

THURSDAY

PRESTONSBURG, KENTUCKY

This Town— That World

The Lincoln Sesquicentennial Celebration at Hodgenville is scheduled for Memorial Day (Saturday). The immortal Kentuckian's words, "With malice toward none, with charity for all," are nice to think upon after this recent election campaign.

INVITATION

A striking bit of publicity for the Lincoln Sesquicentennial reached this desk, a few days ago. It is a wedding invitation, written in ink, and it has about it something that makes one think of a goosequill pen. The writing is of the period, and it reads:

The honour of your company is requested at the marriage of Nancy Hanks to Thomas Lincoln on Friday the twelfth day of June in the year of our Lord 1959, at eleven o'clock in the forenoon. The rites will be performed by Reverend Jesse Head, deacon M. E. C., at the Beechland home of Francis Berry. Lincoln Homestead Park, Springfield, Kentucky.

The women folks at our house unearthed a couple of old hats which were the height of fashion about 10 years ago, and I found myself resenting some of the remarks they made about them. But then I suppose they haven't exactly relished the remarks I have made about some of these new 1959 models, either. Every time I take a gender at some of these creations, I appreciate the glory that is a woman's hair all the more.

THE BIG CATCH

Now for the report promised on that fishing safari. Caught: two bass (never mind about how big), two bluegill and the biggish sucker that ever ranged C. W. Lake.

The sucker was caught in this fashion. I was baiting the young son's hook and stringing fish while he was landing a few good crappie. Then, when I tossed out a new minnow for him, the line caught around an oar and the

Combs Wins Democratic Nomination

TWO FLOYD DISTRICTS ARE COMBS' BY 2,500

PRIMARY VOTE IN THE COUNTY HEAVIEST YET

Martin and Robinson Win
In Legislative Campaign;
Hatcher, Damron Trailing

Floyd county's Bert Combs, the Democratic party's nominee for Governor, is expected to poll a majority of better than 2,500 votes in Magisterial Districts 1 and 2 of this county.

With only Garrett precinct uncounted in Districts 1 and 2, Combs had a lead of 2,445 votes over Harry Lee Waterfield when the tabulation was resumed at the courthouse this morning (Thursday). Thirty precincts remained to be counted. Combs had a total of 4,637 votes to 2,191 for his opponents.

The 13,634 Democratic ballots cast comprised the heaviest vote ever polled by the party in the county. Less than 900 Republicans voted in the primary.

Combs' running-mate, Wilson Wyatt, was running behind the Floyd count but well ahead of his opponents. The count of absentee votes showed Combs polling 262 votes to 89 for Waterfield.

George Glenn Hatcher, a Floyd county who is a Democratic candidate for State Auditor, Astor Hogg, Eastern Kentucky candidate for Attorney General, and Bob Damron, of Ivel, Democratic candidate for Third district Railroad Commissioner, were running strongly in the county but all three are trailing in the over-all totals.

Former Commonwealth's Attorney Burnis Martin, of Prestonsburg, apparently was winning the nomination for State Senator over Douglas Daniels, of Lackey. Clarence (Ollie) Robinson, of Prestonsburg, has won the Democratic nomination for Representative from the 96th legislative district which is composed of Magisterial Districts 1 and 2. Neither Democratic nominee for legislative posts will be opposed in the November election.

Total vote in the 32 precincts counted as of Thursday morning:

For Senator: Daniels, 1,995; for Martin, 3,333.

For Representative: W. J. Reynolds, Jr., 1,449; Ulysses S. Collins, 443; Ollie Robinson, 2,354; Allen Stone, 1,855.

No tabulation of the votes received by Ben Martin, Edgar Moore and Scott Hall, Democratic candidates for Representative in the 97th district, had been made.

DR. ROBINSON IN NEW POST

Several Changes Made
In Hospital Personnel
At McDowell Announced

Numerous changes in personnel are announced at the McDowell Memorial hospital.

Dr. A. H. Robinson, who is presently chief of clinical services at the Pikeville Miners hospital, recently has been named to assume that position at the McDowell hospital. Dr. Edward Schneider, chief of medicine, who has been acting chief of clinical services, will be transferring to the Beckley (W. Va.) Miners hospital where he will head the gastroenterology division of the Department of Medicine.

Miss Mary Jerome, R. N. director of nurses, has resigned and will be succeeded by Florence Murphy, R. N., of the Williamson Miners hospital. Miss June Holden, R. N., assistant director of Nurses, will serve as director until Miss Murphy arrives. She will then take leave of absence for further nursing education at the University of Virginia.

Rupert W. Powell, M. D., chief of radiology, has resigned to enter private practice. Eugene Ciccarelli, M. D., will enter residency training in ophthalmology at the Massachusetts Eye Infirmary in July. F. E. Totten, M.D. has resigned to transfer to the Beckley Miners hospital, where she will enter residency training in the Department of Medicine. Caesar Lesaca, M. NO ZONE PLAN SATISFACTORY

Is Word To Commission
From West P'Burg Group;
Mayor Opposes New Car

The Prestonsburg Zoning Commission was told last Thursday evening by spokesmen for a delegation of West Prestonsburg citizens that its plans for zoning that part of Prestonsburg are unacceptable.

What the next step will be was not disclosed. The City Council will meet next Monday evening.

A member of the Zoning Commission said his group had asked West Prestonsburg citizens to submit a zoning plan that would be acceptable to them. It was pointed out that if zoning is not adopted here Prestonsburg will lose its right to benefit from federal funds in urban renewal, low-rent public housing and other improvement programs.

Mayor Bill Napier said this week that he will oppose at the coming Council meeting the proposed purchase of a new police car. He explained his position in this way:

"I am against buying a new police car because city finances are low and other things are more badly needed. Besides, the present car has recently had a new motor and we don't have the car paid for. The garbage truck is in bad condition—that is going to require more money than we have or can spare."

Woman, Hit by Car, Sustains Broken Arm

Mrs. Daisy Allen, owner of an antique shop on Lake Drive, was struck early Monday evening, by a car driven by Everett Rice, of Paintsville. She was taken to the Prestonsburg General hospital where X-rays showed she had a broken arm. She also suffered cuts and bruises on her face. She will be at the hospital for some time.

COAL FOR SURFACING ROADS TO BE TESTED

Use of coal as a highway surfacing binder could open a new and big market for the product of Eastern Kentucky mines, it was said here last week after the state and the Curtiss-Wright Corporation had agreed to test state coal for that purpose.

"This is a story we like to hear," said B. F. Reed, of the Reed mining interests in this county, and chairman of the Eastern Regional Planning Commission. "The possibilities are tremendous."

The glimmer of brighter prospects for coal came out of a meeting held in Frankfort last Thursday.

State Highway Commissioner Ward J. Oates said that a small laboratory will be operated on the grounds of the new State Office Building in Frankfort to turn out 3,000 gallons a day of the new product which is designed to replace a petroleum product as a binder for highway surfacing.

SHOT VICTIM UNDER GUARD

Collins Is Hospitalized
By Rifle Bullet; Stumbo
Says Family Threatened

A round-the-clock guard of a man who is a gunshot patient at the McDowell Memorial hospital was ordered today (Thursday) by County Judge Henry Stumbo. The guard was directed after Ray Stumbo, of Price, who had been sprinkled by shotgun pellets fired by Dewey Gene Collins, 19, and whose son, Ernest Stumbo, had fired a .22-calibre bullet through Collins' arm, signed an affidavit stating Collins had threatened to kill him and members of his family.

Collins also was hit by scattered shot fired by Ray Stumbo after Collins allegedly had fired four or five blasts from a shotgun toward the Stumbo home, hitting the elder Stumbo and inflicting minor wounds.

Collins was jailed here, election day, on a drunkenness charge. He was released Wednesday under bond. He had been staying at the Ray Stumbo home, and he returned there after leaving jail. This morning, it was said, he procured a shotgun and cartridges and returned to the Stumbo home. Ray Stumbo said his son fired the rifle bullet through Collins' arm as the latter stood at the corner of a building, shotgun raised to fire.

Ernest Stumbo executed bond here this afternoon.

Collins is named in a warrant alleging shooting and wounding with intent to kill and also in a peace warrant.

WATERFIELD CONCEDES FLOYD COUNTIAN'S WIN

Huge Louisville Lead By Combs
Gives Early Promise of Victory;
Wyatt Easy Second-Spot Winner

At 12:37 p.m., Wednesday, Kentucky's bitterest, most suspenseful modern-day primary election ended with Harry Lee Waterfield, of Clinton, conceding the Democratic nomination of Bert T. Combs, of Prestonsburg, for Governor of Kentucky.

The results had been little in doubt since early election night when Louisville's fast-count voting machines reported Combs leading in Jefferson county (the Third district) by 29,237 votes. Lieutenant-Governor Waterfield at that time returned to his Frankfort home while Judge Combs, his wife and daughter were flying to Louisville, there to be greeted in Combs-Wyatt headquarters by a throng sure of victory.

DAVID STORM LOSS HEAVY

Cloudburst Monday Hits
Mining Town, Flooding
Homes, Scatters Coal

A 45-minute downpour of cloudburst proportions caused heavy damage at David Monday afternoon.

Upwards of 100 tons of coal stockpiled below David were scattered downstream by the torrent of water, several homes were flooded, and streets and the town's drainage system suffered severe damage.

C. T. Dahlin, general manager for the Princess Elkhorn division of Princess Coals, Inc., said the water which raged through the town and invaded the dump at the No. 1 mine cost approximately 1,800 tons of coal production as day shift work was cut short and the second work shift was necessarily cancelled.

Three feet of water stood in the basement of the Dahlin home, and in other residences the water rose six inches or more above the floor level.

The downpour caused concern about the ability of the dam which provides a water reservoir for the town to withstand the pressure, and the dam was sandbagged. The dam escaped damage.

The cloudburst, which lasted from about 2 to 2:45 p.m., struck a small area in the David vicinity, and in less than an hour 4.5 inches of rain fell.

A dike constructed to protect off-flooded Perme, which is in a section lower than David itself, protected that part of the mining community from damage.

Rain fell elsewhere in the county but without property damage, it was said.

Only the possibility of executive clemency from Ohio's Governor DiSalle stands between a former Floyd county man and Ohio penitentiary's electric chair at Columbus.

Arthur Lee Cole, former Floyd miner, is scheduled to die for murder, June 12.

A clemency hearing was held this week for the 48-year-old Cole by the Pardon and Parole Commission. He already has been turned down by the Seventh district Court of Appeals and the Supreme Court of Ohio.

Cole's hopes rest now with DiSalle, who personally is strongly opposed to the death penalty.

But the governor's efforts to end capital punishment in Ohio have not been successful, and he must now balance his personal feelings against the facts in the Cole case.

The facts, as agreed upon by Ashtabula county Prosecutor Calvin W. Hutchins and Defense Attorney Robert H. Fuller are these:

Cole and his wife had been quarreling in their Ashtabula home on Oct. 21, 1957. One of their six youngsters ran to the home of the Coles' eldest son in

Result of Tuesday's voting is the nomination of a Floyd countian for the office of Governor for the first time in the state's history.

The Combs-Wyatt Democratic team will be opposed by the Republican duo, John M. Robison, Jr., of Louisville, and Pleaz Mobley, of Manchester.

Outside of Louisville, on the basis of the tabulation of 2,711 of the state's 3,794 voting precincts, the election was a near-standoff between Combs and Waterfield. Neither of the candidates' home districts, Combs' Seventh and Waterfield's First, had completed their vote count Wednesday.

Wilson Wyatt, Combs' running-mate candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, was an easy winner, as expected, in a field of seven. In the total number of votes, however, Combs was running approximately 24,000 votes ahead of Wyatt, although the latter had a lead of 146,342 votes over his nearest opponent, John Young Brown.

Waterfield's statement conceding the election follows:

"Although the tabulation is not complete, it is obvious that Bert Combs and Wilson Wyatt have won. I congratulate them upon their success."

"It is impossible for me to know all of the people who have worked so hard and have given so generously of their time in my behalf during this campaign. I want each of them to know that my gratitude is very great. I want to remind them that in politics there is always another time. My faith in the devotion of the organization which was welded together during the campaign is unshaken. Forces as yet undetermined defeated their efforts and mine."

"It is my hope that all of those who worked with me in this campaign will maintain their identity and will continue to give their best efforts to those things which are in the best interest of our state."

"I have known victory and defeat in politics. Neither is permanent. I have been generous in victory and congenial in defeat. I will support the nominees of my party and continue to exert whatever influence I may have for those things which appear to me to be in the best interests of the people of Kentucky."

Judge Combs issued the following statement:

"I appreciate Mr. Waterfield's very generous statement. It bears the mark of a fine Kentuckian, a fine Democrat, and good sportsmanship. I, too, have experienced victory and defeat in politics, and by reason of that fact I am very humble and understanding in this moment of apparent victory."

"We Kentucky Democrats have waged a strenuous and, at times, a heated primary in keeping with the tradition of the Democratic Party. Governor Waterfield's remarks are further evidence the Democracy of Kentucky is keeping faith with its great tradition."

"It is my sincere desire that during the next few weeks, we will organize our forces and bring together all those fine Democrats who, in the exercise of their rights as free Kentuckians, have fought for their views under the banner of Governor Waterfield."

"With their help, and the sup-

AAA Figures Show Floyd
Auto Operation Expenses
Near $9 Million in Year

Special to the Times
New York, May 25—How much does it cost residents of Floyd county a year to operate their cars? How much have their costs higher this year?
These are questions that owners ask themselves often, especially when their insurance bills come due. Few of them really know.
According to figures produced by the American Automobile Association, the costs are somewhat higher this year.

Its report on maintenance and operating expenses shows that the typical driver, who owns a car in the popular-price range and travels the average amount, 10,000 miles a year, now spends $1,800 annually, or 12 cents a mile.
This compares with $1,078, less than 11 cents a mile a year ago. The increase is $722.

On the basis of current passenger car registrations in Floyd county and under these average driving conditions, it costs local residents an estimated $9,916,000 a year to run their cars.

The AAA analysis shows that a car incurs a bill of $2.19 a day, all through the year, even when not in use. Over the period of a year, these fixed charges amount to $801.

The largest part of it is depreciation, which comes to $648 a year. Next in order is property damage and liability insurance ($25,000 and $50,000) totaling $103. Fire and theft insurance plus license and registration fees make up the rest.

The variable costs, for gas, oil, maintenance and tires, come to 3.99 cents a mile, states the AAA. It all adds up to 12 cents a mile for 10,000-mile usage.
For the driver who goes 20,000 miles a year, it becomes less on a mileage basis, since the fixed costs are no higher. The overall expenses amount to $1,628, equivalent to 8.1 cents per mile.

On the other hand, the 5,000-mile driver fares worse. It costs him 20 cents a mile, all told.

Rising costs, however, have had little effect on the amount of auto travel. Service stations in Floyd county had a good year in fiscal 1958, chalking up $2,004,000 in receipts. The previous year's gross was $1,876,000.

Such Energy and Ability Should Not Rest

This is being written on Election Eve, a time of relative quiet hereabouts which is reminiscent of the lull before the breaking of the storm. It is a good time to look back on the political feud that is an election campaign in this county and to do a bit of stock-taking.

We would, if we may, urge the people of Floyd county to pick up the loose ends of former relations where they dropped them and to work together rather than going their various and divergent ways.

May we who win be gracious and those of us who lose, lose gallantly.

THE FLOYD COUNTY TIMES editorially supported BERT COMBS for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination. It has no apologies to offer for doing so. It could not have done otherwise, arguing as it has for more than thirty years now that Eastern Kentucky deserves a greater hand in state government, greater recognition from state government and more actual, honest effort to help it out of its predicament.

However much we have hoped MR. COMBS would win, we have done so without enmity for any individual. Rather proudly we point out that we sought no job for any individual, nor were we interested in seeing any woman or man lose a job.

Now that the primary campaign is history, we would wish, for the good of Floyd county and ourselves, that:

1. We who have fought so valiantly, if sometimes bitterly, would carry on this interest in government from day to day, year to year.

2. We who have given of our money and time to this political campaign would be as generous with both these great resources in the support of our churches, our schools and our own community improvements.

This political campaign has uncovered a remarkable store of energy and ability in many people. It would be a great thing if now we would pool those great resources, uproot our prejudices and hatreds, both ancient and modern, and work together for the common good.

Impractical, you say? Well, it costs nothing to dream.

Congress, And Not East Kentucky Is Disgraced

In declaring that "Eastern Kentucky is a disgrace to the state," L. O. Davis, of Hazard has chosen a dramatic way of calling attention to the depressing conditions that prevail in that part of the state. But while we sympathize with his intentions, we fear that his choice of words is misleading and unfortunate.

Conditions in the mountains are disgraceful, to be sure. It is disgraceful that one-third of our state should suffer continuing depression in the midst of the nation's growing wealth and prosperity. It is disgraceful that thousands of Kentuckians should be unable, year after year, to find work for their skilled hands; that relief lines that have existed for ten years are still growing; that in this age of great scientific and technological progress, with productivity, individual income and personal comforts advancing steadily, these people are denied the right to earn a bare living, and are forced to live on charity and relief; that in this day of surplus farm production and brilliant medical progress, thousands of our children suffer malnutrition and its attending diseases.

But the disgrace does not belong to Eastern Kentucky. These people are a disgrace neither to themselves nor to their state. Rather, it is their government that deserves the blame, for its consistent and continuing neglect of the problems of this area, and of its stubborn refusal to recognize and alleviate the sufferings of these people.

Nor does the disgrace belong to Kentucky. As Mr. Davis rightly points out, the needs of this area chiefly roads, water control and a supply of capital with which to develop job-producing industry and business. But Kentucky alone, even though the Administration at Frankfort devoted its entire budget to the area, could not finance the roads which Eastern Kentucky must have.

Without the help of the federal government, Kentucky could not in 50 years finance the reforestation, erosion-control and river development, including watershed projects and multiple-purpose dams, that must be undertaken to provide Eastern Kentucky with a stable water supply. And until these things are done, no appreciable amount of capital will be made available to the area for development of a sound industrial foundation on which mountain prosperity can grow.

These are great needs. Their cure requires great expenditures, the kind of expenditure which only Washington is capable of making. Yet Congress fails session after session, to face the problem of these depressed areas, until the problem has now become staggering in its proportions. Instead, Congress and the Administration plod along with pauper handouts in the form of relief where real rehabilitation is needed. And in the long run, the federal government spends as much on ineffectual relief as would be needed to improve the mountain economy to the point where the mountain people could support themselves.

This penny-wise pound-foolish policy wastes more than money. It wastes human resources. And it is accomplished only at the cost of human anguish. Surely, it has gone on long enough. Surely, the time has come for Washington to end this disgrace, which is a national, not a local matter.

Foreign Missionaries

U. S. churches now have more missionaries in foreign lands than ever before, reports Stanley High in the June Reader's Digest. In 1958 these totaled 30,408 (24,284 from Protestant churches, 6,124 from Catholic). This is more than four times the number in the so-called missionary era prior to World War I. They work in 117 countries.

Unsuccessful "shoots" at Cape Canaveral provide valuable information and are regarded by rocket scientists not as failures but as discoveries, says Wolfgang Langewiesche in the June Reader's Digest.

Student Guidance: What Does It Really Mean?

EDITOR'S NOTE—This is the first of a series of articles dealing with vocational guidance released by the National Foundation for Student Guidance to weekly newspapers throughout this state. The purpose of this series is to acquaint the parents of the youth of this nation with the pressing need for understanding and providing adequate vocational guidance to the students of American schools.

The author of the series, Dr. Edward C. Roeber, is widely known in this field. He is Professor of Education at the University of Michigan. He has written numerous articles and books dealing with this problem for various publications.

The National Foundation for Student Guidance is a non-profit organization dedicated to creating a better understanding of the need for vocational guidance throughout the United States.

By Dr. Edward C. Roeber

Just exactly what is vocational guidance? Don't be embarrassed if you don't know the answer. The truth of the matter is that probably the majority of the parents of school age children in this country are in the same boat as you.

Frankly, insofar as the overwhelming majority of American educators is concerned, this is not a good situation. You need to know about vocational guidance and what it means because you owe it to your children to know.

Basically, vocational guidance is simply this: a service provided through our school systems to assist pupils in making intelligent decisions regarding subjects which will prepare them for their life's work. You've heard the saying about a "square peg in a round hole" and it is unfortunately true that too many human beings find themselves in this predicament when it is too late to do anything about it, or when it means giving up seniority or financial security in order to shift occupations.

As a result, it is undoubtedly true that fine talents are wasted because young men and young women aren't doing that for which they are best fitted or in which they are most interested.

At the risk of oversimplifying the problem, let's say that the primary function of vocational guidance is to prevent any square pegs from getting in round holes.

When grammar school youngsters are asked, "What do you want to be when you grow up?" The most popular answers are always locomotive engineers, policemen, nurses, movie stars, doctors, forest rangers, firemen, and maybe bus drivers; but these answers are dream answers. In just a few short years some of these same youngsters may be thinking seriously about engineering, education, journalism, banking, law, medicine, or business administration.

In every high school of America there are young men and young women who are perplexed about their future, their educational and vocational plans.

We owe it to our youth and to our country to do everything we can to see that the native talents of American youth are steered in the direction which will best serve mankind as well as the individual.

Let's take a look, for example, at Bill. He could be in any high school in America. What's on Bill's mind? For one thing, he is wondering whether he will ever amount to anything. Like everyone else he wants to be somebody—nothing extra special but a regular guy with a regular job living a respectable life. Bill wants his share of the future. He wants a chance to develop some special skills and to get those things which we in America take for granted.

It all sounds quite simple to those of us who have already made a place for ourselves in the world of work. To Bill, however, it is not quite so simple.

Bill is wondering about a lot of things. Should he go to college? He'll need help. Perhaps his family would have to give up all its savings. And what about his brother and sister? They will need help, too. Or, after high school, should he take some special training? Should he follow his Dad's trade or strike out on his own?

Dad could help him get started, sure, but maybe Bill isn't sure he wants to do what Dad has done all his life.

There's nothing wrong with Dad's job, but Bill wants to do something with electronics—at least he thinks he does.

What about chances for finding a job in that field?

And how about the armed services? He might be able to get some special training if he enlists. How much choice would he have?

And so it goes. Lots of questions. Where are the answers? Professional guidance is the answer.

If Bill were the only one with such questions, there would be no need for vocational guidance. But the case of Bill can be multiplied many times, and in addition there are all the Marys and other young women who also have special problems in career planning.

Bill and Mary need special help in planning for and gaining a foothold in a career.

Actually, there are many reasons why Bill and Mary find today's decisions rather difficult—perhaps even more confusing than the choices which faced their parents only twenty years ago. A few more examples of the challenges and obstacles which confront the Bills and the Marys might help all of us understand more clearly the increasing need for vocational guidance not only in the large schools but also in every one of the small schools.

Jack will soon leave high school, having earned top honors in his class. He would like to try for a medical degree some day, but he realizes it will take at least eight years of college work. Jack is wondering whether he has what it takes to get good marks in college. What would he do if he found, after a couple of years in college, that he couldn't do the work well? He would also like to know whether to go to a small college or a big university. Because his scholarship will not cover all his expenses, he would like to know how to earn part of his way. Or would that affect his marks and thus stop him from being accepted at a medical school? What would he do if he were not accepted?

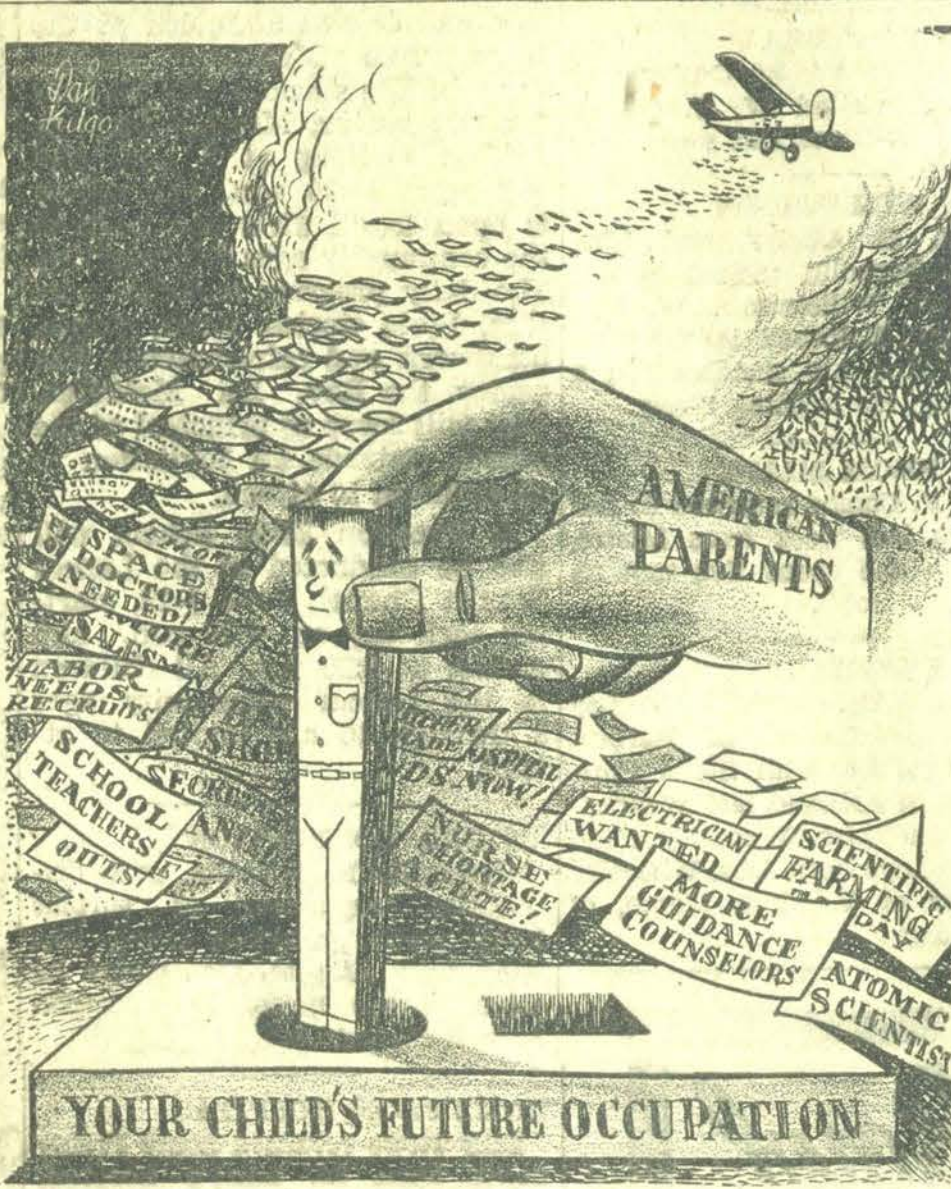

Jack also knows that there are many who would like to get into these schools and that there are not enough places for all of them. What else could he do for a living? Maybe something in biology, chemistry, or pharmacy?

Jill is a tenth grade student in a large school. She has made average marks but has had special difficulties with English. Currently she is undecided about whether to drop school as soon as she is sixteen. She is wondering what kinds of work she can find if she leaves school. How does one go about finding a job? Does a high school diploma make any difference in finding jobs? If she decided to stay in school, which ones of the many courses should she take? For a change, she would like something which interests her. Of course, if she "sticks it out," how can she do better work in English?

Jim is not interested in a college degree. But he wants a trade of some kind, some work where he can build or repair things. He is not sure as yet what trade to enter. In or near his home town are three kinds of schools, a trade school, a technical school, and a college offering a two-year course. There are also several industries with apprenticeship programs. He is wondering whether to go to one of these schools, to start an apprenticeship as soon as he graduates, or to begin learning a trade in one of the armed services. What is best for him?

Ron dropped school when he was sixteen. Since that time, he has held several "dead end" jobs. Each one paid enough to live on, but none of them offered him a chance for promotion or learning any special skill. Whichever way he turns he learns that the "good" jobs require at least a high school education. At the present time he is waiting to be drafted and feels sorry for himself, not sure what to do while he waits. Ron needs guidance desperately.

Industrialization in America

"The Square Peg in the Round Hole"

has brought about an increasing number of occupations—probably more than 40,000 at the present time. Technological changes have been taking place at such a rapid pace that forecasting occupational trends has become a hazardous occupation. Twenty years ago there was no such person as a space doctor. Today we cannot predict how many will be needed in the next twenty years.

Farming has become so highly mechanized and scientific that fewer farmers can feed more people.

Refrigeration has changed the transportation of foods, such as oranges from crates to cans.

The influences of American inventiveness upon jobs is endless. Young people today must aim at a "moving target" for the world of work does not stand still. They have to learn to aim at and adjust to as many foreseeable changes as possible—quite a task for even an expert on the subject.

As America becomes involved in a struggle for survival it is essential that every person develop his talents as much as possible. As a nation it is impossible to depend upon sheer numbers in the population for survival but rather upon ingenuity and an ability to outproduce unfriendly nations. Our young people are the hope of the future. They will be "pressured" to do this or to do that. Recruitment for various occupations may influence someone to enter an occupation for which he is not suited and where he is not as productive as he might be.

Somehow the Bills and Marys must work their ways through the maze of opportunities, blind alleys, and obstacles. They can be helped in an organized manner. This is vocational guidance.

An organized approach to vocational guidance is already present in some schools throughout America. In these schools Bill and Mary are helped to find various kinds of information about themselves and possible educational and occupational opportunities. Some of the information is given to them individually, as they need it, or in groups, such as regular classes, home-rooms, or occupational planning courses. In addition, counselors, and teachers with special skills, counsel and talk over with the students how they can best use their talents in relation to different kinds of training and occupational requirements. Because young people grow and change with new experiences, they find these services available to them all through high school. Many who see the value in helping young men and women "get a good start" in the world of work hope that every young American can have an opportunity to receive adequate vocational guidance in his high school, regardless of its size or location.

Achieves Surprise

General Eisenhower achieved such surprise in his D Day landing in Normandy 15 years ago, reveals the June Reader's Digest, that most of the top German generals wear away from their posts. Field Marshal Erwin Rommel, commander of the most powerful force in the West, was back home in Germany to be with his wife on her birthday.

A Times Want Ad will serve many of your advertising needs.

An industry noted for hard drinking and tough talk, George Romney, president of American Motors, June Reader's Digest notes, does not drink (not even tea or coffee) or smoke or swear. He is president (bishop) of the Detroit stake at 12 Mormon churches, was the leader in building a new $750,000 Mormon tabernacle on Bloomfield Hills, Mich., and gives ten per cent of his salary, sometimes more, to the church.

Radar enables airplane pilots to see inside clouds and to avoid their hazards, reports the June Reader's Digest. Since 1954 the Air Line Pilots Association has urged radar equipment for all airliners. It is now on about half of them.

Goodwill Trip Embraces
Eastern Kentucky Towns;
Newspaperman Comments

A party of 75 Louisville Chamber of Commerce members on a goodwill tour of Eastern Kentucky was greeted here last Thursday by Mayor Bill Napier and business men, and from them the Louisville men learned of the area's needs and possibilities. The visiting group was headed by Mayor Bruce Hoblitzell, of Louisville.

A newspaperman accompanying the party said of the situation here:

"In Prestonsburg, seat of Floyd county, the tourists found a modern small city with stores bulging with a variety of merchandise.

"Prestonsburg enjoys the position of trading center for a large surrounding area. In addition to mining, natural-gas production is an important industry.

"Dewey Lake, part of a flood-control project on the Big Sandy River, added a bonus to Prestonsburg in the form of an excellent fishing ground."

H. D. Fitzpatrick, Jr., Prestonsburg bank executive, said a $300,000 road around Dewey Lake is nearing completion. He said about 400,000 tourists a year visit this lake. He said:

"Dewey Lake has helped us more than anything else we have going from the economic point of view."

Curtiss-Wright officials were invited to Frankfort after Commissioner Oates read of experiments it was making at Quehanna. Minard W. Stout, Curtiss-Wright vice-president, said the company is not manufacturing the coal product on a commercial basis yet and does not expect to until it has been tested on highways and proved its worth. He said the Pennsylvania legislature is considering appropriating funds for tests on its highways. He complimented Kentucky for taking quick action in the matter.

John Dickey, general manager of the company's Quehanna plant, said the new coal product would use between 2,000 and 2,200 tons of coal per mile of highway surfacing.

hook caught yours truly smack in the middle finger and bored in up past the barb.

I was thoroughly disgusted with myself for snagging myself in such amateurish but thorough fashion, yet the incident was not without its rewards. As we came into the dock and drove to Jamestown to get the hardware cut out, I actually drew the admiration of certain members of my family who fully expected me to faint at any moment or to begin howling from pain.

Instead, I gave what was to them an amazing display of coolness and Spartan fortitude. I could almost hear them say, "You don't suppose the old boy is hopped up on some drugs, do you?"

What they didn't know is, the finger pained me very little. They should have followed me into that doctor's office and watched me twist as one needle deadened the finger for the operation and another delved into my arm muscles(?) in the hope of keeping my jaws from becoming locked.

DESCENDANT OF FLOYD EMIGRANT INTRIGUED WITH WILEY COUNTRY

By HENRY P. SCALF

A Canadian, intrigued by the Jenny Wiley story, came to the Big Sandy valley a few days ago, and while here renewed a family connection broken in 1866 when a group of Floyd countians emigrated west to found a colony in Minnesota.

He was Clare Vincent Scalf, 35, of Byron, Ontario. To him it was like coming home, for it was from here his great-grandfather, Solomon Scalf, was taken by his mother, as a babe in arms to Minnesota 95 years ago.

Scalf and his wife, Rose LaFontaine Scalf, who is a French-Canadian, are widely traveled in Canada, the western and northern United States. To them the Canadian Rockies are the most challenging and exciting mountains they ever saw but they affirmed that the Appalachians are soothing and peaceful.

He gave a bit of advice on tourism.

"If you ever attract tourists here in any number," he said, "you will have to do two things. You will have to build better access roads and clean the road-sides up."

Coming from a man who is familiar with all the Canadian provinces and the scenic area from the state of Washington to New York, this is considered good advice. Evidence that they like Eastern Kentucky is the solemn promise they will return.

However, his trip here was the result of a bit of inquiry by a woman carrying a copy of The Floyd County Times. Since Canadians are unlike Eastern Kentuckians in that they discuss little their family origins, he did not know that it was from here that his people had come nearly a century ago. He just assumed they had been Canadians since the country was founded.

The woman, with a copy of The Times, went into a branch of the Bank of Montreal at Winnipeg to transact a bit of business and was referred to an accountant, Gordon Scalf, brother to the East Kentucky visitor. Looking at the name plate she asked if he was a relative of the Scalf who does the historical trivia for The Times. The accountant said he didn't know, but wrote down the name. A few days later he sent the name, minus the address, to his father, George Scalf, mayor of Swan River, Manitoba.

Mayor Scalf, too, had lost connection with the state of his origin. His father had been dead for years and without extensive research there was no way to acquire family knowledge. Finally he wrote Gov. A. B. Chandler, who forwarded the letter here. The family connection broken by nearly a century was thus reestablished.

Scalf's interest in Eastern Kentucky was aroused by the story of the captivity of Jenny Wiley. He didn't know until he came here that she was a sister of his ancestor, John Sellards.

The Canadian traveler visited the old John Scalf homestead on Buffalo Creek, from where Clarinda Sellards Scalf and several others left to settle in Minnesota in 1866. John had died in 1864, worn down by hardship trying to overcome the loss of all of his personal property to guerrillas in the Civil War. His widow, listening to her people talk of the newly-opened virgin lands in the Northwest, decided to go with them there.

Protected by brothers and other relatives, she took along her four small children, Breckinridge, 7, Solomon, 9, James 4, and Mary, 3. They arrived in Minnesota to find the scars of Indian warfare still fresh, and settled in Meeker county, near the spot where Little Crow, the redskin chief, fell. A nearby lake today bears the name, Sellards Lake.

Clare Vincent Scalf and his wife, Rose Delima LaFontaine Scalf, of Byron Ontario, visit the Jenny Wiley Rock, on Kentucky 114. While here recently they visited every spot possible that had any connection with the famous borderland captive.

From Minnesota the next generation of Sellards and Scalfs began to trek still further north-west. Breckinridge went to North Dakota, Solomon to Canada. James died in 1892, Mary married Lewis Coleman and remained in Minnesota.

Meanwhile, Breckinridge Scalf, married in 1908 and, remembering something of the people he had left in Kentucky as a child, returned for a brief visit in 1911. He was the only one of the emigrant families except Clare Scalf ever to visit back in Kentucky. Breckinridge's mother, Clarinda Scalf, had remarried to Jefferson Shortridge, a Civil War veteran. She died in 1914 at Dassel, Minnesota. Breckinridge lived until 1952.

Solomon Scalf homesteaded in 1900 at Norma, North Dakota, but moved to near what was afterward Coronach, Saskatchewan, in 1908. This was 25 miles north of Scooby, Montana, and the town was the grain center of the area. Wheat from the Scalf farm was wagoned to Scooby. In 1925 the Solomon Scalfs moved to the railroad town of Coronach.

Clare Scalf remembers a little of his great-grandfather, Solomon. He was eight years old when his Kentucky-born ancestor died.

George Scalf, the present Swan River mayor, went into the farm machine business at Coronach. Clare Scalf recalls that the Royal Canadian Mounted Police used to come down regularly from Assiniboine, Saskatchewan, and stay all night with his father who was some sort of official.

Came the great drouth that gripped the Western United States and Canada in the early '30's and George Scalf was forced out of business. Clare remembers his father repossessing farm machinery on bankrupt ranches. Sand was piled everywhere, against the fences and barns and over the machinery. He helped dig the machinery out. Clare remembers, too, the grasshopper plague that attacked the area later. The 'hoppers consumed everything edible and relief trains of the Canadian government doled out food. George Scalf finally wound up in Swan River in 1939, where he engages in the farm implement business and has served as its mayor for nine years. The town is about the size of Prestonsburg.

This branch of the family has ever been a bit restless, always seeking a new frontier. Clare's sister, Ethel, moved to California; another sister, Gloria, married and keeps the postoffice of Haines Junction, and operates a store with her husband at Mile Post 1016 in the Yukon Territory on the Alcan Highway. Clare smiles when he recalls his Yukon sister, erstwhile so fragile and sophisticated, living in a clime where the temperature plummeted to 50 degrees below zero in the winter. He chuckles as he recalls her wearing the heaviest of winter underwear, her feet encased in felt-lined boots and going out in the cold with a stocking leg tied over her mouth and nose to keep her lungs from freezing. Gloria had married at Juneau. Glenn, brother to Clare and Gloria, lives in Edmonton, Alberta.

Maybe it is a bit of wanderlust in Clare and Rosa Delima that prompt them to travel at every available opportunity he has from his business of selling oil and gasoline.

He doesn't pose as an authority on tourism but he does point out a few things Eastern Kentucky could do to attract visitors. He is critical of the brochures the state sends out, says that they should be more detailed.

He thinks Prestonsburg should have a historical brochure itself. There should be more historical markers, as in Ontario, and there should be postcards in every public place for sale to tourists. Our oldest log cabins should be preserved as they are in certain sections of Canada.

"If there is anything that makes a tourist mad it is finding out after he's home that he missed an historical site he didn't know about," he says. "Your scenery is beautiful, it's outstanding. But there should be more roadside tables and the junk cars and refuse along the highways should be cleaned up. It is a $100 fine to throw anything on an Ontario highway and it is enforced."

Scalf returns, time and time again, to the Wiley story, and how attractive it is to tourists. There should be plenty of postcards available with a picture of Jenny Wiley State Park on it, he contends.

He recalls that a few months ago he received a copy of The Floyd County Sesquicentennial booklet that contained the Wiley story. He read the captivity story through without stopping, which is no small feat for a man who had heard of Floyd county only a few minutes before. When he left he planned to visit her grave while on the way through Johnson county.

Coming back? Yes, in the nebulous future he will come back. If we ever present the Jenny Wiley pageant again he will come for sure, he said.

Merit Scholarship Awards Help 800 Annually

The National Merit Scholarship program is directly financing college courses for more than 800 students annually, and indirectly helping thousands of others to a higher education.

The goal of the plan, says Albert O. Maisel in the June Readers' Digest, is "to eliminate our most tragic waste of human talent—the annual half in the education of nearly half of our most gifted high-school graduates." Heretofore, about 200,000 high-IQ students have been drifting each year into jobs demanding only a fraction of their abilities.

Organized in 1955 by a group of educators and businessmen, the National Merit Scholarship Corp., proposed an annual testing program in private, public and parochial high schools, with hundreds of scholarships as prizes.

The Ford Foundation and the Carnegie Corp. backed up the plan with $2.5 million to cover operating costs for ten years. The Ford Foundation added $18 million to finance scholarships; 23 other organizations each sponsored one to 100 scholarships. Since then, 60 additional sponsors have joined and distribution of scholarships has nearly doubled.

This spring, about 750,000 high-school students took qualifying tests in English, science, history, economics and mathematics. At the State University of Iowa an electronic brain will calculate the scores. Next fall, results of all tests will be mailed to participants' schools and the semi-finalists will be announced. In December this group will take a second series of tests, from which 10,000 will emerge as finalists.

From the finalists, more than 800 winners will be chosen, on the basis of high-school grades and all-around ability. Scholarship funds will be awarded according to the financial need of the winners' families. The maximum is $1500 a year; the minimum is $100.

Certificates of merit are given the 9200 non-winning finalists, and their names are published in a booklet sent to all accredited colleges. Inclusion in this list virtually guarantees a scholarship offer by a college.

Each student in an additional group of 10,000, rating slightly below the finalists, is sent a letter of commendation and urged to develop his special talents. So far, 95 per cent of those in this "third circle" have gone to college—at least half of them on scholarships.

Dr. Nathan M. Pusey, president of Harvard, has hailed the Merit Scholarships as "the most promising of all contributions to higher education in the United States."

Caney Commencement Exercises Feature Drama, Music, Speech; Floyd Students Participate

Pippa Passes, Ky., May 25 (Spl.)—Commencement Week in Caney Junior College is traditionally a self-expression by the students in drama, music and speaking, and all the sophomores and well over half of the freshmen took active part in one or more of the commencement exercises, May 18-21.

Tuesday night was given to the mountain plays written in former years by Caney teachers and students. The short "For Tom's Sake" was effectively presented by Clara Hicks, of Minnie, and James Stewart, of Louellen. "Feudin' and Larnin'" was acted out with Chester Lafferty, of Water Gap, and Jimmie Johnson, Weeksbury, in leading roles. Also assisting were Fern Thornsberry, of Topmost, Emma Lois Flannery, of Martin, Anna B. Huff, of Mousie, Anna Louise Patrick, of Elmrock, Ray Biggerstaff, of Whitesburg, and Darrell Hall, of Banner. "Vengeance is Mine" required a dozen characters, including Raymond Fields, of Bulan, Paul Waddles, Hindman, Cecil Gibson and Gene Massey, of Sassafras, Randall Hall, of Craynor, and John Hall, Topmost. "Buck Gavin" was excellently portrayed by Bruce Bolen, of Boly, and Sonny Smith, of Hindman.

Main parts were The Captain, Jack Lovely, of Garrett; Sir Joseph, Bobby Jones, of Bypro; Ralph, Joe Elliott, of Ligon; Dick Dead-Eye, Sam Ritchie, of Hindman; Josephine, Estaleen Hall, of Rayen; Little Buttercup, Mary Lou Grigsby, of Cordia.

END OF A DAY'S WORK IN PEACH ORCHARD COAL MINE

The Peach Orchard coal mine, in Lawrence county, was the first major commercial coal mine in Big Sandy valley. It was started by Northern capital with some local assistance. Coal from the mine was loaded on barges and shipped to markets on the Ohio River.

Peach Orchard mines suspended operations during the Civil War but upon reopening after peace came to the strife-torn country, its owners began to promote a railway in the valley.

The above picture, taken at the drift mouth of a Peach Orchard mine in the 1880's, shows young boys who were employed in the operations. Men are riding the mine mules to the company barn. All are wearing mining caps with the old type mining lamp that used kerosene and a wick for lighting purposes.

Great progress has been made in mining methods since the hey-day of the Peach Orchard mine. Progress, too, has been the watchword of the First National Bank since it was organized in 1904. Today, it offers friendly and complete banking service.

Winston Churchill, Wife, Still Hold Hands, Said

Although they celebrated their 50th anniversary last year, Sir Winston and Lady Churchill still hold hands in public and whisper like newlyweds says the June Reader's Digest.

When an interview recently asked Sir Winston his idea of a beautiful woman, he replied, "My wife." And although Clementine Churchill has been a devoted mother and grandmother, her husband has always come first. He has been her life and her career.

Whenever he was scheduled to speak in the House of Commons and Lady Churchill was in the Gallery, he would look toward her as he rose and wait for her to make a small gesture before beginning. She has campaigned for her husband as vigorously as he did.

In the 1950 election campaign a heckler handed her a newspaper clipping which quoted a fierce criticism of Conservative policy which Mr. Churchill had made in 1908.

She read it to the crowd. "I have been married to my husband 41 years," she said. "This statement was made 42 years ago—before I got control of him."

After his 1953 stroke, when it was rumored Sir Winston would never finish his term as Prime Minister, he addressed a party conference. A London newspaper reporter wrote, "He talked for 40 minutes, more slowly than usual, with Lady Churchill sitting beside him. During that time, she never took her eyes off his face. It was as though she were willing him to get through it successfully—when he sat down, to terrific applause, she leaned back, letting her hands fall in her lap. She seemed more exhausted than he did."

Sir Winston's own assessment of his married life was written in his autobiography ending the section about his early life: "I married, and lived happily ever afterward."

Burley Weed Control

Six herbicides, used either shortly before or shortly after burley crops were transplanted from beds, gave varied results in weed control.

In the early 1800's in Kentucky, gardens contained but few varieties of vegetables. Tomatoes were not thought fit to eat. They were the small red kind and were called tomato apples. They were raised by a few for their perfume and to lay on mantle boards for ornaments.

It took a Chippewa Indian chief and "seven iron men" to point out the mineral wealth that borders Lake Superior—and to lay the foundation for the world's largest steel industry.

Drivers License Renewal Is Due In June-July

Kentucky motorists whose last names begin with letters in the L through Z portion of the alphabet must renew their drivers licenses during June or July.

State Safety Commissioner Don S. Sturgill said circuit clerk's offices will begin accepting applications for 1959 drivers licenses renewals beginning June 1. Drivers in the L through Z alphabet bracket must apply for license renewal by July 31. Sturgill emphasized that the license application must be made personally.

Under the certified issuance set-up all licenses are mailed to motorists from the Kentucky Department of Public Safety in Frankfort after a records check. However license application must be made at the Circuit Clerk's office of the county in which you reside, and cannot be made by a second party.

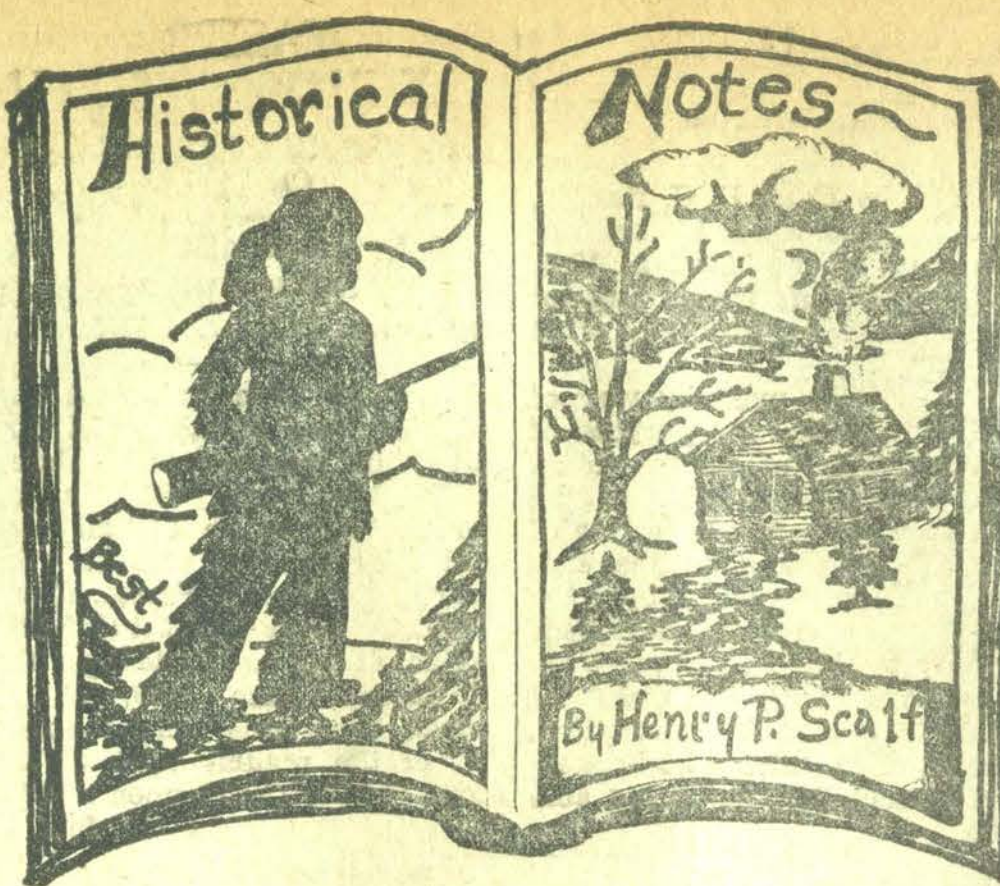

Renewal licenses issued this year to motorists in the L through Z group and original licenses issued to the L through Z drivers will expire during the drivers birth month in 1961.

Here's the procedure of certified issuance as outlined by Safety Commissioner Sturgill:

The driver applies to the circuit clerk for a license or renewal and receives a 90-day permit. The application, filled out and signed by the driver is sent to the Department's Division of Driver Licensing at Frankfort and is photographed. After a thorough records check to determine if the person is eligible to drive the original copy is filed at Frankfort, and a portion of the photographed copy is mailed to the applicant's home address. This is the driver's license. To make counterfeiting impossible, licenses are photographed on a special paper and a different code number assigned to each driver.

The application on file at Frankfort and the photographed license carried by the individual will be up-to-date records on each driver. False applications will bring penalties. For instance, if a suspended driver applies falsely for a license, the suspension period will be doubled. The correct name and address of each driver will be on file at Frankfort and also on his license, since he can receive a license only through the mail.

On the campus of the University of Kentucky, Lexington, is a section of the first railroad operated in the West.

Letters of Pvt. William Jones

PRISONER AT ANDERSONVILLE

Nov. 3, 1864. William Jones wrote his wife, Mary, that he believed, since he hadn't received any recent letters, that the mail was detained somewhere with the 23rd Army Corps between Atlanta and Chattanooga.

"I understand we have marching orders somewhere in that (Chattanooga) direction to start on the 5th . . ."

He concluded by saying he had just received orders to go on picket at 2 o'clock.

Jones wrote from Chattanooga, Nov. 15, when he found stationery at the U. S. Christian Commission.

"The 7th OVC turned their horses over to Killpatrick and we started from Atlanta on the 6th with a train of wagons and condemned horses to Resaca. From there we took the cars and arrived here last night. We go to Nashville by railroad to be armed and mounted. It is supposed that we will go on to Kentucky. It is rumored that our Colonel is to take command of the cavalry of Central Kentucky.

"We will leave Chattanooga at noon tomorrow and get to Nashville the next day. I think we will get paid off there and then go to Kentucky . . ."

"Since I came here I have seen Cincinnati papers of the 12th. It is all a mistake about Atlanta being burnt as yet but it will be soon and all the towns back as far as Dalton as soon as the army moves . . . His (Sherman's) destination is Savannah, Ga. and Charleston, South Carolina. His force is sufficient to go through the whole Southern Confederacy.

"I see that Lincoln is elected. Our regiment gave Lincoln 52 majority. The new recruits generally voted for McClellan."

Nov. 22, 1864, he wrote from Nashville. "I arrived here the night of the 17th and would have written soon but there was no place to take us to but the Zollicoffer Barracks; there was so much noise and confusion there that I could not write I got there. It went so far that our baggage was loaded on the Louisville cars Saturday night to go at 4 o'clock in the morning and I thought I would wait till and the order was countermanded. You may depend I was disappointed.

"We are now encamped at the upper edge of the town and the weather is very cold here." He had jocular advice for Emma, received a pay day for two months, and got a "touch of the rheumatism" from walking so much.

"I walked about 65 miles. We had wagons along for the tired ones to ride but I only rode 15 out of 80 miles. I began to think I would make a pretty good walker . . ."

He added an appendix to the letter to inform his wife that the mail had arrived. There were rumors that they would go to fight Hood, other rumors that they were being sent to Louisville.

Major Rainey is here in Nashville as secret detective. He beat our officers and the War Department by getting a commission from Gen. Sherman."

Christmas Day, 1864, a Wm. A. Wentworth, wrote Mrs. Mary Jones from Columbia, Tenn., with the news that her husband was captured by the Confederates. Attached was a letter from Jones that Wentworth had promised to deliver.

"This letter was left in my care," Wentworth wrote, "to be forwarded to you. This is the first opportunity I have to forward this letter. Your husband and myself were messmates and was captured at the same time. I expect to get a furlough in a few days and will be at home and will call and see you and give you full particulars all about your husband."

William Jones had written the news of his capture also from Columbia, Dec. 14. "I am a prisoner-of-war, taken on the 28th of last month. So far I have been treated by the Rebs very well. I don't know whether I will be paroled or exchanged nor when it will be.

"I want you to keep up a good heart and all will be well in time. I am well and hearty. I do not know where they will take us to but if I can get a chance I will write to you but don't let yourself get discouraged.

"Fill Mayer is here and Mr. Peak's son-in-law. His name is Ware. They are both well. Let Peak know and also Mr. Bayers, the baker, about Fill. I hope everything will turn out well, all for the best.

"I had the happiest dream last night I ever had. I was at home with you. So you see it was the Soldier's Dream in earnest. Give my love to my sisters and all of you pray for me and I will do the same. I am your beloved husband."

Jones and others of the 7th OVC were taken to the Confederate prison at Andersonville, Ga. Here he and his compatriots endured the torture of starvation and mistreatment in the South's most notorious prisoner-of-war camp.

When the Union army advanced southward and neared Andersonville an attempt was made to reach the place and free the prisoners before the Confederates could remove them. They were partially successful.

about LIVING BETTER . . . ELECTRICALLY

Dr. and Mrs. G. A. Miller, Carol, Larry and Vincent of Beckley, West Virginia

"Our electric heat pump is clean... safe... no more worries..."

Dr. and Mrs. G. A. Miller enjoy their electric heat pump the year-around . . . for it heats their home in winter and cools it in summer, automatically.

"Our electric heat pump is clean, safe and convenient," say the Millers. "Walls and drapes stay clean . . . there are no fumes, so we sleep comfortably with windows closed." Mrs. Miller says that living electrically is wonderful. "I just wouldn't want to give it up. I've done 21 shirts in about two hours with my ironer. My washer and dryer are real work savers. There's no odor with electric cooking . . . and it's safe."

Dr. and Mrs. Miller agree — they receive full value for the money they pay for electric service.

Dr. and Mrs. Miller are shown at their food freezer, above. Their other electric appliances are listed below.

We don't believe you gain anything at all by driving long distances to shop at BIG CITY stores. Our local sources have merchandise that's just as good and costs no more.

But merely for the sake of argument, suppose you do save a few dollars on a time-consuming trip many miles from home. And suppose you don't even count the cost of gasoline and oil, car wear, parking fees, etc. Forget, too, if you like, the hazards of driving in today's heavy highway and city traffic.

But don't overlook these things: What you buy here can be in your home in a few minutes—no waiting several days for delivery. And if the merchandise doesn't give full satisfaction, any needed service or adjustment of the purchase can be made without shipping the items back to the BIG CITY or being forced to make a second trip yourself.

Why drive scores of miles looking for trouble? Shop right around the corner and be safe and satisfied.
