press time to comment on the neighboring county's decision, but there have been a number of arrests at local pain clinics, most recently in the county seat of Prestonsburg.

The city drug enforcement unit and the sheriff's department in Floyd County have made several arrests outside pain clinics and have also upped their patrols of these facilities.

Knott County officials say they believe the clinics are a key in the widespread distribution of painkillers to those who do not always need them, adding to a prescription drug problem that continues to grow worse in an area already infamous nationwide for prescription drug abuse.

Sex abuse suspects to appear in court

by JARRID DEATON
FEATURES WRITER

PRESTONSBURG — A Cow Creek couple indicted on sex abuse charges in August will be in court today for a pretrial conference.

Eddie A. Clay, 46, and Rhonda Clay, 50, are facing charges of sexual abuse for alleged incidents that occurred from June 1, 2009, through June 30, 2009, involving a person less than 12 years of age.

Eddie Clay is charged with first-degree sodomy for allegedly engaging in deviate sexual intercourse with a person under 12, and first-degree sexual abuse for allegedly having sexual contact with a person under the age of 12.

Rhonda Clay is charged with complicity to first-degree sodomy for allegedly aiding, counseling or attempting to aid Eddie Clay in engaging in deviate sexual intercourse with a person under the age of 12, and first-degree sexual abuse for allegedly having sexual contact with a person under the age of 12.

Kentucky State Police Det. Ben Cramer appeared before the grand jury as a witness in the case.

The Clays, who were indicted on the charges on August 18, are scheduled to appear in Floyd Circuit Court at 9 a.m. today for their pretrial conferences.

Groups seek to expand smoke ban statewide

by SHELDON COMPTON
STAFF WRITER

FRANKFORT — It wasn't all that long ago when the city of Prestonsburg followed other communities, most notably and nearby the city of Pikeville, in passing a smoking ban that placed a wide range of restrictions on smokers.

Now a coalition of local, state and national health advocates are pushing to see a statewide move to ban smoking from workplaces, including bars and restaurants.

The group plans to announce new polling figures during a press conference in Frankfort tomorrow afternoon at 1 p.m. at the Capitol Rotunda in Frankfort. The groups involved say the polls show "widespread support" for the move.

Among those either speaking at the conference or attending are state Rep. Susan Westrom (D-Fayette), Scott Lockard, public health director of the Clark County Health Department and Danny McGoldrick, vice-president of Research Campaign for Tobacco-Free Kids, among others.

In August 2009, the Prestonsburg City Council passed a smoking ordinance by a 5-2 margin. The new law, still in effect, prohibits smoking in all public buildings.

The ordinance also outlined several other aspects of the law that would qualify as violations.

In addition to the basic tenets of the law, city leaders voted 5-2 to require those smoking to stand at least 10 feet from main entrances to buildings and to see that individuals found in violation be fined $50, with businesses fined $100 for the first violation, $200 for the second and $300 for the third and further violations.

These components came as amendments, including another that allowed for restaurants to develop outdoor seating sections for smokers.

Though passed in August 2009, the law did not take effect until the following January. Prestonsburg law enforcement has had no problems, they say, with enforcement of the law.

Three telework forums sponsored by the Eastern Kentucky Distance Earning Initiative will take place this month to help participants learn about telework career opportunities in Eastern Kentucky.

The events will take place at the Letcher County Health Department in Whitesburg at 6 p.m. on Jan. 11, the Mountain Association for Community Development in Paintsville at 5 p.m. on Jan. 20, and the Kentucky School of Craft in Hindman at 6 p.m. on Jan. 31.

The forums are sponsored by a consortium of Kentucky Community and Technical College member schools, businesses and the Eastern Kentucky Concentrated Employment Program Inc.

"Work is no longer a place you go, it's something you do," said Joshua Ball, coordinator of the Eastern Kentucky Distance Earning Initiative program. "This program is not about job creation, it is about creating opportunities for Eastern Kentuckians to work for progressive and innovative companies that are leading the charge to compete in the global marketplace."

According to Ball, there are currently thousands of jobs available in a variety of different fields like data entry, clerical, medical transcription and coding, IT support, computer programming, sales, tutoring and teaching, and variety. "Even during a time when jobs are scarce, IBK has over 2,000 telework opportunities available," Ball said. "This strategy helps eliminate some of our region's greatest barriers when it comes to job creation — geography and infrastructure."

Those interested in telework will receive free resume and interview coaching at the forums, along

Pike charity in danger without help

by SHELDON COMPTON
STAFF WRITER

PIKEVILLE — A charity organization that was the target of a robbery last month is facing the sale of its warehouse by the end of the month unless more than $120,000 comes its way to buy it outright from the current owner.

HELP Charity Director Charles Sanders said HELP needs to raise or have donated $125,000 by the end of January to buy the warehouse from its current owner or they will lose a huge aspect of what HELP does in the first place.

The warehouse, according to Sanders, is where materials are stored for home repairs done for low-income families in need throughout the area. However, he says the organization cannot afford to buy the warehouse.

The home repair items stored at the warehouse are donated to HELP by Home Depot through the Appalachian Outreach program. Sanders said, adding that other bids have been placed on the warehouse hoping to purchase the building by the end of the month.

Sanders says nearly the entire budget for HELP efforts currently go toward to mission work and that there is simply nothing allotted to buy the warehouse. He has hopes donations may come from the communities the organization has served over the years.

To this end, Sanders said those wishing to make a donation can do so by contacting HELP at (606) 437-0389.

This past December, HELP was the target of a break-in and robbery when one or more individuals entered through the back of the location and took a box put out to collect donations for the Christmas season. Also, the organization's safe had been pulled loose and taken, though it had been recently been emptied.

The robbery resulted in the loss of money in the donation box and also more than $1,000 in damages. Sanders and others were still collecting donations to lessen the impact of this most recent incident when news of the warehouse came to their attention.

Clinics

this past week, Lola Patterson, director of the Knott Drug Abuse Council, said after the measure was passed, the common perception of local residents traveling exclusively outside the state to fill prescriptions is not the only means by which the drug problem continues to spread.

"When you think of pain clinics, you think of everyone in Kentucky going to a different state and you don't necessarily think about the fact that they're right in your community," Patterson said.

As for enforcement of the ordinance, it is said that the county's drug council will work with police to see that aspect carried through.

The new law, which was worked on in coordination with Knott County drug agencies partnering with county officials, went into effect Jan. 1.

education, economic development and health care."

Turner, who was first elected to office in 2001, has held the position of caucus chair since 2003. He represents Floyd, his home county, Knott, Breathitt and Letcher counties.

"As a legislator, I have always supported laws that are in the best interests of my constituency," Turner added in his statement yesterday. "I will continue to advocate legislation that improves the quality of life for the people I represent and all Kentuckians."

Turner said he intends to continue to stress fiscal responsibility in state government while working with those from across the aisle in the meantime.

"I look forward to working in a bipartisan manner with all of my Senate colleagues, Gov. Beshear and House leadership in addressing issues facing the commonwealth," Turner said.

The legislature convened at noon yesterday for a brief organizational session, which will conclude Friday. Afterwards, legislators will return to Frankfort Tuesday, Feb. 1, to continue the 2011 session.

Our View

Good bills deserve a good hearing

As the General Assembly reconvenes in Frankfort, a series of bills filed by a Northern Kentucky Republican should be given serious consideration for passage.

Rep. Addia Wuchner's "Kentucky Kids First" initiative sensibly addresses several health and education issues facing the state's children.

A large part of the initiative deals with the growing problem of childhood obesity in the state. Wuchner's agenda would tackle this problem by increasing the amount of physical activity elementary students receive, establishing nutritional and physical activity guidelines for day care centers, tracking the trend by requiring Body Mass Index measurements on school physicals, and establishing a Legislative Task Force on Childhood Obesity to further examine the problem and propose solutions.

On their own, these items make the initiative worthy of passage, as Kentucky faces severe problems down the road due to a disproportionate incidence of childhood obesity. Currently, over 25 percent of the state's children are overweight or obese, and this only leads to additional problems as those children become adults.

But Wuchner's proposals go further by addressing other problems. Among these are requirements to give parents information on Shaken Baby Syndrome, to expand screening for dyslexia, dysgraphia and other conditions, and to provide an alternative path to graduation to special needs students who cannot meet all of the requirements in a traditional high school setting.

The Kentucky Kids First initiative deserves a fair hearing, and we hope it will receive one, regardless of Wuchner's party registration in the Democratically-controlled House of Representatives. These bills are a perfect opportunity for our state's legislators to show that they can transcend everyday politics for the greater good.

Guest Column

A legislative perspective

by REP. GREG STUMBO
SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE

With the General Assembly starting its legislative session this week, now is the ideal time to take a look back at what has happened since the last one ended.

Although enacting laws is our primary function, this period is important for legislators as well, as we carry out our oversight role of state government. That work is done by 15 main committees - which range from Education to Transportation - plus eight others that review such things as government contracts and the hundreds of regulations filed every year by state agencies. Two temporary task forces also met during this time, which is known around the Capitol as the interim.

After a rough stretch caused by the worldwide recession, there were some encouraging signs that things are slowly returning to normal. In the Appropriations and Revenue Committee, we learned that our budget remains on track with its moderate growth. That's a lot different from the last two fiscal years, each of which ended with less revenue than the year before, something that hasn't happened since 1945.

The road fund is performing even better, after weathering its own difficulties as businesses and the public alike pulled back on travel. There is a cloud looming behind this silver lining, however, according to transportation officials who testified that greater use of such vehicles as hybrids is reducing the amount of money available to build and maintain our roads. Nationally, this pot of money is down a fifth over the last decade after factoring out inflation, even though we're driving more than ever.

In the Banking and Insurance Committee, another financial matter took center stage when we heard more about a new database the legislature created last year to more closely monitor those who use payday lending companies. With customers restricted to two loans at any one time, the number of transactions has dropped dramatically, from almost 300,000 a month to 175,000. This session, we could put even more restrictions on this activity.

In the follow-up to this past fall's World Equestrian Games - the continent's second-largest sporting event in 2010, after the Vancouver Olympics - the Economic Development and Tourism Committee discussed the benefits they brought.

In addition to boosting our reputation, the Games also made the Kentucky Horse Park an even more attractive venue because of the $110 million invested over the last several years. It has scheduled 20 more events each year because of its increased capacity.

While most committee meetings were held in Frankfort, several were held across the state to learn more about a particular issue.

For example, the Economic Development and Tourism Committee went to Paducah to see that city's revitalized downtown, which went from an area where the per capita income was just $9,000 a year to a thriving center for the arts in just a decade, becoming a national model along the way.

The Agriculture and Small Business Committee, meanwhile, visited swine and poultry farms in Marshall County, while the State and Local Government committees met jointly at Toyota's assembly plant in Georgetown. The Education Committee toured a technical school program in Green County.

With recent snow storms already causing havoc across much of the state, and a flu season still in front of us, that committee also discussed ways long absences could be overcome. One idea gaining favor is a virtual learning system, which would use technology to take on obstacles caused by Mother Nature.

Some ideas discussed centered on transportation issues. That included keeping license plates with the driver, rather than with the vehicle, after a transfer. This change would put us in line with nearly 40 other states, and appears to have broad support among law enforcement and county clerks.

There was also testimony about ignition interlock devices, which some jurisdictions use to keep convicted drunk drivers from getting behind the wheel while impaired. A Canadian official testified that this caused the number of repeat offenders to drop by two-thirds.

Another problem we're seeing on our highways is out-of-state truck drivers who don't appear in court after being cited for a traffic violation. Because of a narrow definition of the law, we cannot report this to the state where the driver lives, but there is a growing consensus that this needs to change.

Some of these issues will undoubtedly come before the General Assembly in the next several months. For now, we are scheduled to only meet for four days this week to elect leaders in each chamber and establish committee membership for the next two years, and then finish the bulk of the 30-day legislative session in February and March. That's a small amount of time for what could be a long agenda.

Scott Tackett is an inspiration to everyone who has the privilege of meeting him. On April 17, 2010, 46 year old Scott Tackett lost control of his Dodge Dakota pick up following a seizure and ran into a brick building. He was transferred to Cabell Huntington Hospital by helicopter. Upon arrival to the Emergency Room he was non responsive. After evaluation by the trauma team he was found to have multiple facial fractures as well as fractures to his spine, ribs, and both legs. Scott received oxygen through a tracheotomy and was on a ventilator. A tube was inserted into his brain requiring the hospital to closely watch the pressure inside his skull due to brain trauma with bleeding. He was fed through a feeding tube.

While at Cabell Hospital Scott underwent two major surgeries in an attempt to repair his multiple fractures. On May 5 he was transferred to Select Care, a division of Cardinal Hill Rehabilitation. Upon arrival to Select Care Scott had uncoordinated movement to his right arm. He was unable to move his left arm and legs. Scott would respond by opening his eyes when his name was called.

When admitted to Riverview Health Care Center, Scott was still being fed by a feeding tube, oxygen was delivered through his tracheotomy and he could only respond to voices by opening his eyes. Due to his multiple fractures he was confined to bed and had movement to his right arm only. At Riverview, he has received treatment from Speech Therapy, Occupational Therapy and Physical Therapy. Although Scott has received first class care which has included nursing, therapy, dietary, housekeeping, activities, social, and spirituality services, it is recognized that even the most dedicated team cannot replace the support and love of family. Through out Scott's slow and difficult recovery his sister Betty Cook has been at his side and has completed the team that has been dedicated to Scott's well being and recovery. This Christmas, Scott will be up in a wheelchair, enjoying his family and holding a conversation with them as he is no longer confined to his bed. He can wheel himself around and enjoy the company of others. His feeding tube is gone. He is eating and no longer requires oxygen.

According to Jamie Castle, Physical Therapist, Scott's recovery in a true miracle. On the therapy department wall is a quote from Plato that says "never discourage anyone...who continually makes progress, no matter how slow". Jamie also states that it isn't uncommon to hear a staff member say to Scott, "You are amazing." Scott will reply, "Thank you so much." Scott continues to work with physical therapy as he is learning to walk again. Scott sings the praises of his sister several times a day. When Betty was asked what has made the difference since Scott came here to Riverview Health Care, Betty replied, "You people didn't give up on him." In addition to his sister Betty, Scott is married to his wife Norma and has two children, Nicky and Anastasia.

Bears close out 2010 with 10-point win

TIMES STAFF REPORT

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — Senior Chris Donald had a career-high 25 points and pulled down nine rebounds to lead Pikeville College to a 90-80 win over Faulkner University Friday afternoon.

The win makes the Bears 13-3 heading into 2011 and gave them a sweep of the season series with the Eagles, who eliminated the Bears in the semifinals of the 2001 NAIA Div. I national tournament.

Pikeville led 41-32 at the half and pushed its edge to 18 at one point in the second half, coming with 8:03 left when Donald scored inside to make it 80-62. The lead got to single digits as the Eagles got as close as eight late, but could get no closer.

The Bears shot 50.8 percent for the game and was 43.8 percent from the arc in the decision. Faulkner was hot in the second half, hitting for 56.3 percent, to finish 49.2 percent overall. The Eagles also made half their 14 three-point tries in the loss.

Donald, a 6-5 wing from Boston, was 9-of-11 from the field and had five rebounds off the offensive glass. He was also active on the defensive end, picking up three steals in the win.

(See BEARS, page two)

Donald named MSC Player of the Week

TIMES STAFF REPORT

PIKEVILLE — He came off the bench on New Year's Eve and turned in terrific numbers in a road win over an impressive opponent, and as a result, Pikeville College's Chris Donald was rewarded this week.

The senior from Boston was named the Mid-South Conference player of the week.

Donald, a 6-5 forward, scored 25 points and pulled down nine rebounds — both career highs — in Pikeville's 90-80 win over Faulkner University. The win raised the Bears to 13-3 overall this season and completed the season sweep of the Eagles, who have appeared in seven of the last nine NAIA Div. I national tournaments with one championship to their credit.

"Chris truly bought into our 'all-in' philosophy and it showed on Friday," said Coach Kelly Wells. "He has the talent to have games like this, and there will be times we'll need him to assertive on both ends of the floor. We're going to need him down the stretch as we get into the heart of conference play."

In the win, Donald was 9-of-11 from the field and five of his rebounds came off the offensive glass.

On Wednesday afternoon when the Bears rolled to an easy 118-57 win over Temple Baptist College, Donald had nine points and four rebounds in 16 minutes of time.

For the week, he averaged 17 points, 6.5 rebounds and 2.5 steals, connecting on 68.4 percent (13-of-19) of his shots from the field, including making one of his three three-pointers.

It was the first time Donald had been honored by the league in his career, and he is the first Bear to win the award this season.

The Bears return to Mid-South Conference play this week as they travel to Campbellsville University on Thursday and No. 15 St. Catharine College on Saturday.

Wildcats in Birmingham for bowl game

TIMES STAFF REPORT

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — The University of Kentucky football team had its final practice in Lexington on Sunday morning in the Nutter Field House in preparation for the BBVA Compass Bowl in Birmingham Ala.

"Another good practice, good energy, good enthusiasm," Coach Joker Phillips said after the two-hour workout. "We have to get better work on our special teams, though. We have to get a better look out of our scouts (scout-team players) when we get down to Birmingham. We've had some good work (during postseason practices). There's no question about that. We've gotten ourselves better. We just hope it shows up (in the game) on the 8th."

Phillips was asked about the challenge of playing a team whose coach will be in his last game with that squad, as is the case when Kentucky takes on Pittsburgh.

"I got a chance to see the Maryland group (which was in a similar situation with Ralph Friedgen), how they played for Ralph, and I expect this group to play the same way, especially with their style, which is a tough, aggressive, physical, running the ball and playing solid defense. I expect those guys to play for the staff they have here."

The Wildcats traveled to Birmingham on Monday. The team practiced on Tuesday. Kentucky will practice again on Wednesday and Thursday and conduct a walk-through on Friday. The game is scheduled for Saturday at noon EST (11 a.m. Central) at Legion Field. "Cat Walk" set for 8:45 a.m. Central Time: Fans wishing to participate in the "Cat Walk," cheering the Wildcats when they enter the stadium at the BBVA Compass Bowl, should be at Gates 16 and 17 of Legion Field at 8:45 a.m. Central Time.

Harrellson, Knight claim SEC honors

TIMES STAFF REPORT

LEXINGTON — The University of Kentucky men's basketball team swept the Southeastern Conference's weekly awards for the second straight week as Josh Harrellson was named SEC Player of the Week and Brandon Knight was named the SEC Freshman of the Week as announced by the league office on Monday.

Harrellson, a 6-10 forward from St. Charles, Mo., averaged 16.5 points and nine rebounds in wins over Coppin State and at No. 22 Louisville. Harrellson scored double-digits in both games last week, including a career-high 23 points in UK's win at 22nd-ranked Louisville. He tied his career-high with 14 rebounds at Louisville while recording his third double-double this season. He has his second point-blank shot during a stretch where he scored 12 of UK's first 17 points of the second half against the Cardinals.

Knight, a 6-3 guard from Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., averaged 21 points, six assists and 3.5 rebounds in wins over Coppin State and No. 22 Louisville. Knight dished out a career-best and game-high eight assists in the win against Coppin State. He then tallied a game-high and career-best 25 points in the win at No. 22 Louisville. Knight scored seven-straight point in crucial first-half run for the Wildcats against Louisville to help extend UK's lead from five to 18 (21-16 to 28-18).

The awards were Harrellson's first and Knight's third this season and the sixth and seventh for Kentucky. It marks the first time in league history a school has swept the awards in back-to-back weeks and it's the fourth time the Wildcats have done so since the Freshman of the Week honor was created in the 2005-06 season.

As part of the inclusive voting process, hundreds of thousands of NASCAR fans submitted votes online at NASCAR.COM. That remarkable feedback once again demonstrated fans' passion and knowledge of the sport and its heritage. The fans' top five: Allison, Pearson, Petty, Waltrip and Yarborough.

The NASCAR Hall of Fame broke ground in Charlotte on Jan. 25, 2007 and opened to the public on May 11, 2010. The facility honors the history and heritage of NASCAR and the many who have contributed to the success of the sport.

Bobby Allison: Allison, winner of the 1983 NASCAR premier series championship, ended his career with 84 victories, tied for third on the all-time list.

In 1979, he won 10 races, had 12 second-place finishes and was the NASCAR premier series runner-up (to Richard Petty). Allison captured the NASCAR Modified Special Division championship in 1962 and '63 and then went on to win the Modified Division the following two years. In 1998, Allison was named one of NASCAR's "50 Greatest Drivers."

Ned Jarrett: Jarrett was a two-time NASCAR champion (1961 and '65) and two-time Sportsman Division champion (1957 and '58). Through his career he totaled 50 premier series victories, tied for 11th all time. In 1998 he was named one of NASCAR's "50 Greatest Drivers." After retiring in 1966, Jarrett helped grow the sport through his second career as a broadcaster.

Bud Moore: A decorated World War II infantryman, Bud Moore became a successful Cup owner almost immediately upon fielding a team in 1961. Moore won back-to-back championships in 1962-63 with Joe Weatherly. Earlier, in 1957, Moore — who referred to himself as "a country mechanic" — was crew chief for champion Buck Baker.

David Pearson: Pearson is a three-time NASCAR champion whose career total of 105 victories is second on the all-time list. Pearson won his titles in 1966, '68 and '69. He also won the sport's biggest event, the Daytona 500, in 1976. In 1998, he was named one of NASCAR's "50 Greatest Drivers."

Lee Petty: Petty became the sports first three-time series champion after winning titles in 1954, '58 and '59. He also was the winner of the first Daytona 500 in 1959. His 54 career victories stands ninth on the all-time list and he never finished lower than fourth in points from 1949-59. In 1998, he was named one of NASCAR's "50 Greatest Drivers." Petty is the founder of Petty Enterprises and as its owner had more than 2,000 starts and 268 victories.

American Ethanol becomes an official NASCAR partner

SPECIAL TO THE TIMES

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — In preparation for the 2011 season and as part of its long-term commitment to "going green," NASCAR has announced a major long-term partnership with American Ethanol led by ethanol advocacy group Growth Energy.

Growth Energy, a coalition of U.S. ethanol supporters including farmers and members of the ethanol supply chain, becomes an official partner of NASCAR, also using the sport to bring its message of American ethanol to millions of race fans. American Ethanol will support drivers, teams and tracks with marketing, promotional activities, advertising and a season-long weekly contingency award in 2011.

NASCAR made the American Ethanol partnership announcement just weeks after announcing a switch in its major national series to Sunoco Green E15, a new 15-percent ethanol blend fuel made with corn grown in the United States.

Financial terms of the six-year agreement were not disclosed.

Led by Growth Energy, nearly 100 different entities — from individual ethanol plants to the National Corn Growers Association to biotech companies — are rallying around NASCAR to communicate their ethanol message.

American Ethanol will participate in NASCAR's Prize Money & Decal program, also known as the contingency program, with the creation of the American Ethanol Green Flag Restant Award in the Sprint Cup Series, while also providing weekly prize money for eligible competitors in the Nationwide Series and Camping World Truck Series based on finishing position. The Cup Series weekly award will be given to the participating driver who records the fastest average speed on restarts and who finishes the race on the lead lap.

EVERYBODY'S SCIENCE

A shudder for Socrates

by SANDY MILLER HAYS
AGRICULTURAL RESEARCH SERVICE

Chalk it up to an excess of empathy for Socrates, if you will, but I've never been able to think about hemlocks without a slight shudder.

Socrates was a Greek philosopher who lived from about 469 B.C. to 399 B.C. in the city-state of Athens. Since we know about him and his viewpoints mostly from the writings of his student Plato—and those writings are suspected by some of glorifying Socrates a more positive "spin" than might actually be warranted—his death is perhaps even better known than his life.

Never one to "go along to get along," Socrates ran afoul of the political power structure of ancient Athens. He was put on trial and convicted of corrupting the minds of the youth of Athens and of not believing in the gods of the state, and was sentenced to death by drinking a mixture containing poison hemlock—hence my squeamishness about hemlock.

But as I've learned lately, there's hemlock and then there's hemlock. One is a poisonous biennial herb, Conium maculatum, and it's not an evergreen. The other is a coniferous evergreen tree from the Tsuga family, and it's much beloved by gardeners and landscapers for its shapely, shade-tolerant trees.

Gardeners and landscapers aren't the only ones to love the hemlock tree; there's also a small sucking insect with the Monty-Pythonesque name "hemlock woolly adelgid," or HWA. This pest, which is related to aphids, was accidentally introduced from Asia and was first observed in this country in Virginia in 1951.

Once here, it made the most of its new surroundings and has spread to forests and backyards in 17 eastern states, killing hemlock trees and devastating natural ecosystems. The pest has been free to literally suck the life out of our hemlock trees, often killing them within just a few years of their becoming infested.

If ever there was a scientific discipline that involves the patience of a saint, it's breeding trees. So back in the 1990s, when most of us might have guessed that a "hemlock woolly adelgid" was some sort of winter headgear, the U.S. National Arboretum—part of the Agricultural Research Service (ARS)—kicked off a breeding program to determine the potential for crossing our American hemlocks with those thought to be resistant to HWA.

Is there really such a thing as an HWA-resistant hemlock? In the peaty native range of Asia, the answer is "yes." There, the woolly adelgid causes little damage because the hemlock trees on which it feeds have evolved along with the insect, developing resistance to its attacks. But hemlock trees in this country haven't been so lucky or so adaptable.

To remedy this lack, in the early 1990s, ARS and public gardens throughout North America joined forces to create what's known as the North American China Plant Exploration Consortium. These institutions teamed up to make several collecting expeditions to Asia to find resistant hemlocks, focusing their efforts mainly on China.

At the end of those expeditions, ARS plant explorers brought back germplasm of three Tsuga species: T. chinensis, T. dumosa and T. forestii. These accessions are housed in the agency's Woody Landscape Plant Germplasm Repository.

But they're more than just a curiosity: ARS scientists have used that germplasm to develop 140 Tsuga hybrids, 108 of which are suitable for testing. For the past few years, ARS scientists and a colleague in the U.S. Forest Service have been probing the hybrids' ability to tolerate HWA attacks, testing more than 170 trees

Schools' holiday writing program recognized

by JARRID DEATON
FEATURES WRITER

The Christmas Through the Eyes of a Child program, now in its 13th year, recently received recognition from the Kentucky School Board Association and the Kentucky Public Relations Association in the form of the OASIS Award for special events.

Christmas Through the Eyes of a Child is a partnership between Floyd County Schools, WMDJ FM 100.1 and McDonald's.

According to Dr. Patricia Watson, 200 students were recognized at the annual celebration event on Dec. 19. The school district presented decorative certificates and a keepsake book to each student with all writing selections that aired on WMDJ in December and certificates for an All American Meal from McDonald's. Thirty overall winners received a copy of Charles Dickens' "A Christmas Carol."

Allen Elementary received a Silver Salute, the judges' award for best overall writings. The school coordinator at Allen Elementary is Mrs. Lisa Childers. These individual program coordinators are Stephanie Marsillett, Adams Middle; Sonya Stone, Allen Central High; Angela Coleman-Mullins, Allen Central Middle; Sandy Akers, Betsy Layne Elementary; Leigh Ann Tuttle, Betsy Layne High; Melanie Turner, Duff Elementary; Jamie Lawson, May Valley; Rachel Crider, McDowell Elementary; Lisa Akers, Osborne Elementary; Betty Minix, Prestonsburg Elementary; Kayla Moore, Prestonsburg High; Sherry Ward, South

Chuck Rowe, principal; Mrs. Lisa Childers, school program coordinator; and Mrs. Laura Kidd, assistant principal.

Floyd High; Ebony Doderer, South Floyd Middle and Rhonda Blanton, Stumbo Elementary.

Three other departments in the Floyd County School System also received OASIS Awards. Floyd County Schools Transportation Department received a second-place for Internal Publications, Floyd County Schools received a first-place award for Brochure and Floyd County Schools Health Services received a second-place award for Miscellaneous.

"It is gratifying to see our efforts toward improving communication recognized at the state level," said Supt. Henry Webb. "Four departments placing in four categories demonstrate the scope of our commitment to communicating more effectively."

Ring in the new year with a family budget

FRANKFORT — After holiday spending on gifts, gatherings and travels, now is a good time to rein in expenses and examine your savings plan. A good resolution for the coming New Year might be to re-examine — or create for the first time — a family budget.

The Kentucky Department of Financial Institutions (DFI) encourages consumers to review their personal budget several times a year.

"Having a budget in place will give you a sense of control over your money," said DFI Commissioner Charles Vice. "By documenting your spending habits, you might discover ways to spend less or think of extra ways to save. And you can work into your plan ways to build assets for the future."

Budgeting can be done in just four steps. First, you should track your daily spending for a week or longer. This can be done simply by carrying a slip of paper or notebook around for a week and recording every expenditure — down to the last snack machine purchase.

The next step is to determine your income and expenses. Income includes wages, public assistance, child support, alimony, interest, dividends, social security or other sources. Expenses include housing costs, taxes, insurance, utilities, services, food, loan payments, credit card bills, child care/elder care, and other costs. Expenses also include things you may not regularly spend money on like car repairs, vacations, new clothes, or entertainment — anything that shows up on your daily spending diary should show up somewhere in your expenses column as well.

In a successful budget, your income should exceed all your expenses. However, sometimes you may find that your budget doesn't work out as well as you would like it to. This is where the final two steps come in — decrease spending and/or increase income.

To decrease spending, it is important to identify items that are "wants" versus those that are "needs." You could eliminate anything that is not essential. Use tips for saving energy and water to save money on utility bills. Pay off debts with higher interest rates first. Save by using coupons or shopping for discounts — and don't buy on impulse.

Increasing income can include changing jobs or securing a promotion. Some may choose to hold a second job or become an entrepreneur. Taking advantage of tax credits may also help.

10 Years Ago

(December 31, 2000)

A young man from Dowlie was saved from death in a fiery inferno late Thursday evening. Justin E. Yeary, 22, was operating a 1986 Toyota two-door passenger vehicle at approximately 10:49 p.m., when he lost control and sent the car hurtling into a pole. Top Five Stories of 2000: Head: Water, water everywhere: The story having the most impact on Floyd County in 2000 didn't involve amazing heroics or villainy, but it will have a tremendous impact on the lives of thousands of local residents for years to come. Everywhere you looked in 2000, water was in the headlines, from a merger creating a super water district for the southern half of the county, to a Herculean effort to rehabilitate Left Beaver Creek, to an ambitious plan to bring city water to virtually everyone in the county. HEAD: Session means big bucks for county: Among the more notable events that took place in Floyd county during past year was an allocation of state monies that amounted to $5 million, to be used to aid local arts and entertainment centers, to repair roads and to build bridges just to name a few of the slated uses. Of that amount, nearly $9 million is in a state general fund spending, over $2 million is coal-severance tax-funded projects and $46 million is to be spent on local roads. HEAD: A Wild year at the ballot box: Results from local state and national elections were big news during the past year complete with upsets, surprises and at least one race which went into overtime. The biggest upset of the year happened in the spring, when 20-year veteran state Sen. Benny Ray Bailey saw his political career come to an end, at least for now, when he was defeated by political newcomer Johnny Ray Turner. In viewing the events of the past year with a focus directed toward those which had the greatest impact on our community, the disparity between the city's firefighters and council members stands out in terms of sparking perhaps the most general unrest among city residents. HEAD: Kentucky West workers go on strike: The Prestonsburg Fire Department was not the only place to experience labor troubles during 2000, as Floyd County saw its second strike in as many years, this time at Kentucky West Virginia Gas Company. Trouble began when the company announced in September that it had lost a contract with what it termed its "largest customer." Equitable Production, Inc. one of their final acts as members of the Wheelwright City Commission, approval was given to an ordinance that provides increased job security for the city's employees. Ordinance No. 2000-05 ensures that longtime city and utility employees will have the benefit of the seniority system. Employment in a non-partisan atmosphere...A major cleanup effort along the banks of Left Beaver Creek in January 2000 held the attention of many, if not practically all, of the area residents.

Science

The winner? At this point, T. chinensis and its hybrids appear to be the most tolerant to HWA. The scientists noted two kinds of resistance: fewer adelgids making their home in the trees, and slower growth and lower survival rates among those adelgids that did settle in.

The scientists say the current hybrids have much to offer, not only in terms of tolerance, but also on the basis of their good vigor and shape. But we'll have to wait through several more years of testing before we see these trees at our local garden centers.

Still, if these trees can manage to turn the woolly adelgid back into a joke, it'll be well worth the wait!

The Agricultural Research Service is the chief in-house scientific research agency of the U.S. Department of Agriculture. You can read more about ARS discoveries at www.ars.usda.gov/news.

So, when the work halted, people noticed. Many members of the community were "just a little upset," according to Judge-Executive Paul Hunt Thompson. His office, he said, has received "many" phone calls from citizens who are concerned about the halt has received "many" phone calls from citizens who are concerned about the halt has received "many" phone calls from citizens who are concerned about the halt. Boyd owes $195,000, is owed $10,000. Picking up where he left off a year ago, State Rep. Greg Stumbo is resuming his fight to overhaul the way the state deals with garbage. On Friday, Stumbo, the majority floor leader of the State House of Representatives, prefaced a bill which is virtually identical to a measure which was defeated during the 2000 General Assembly. Back-to-school costs for Kentucky families could be a bit lower if a bill prefilled by Rep. Bob Darron, D-Nicholasville, becomes law. Books, backpacks and clothing among the items Darron wants to exempt from the state's six percent sales tax during the first week of August, a time when many family budgets are strained by back-to-school costs. Family court Judge Julie Paxton's duties will grow significantly in March, when she becomes the first judge in the state to preside over a family courtroom in two separate judicial districts. State Supreme Court Chief Justice Joseph E. Lantieri announced Thursday, the creation of a family court in the 36th judicial circuit, which includes Knott and Magoffin counties. The new court will begin March 1. South Floyd Middle School received a rather disappointing holiday present, but it wasn't all lumps of coal and it provided advice that can make the rewards sweeter, perhaps within the year. The report from the team of auditors that assessed students, teachers, parents, administrators and support personnel in October was released officially the week the holiday break began. The city of Prestonsburg's mountain development project got another shot in the arm this week with $2 million announcement. The United States' Department of Agriculture's Rural Development Service announced the spending Thursday, which includes a $1.1 million loan and a $900,000 grant. Denigration of oil and natural gas prices has resulted in an upsurge of drilling for both fuels, but little drilling will be done in Floyd County this year, according to a Kentucky-West Virginia Gas Company spokesman.
