

Stream Job at Martin Viewed Critical Need

Court May Get Help on Paying Part of Costs

The stream channelization project at Martin which has been funded for nine years and yet apparently is as far away from actual work as when the Congress first made money available for it, is viewed by the Kentucky Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection as a need that is as critical as any in Eastern Kentucky.

And now Natural Resources, acting in its own behalf and as the agency handling federal funds, apparently is ready to make it easier for the Floyd Fiscal Court to come up with the $135,000 required of it before it can benefit from $100,000 assistance through the department.

This help and the assessment of need for the Martin work to be done were indicated last Thursday in a conference between County Attorney Arnold Turner, Jr., representing the county, and the U.S. Corps of Engineers and legal counsel for Natural Resources.

It was recommended that the court direct the county planner to apply for further funding through the flood abatement program of the Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection.

School Officials Discuss Deficit

Superintendent of Schools Pete Grigsby, Jr., Asst. Supt. Ray Brackett and members of the Floyd County Board of Education gave the Attorney General's office last Tuesday their vision of the school system's financial plight and what they were doing about the situation.

The review of the schools' $660,000 deficit at the beginning of the current year, its causes and the school administration's goal of cutting the deficit in half by June 30, end of the current fiscal year, was heard in an informal meeting in Frankfort last Tuesday.

Under Kentucky law it is illegal for a school system to operate in the red, and officials responsible for the deficit could be removed from office.

Although no action has been suggested to reach as far as removal, Robert L. Chenoweth, assistant attorney general, later said he did not know why the issue had not been previously discussed between his office and school officials.

"I think," he said, "that's a question in people's minds as to why that hasn't occurred. The state board of education has discussed this every year, and this office has never been called in before."

Mr. Grigsby said, "School deficits have existed, as far as I can trace back, for five years." He attributed the system's unfavorable financial situation to the 1977 flood which created damages estimated at between $2 and $3 million; a roof disrepair situation which the state board had termed an emergency during the term of his predecessor and which demanded attention, and to overstaffing. At one point, he said, the system was overstaffed by 37 units (or persons). Now, it is down to 22. Further staff reduction is planned.

Health Council Fails To Make Decision after Noisy Hearing

In a lengthy meeting that included a warning of reprisal and a number of vocal demonstrations that once had the audience ruled sharply out of order, the Big Sandy Health Council voted last Thursday night to pass on to its parent body without recommendation applications for additional hospital facilities submitted by Highlands Regional Medical Center (HRMC) and Paintsville Hospital.

The 30-member sub-area Council is the first tier in a review process through which any proposals for new medical facilities must pass. Proposals originating in the Big Sandy area usually receive a recommendation for approval

Judge Rescinds Probation Order

District Judge Harold J. Stumbo last Thursday set aside his May 30 order granting probation of the jail term portion of a sentence handed down in the case of an alleged marijuana seller.

The action was taken after Judge Stumbo had decided Robert L. Justice had "materially misrepresented to the court the position of the Commonwealth and indicated that the Commonwealth was in agreement with the fine of $200 and 30 days probation."

The Commonwealth, represented by County Attorney Arnold Turner, Jr., had been reported as agreeing to probation of Justice's jail term. But Turner denied he had made any such agreement. Judge Stumbo indicated in his order that he is of the opinion that the agreement did not exist and that representations made by the defendant were fraudulent.

When Justice was arrested about two pounds of refined marijuana were found in his possession, officers said.

Voiding of the order is intended to make Justice subject to further court proceedings. County Attorney Turner said he will prosecute the case.

Both the judge and county attorney are agreed that all drug cases set for trial in the future shall be heard by a jury.

Blood Drive Slated At Medical Center

A blood drive will be held June 27 at Highlands Regional Medical Center from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

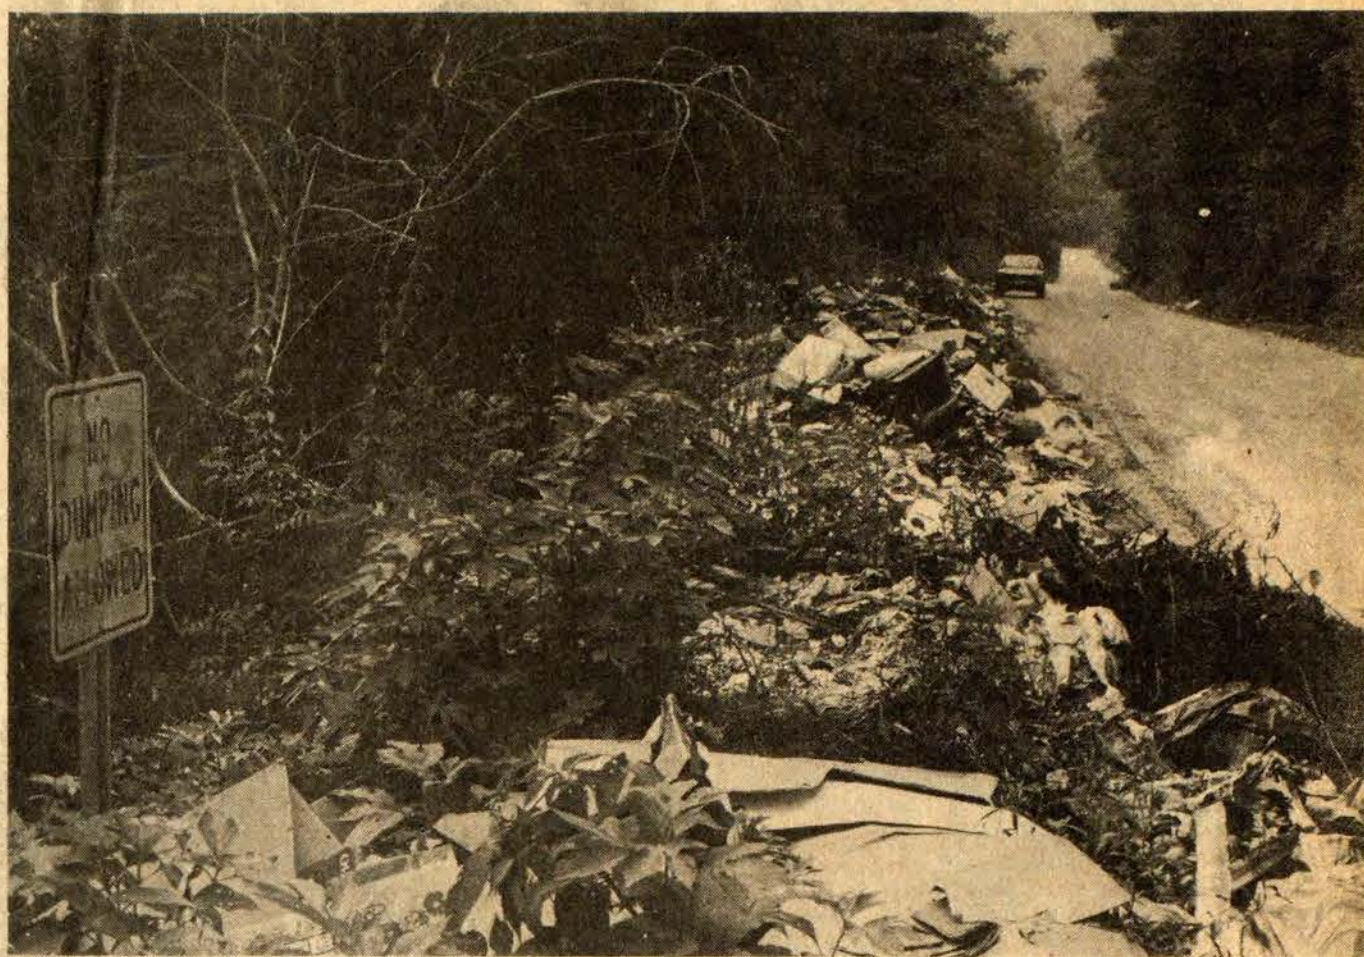

All who donate to the Floyd County Donor Club will receive blood coverage for themselves, their spouses, their children to age 18, their parents and parents-in-law for one year for an unlimited amount of blood.

"The 4th of July holiday is just around the corner and large quantities of blood need to be on hand for an emergency that may arise. So, in addition to all the other benefits of giving, you will also be responsible for saving an accident victim's life," a Blood Center representative said. Those who have questions should call Billie Post at 886-8511.

Name of Defendant Erroneously Listed

The addition of the name, Bascom, to that of the defendant in a circuit court suit filed by Dorothy DeRossett vs. Frank DeRossett resulted in last week's Times from an error made in the circuit clerk's office.

Bascom DeRossett, of Allen, was in no way a party to the suit. The plaintiff and defendant reside at Allen.

Illegal garbage dumps, like the one at West Prestonsburg pictured above, may be reduced if anticipated recommendations for an expanded countywide trash collection system are adopted by the fiscal court.

Two Nabbed Here Accused of Sale Of LSD and 'Pot'

Two residents of the Prestonsburg vicinity were arrested June 7 on charges of trafficking in a controlled substance, and warrants were issued for the arrests of two others from the Wheelwright area who not yet have been located by officers.

Ronnie Neeley was arrested after State Detective James Tipton had sworn to a warrant, alleging that Neeley had sold him approximately $60 worth of LSD. The same officer charged Doug Neeley with selling him $20 worth of marijuana.

Both are at liberty under bond. Trial of Ronnie Neeley has been docketed for July 9; that of Doug Neeley, July 17. The two for whom warrants were issued are Timothy and Kathy Slone. A. L. Weddington, undercover agent, stated in affidavits to procure the warrants that he purchased $25 worth of marijuana, about a half-ounce, from each.

This Town...That World

My reader has filed a rather insistent demand that I give with a fish story, and I have nothing to report. It may just be that I'm the best dry land fisherman in these parts. Maybe I'll run into one of these walking catfish, one of these days.

THE STOPPER

The best I can do in the fishing department is to tell one that is going the rounds and was recently told in The Lexington Herald by Virgil Pryor.

It has to do with two fishermen who were on a Florida lake, casting for bass, when one commented on the number of water moccasins which he had seen.

"Sure, plenty of them," his buddy replied. "They feed on birds and small animals. I can call them to me."

He gave a tweet-tweet, and, sure enough, here comes a moccasin of frightening proportions.

The other fisherman thereupon hauls his John Roscoe and cocks it.

"Think you can hit that snake?" the other asked.

"Don't know about hittin' the snake," said his partner, "but I dern sure can stop this tweet-tweetin' around here."

FOILED AGAIN

One of the classic fish stories is told of the Lake Cumberland region and the Court To Hear Waste Problem Study Findings

In an attempt to deal with the problem of illegal garbage dumping in the county, the Floyd County Solid Waste Task Force is expected to recommend to the fiscal court next week mandatory participation by county residents in a countywide garbage collection system, with a pickup fee to be levied on each household.

The task force is also expected to call for the establishment of a solid waste district commission in accordance with state law, with authority to raise bond money to finance the system, issue regulations, inspect records and equipment, keep monthly reports, set rates, and generally monitor the system.

One of the first tasks of the district commission, if the fiscal court adopts the task force proposal, will be to resolve the question of whether the garbage collectors presently franchised by the county are in compliance with their existing agreements with the county.

According to the findings of the task force, only 35 percent of county households outside the cities of Prestonsburg and Wheelwright, which have their own collection systems, are using the services of the trash collectors fran-

Scott Trial Set In Motel Holdup

Trial of Richard Scott, one of two Pike county men charged with the holdup of the Alpique Motel, near Allen, is scheduled to begin in circuit court here today (Wednesday), despite defense efforts to win a change of venue.

Edward J. Ennis, public defender, who represents Scott, contended in his plea for trial of the case in another county that Scott could not have a fair trial in this county because of newspaper publicity relating to the case. His motion for the change was overruled by Circuit Judge Hollie Conley.

Scott's alleged accomplice in the holdup, Ralph Keller, escaped recently from the Johnson county jail at Paintsville and has not been recaptured.

Scheduled for trial next Wednesday is Kenneth Robinson, who is charged with selling LSD.

No date has been set for the retrial in the Madison circuit court of Ralph Anderson, charged with murder in the slaying in this county of Mack Lewis. Attorneys have been notified by Kim M. Riegel, Madison court administrator, that "we assume Mr. Anderson has undergone heart surgery."

Commonwealth's Attorney James R. Allen said he had not been informed of such surgery but did recall that such an operation was mentioned for the defendant prior to his first trial which ended in a "hung" jury.

Johnson County residents, many wearing "I Support the Paintsville Hospital" badges, listen intently to proceedings of the Big Sandy Health Council at the Prestonsburg Armory last week. The Council was meeting to consider conflicting certificates of need presented by Paintsville Hospital and Highlands Regional Medical Center.

W'wright Purchase Negotiations Slated

Residents who remember the depressing stream of removal vans which began moving their neighbors out of Wheelwright after Inland Steel sold the town to Mountain Investment in 1966 were given reason to hope last week that the tide might soon be reversed. On Thursday, Kentucky Housing Corporation (KHC) announced that the state agency would negotiate with Mountain Investment to buy the large part of the town it owns.

For Wheelwright, the negotiations offer the hope of state and federal money for the restoration of the town's utilities and for home construction and rehabilitation.

Anna Jean Tackett, co-ordinator of the Floyd County Community Development agency, said this week that the county had been invited to file a final application for a $3 million Small Cities Block Grant from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD). The county's preliminary application was ranked second in the state among block grant applications, and prospects of the county's receiving the money seem good, she said.

If granted, the federal money would be available over the next three years for the purchase and rehabilitation of residences on Hall Creek, Branham Creek, and the area known as 79 Hill. It is intended that the restored homes would then be available for sale to local residents at prices pro-rated according to income. HUD requires that money from such sales be plowed back into the three neighborhoods. About 155 houses have been earmarked for rehabilitation.

Purchase of Wheelwright by KHC would also open the way for matching grants from other federal agencies for the restoration of the town's utility systems. Cost of renewing the gas, water, and sewage systems has been put at $2½ million.

The Floyd Community Development agency also plans to file soon for a HUD Urban Development Action Grant for the renewal of the downtown area in an effort to attract small businesses to the area. An application has also been made to the National Council for the Humanities for a planning grant for a coal museum at Wheelwright which, it is hoped, will one day prove a major tourist attraction.

Of the move to purchase Wheelwright, Mrs. Tackett said this week that "it is a very exciting project." "It is the first time in 30 years," she added, "that I have seen all agencies—city, county, state, federal, the ADD board, the governor's office—all working together like this."

"If this goes through," she continued, "it will be a proof of what can be done in Eastern Kentucky when people work together."

New Ph.D. and Wife 'Settle' in This County

Last week he was just plain David, but now he's Dr. David Huwiler, for he recently completed the requirements for his doctorate at the University of California at Davis.

Dr. Huwiler teaches English at Pikeville College. He and his wife, Jennifer, who also works at the college, came to Pikeville from California less than a year ago. They both love Eastern Kentucky and, as proof of that, have recently bought a lovely little home tucked away in a quiet hollow, near Betsy Layne.

"It's romantic," Jennifer smiles. "Almost in the manner of an English landscape."

David sees everything differently. "It's like a rain forest," he says. "Everything is so lush and green. It's like nowhere else I've ever been."

Wins Harvard Award

George Christopher Stephens, junior at Prestonsburg High School, recently received the Harvard Alumni Award for excellence in scholastic achievement, athletics, and citizenship. Stephens received this award for the Big Sandy area which includes most of the Eastern Kentucky high schools. The last year a Prestonsburg student received the Harvard Alumni Award was in 1969 when John David Preston, attorney-at-law and a Harvard alumnus, received it. Mr. Preston presented the award to Chris May 27 at Prestonsburg High School Graduation exercises.

In his three years at Prestonsburg High, Stephens has been eligible for 15 academic awards and has won 13. The latest awards were for outstanding performance in chemistry, Latin II and English III. He has been inducted into the National Honor Society and the National Beta Club and is ranked number one in his class of 195 students.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Danny Stephens, of Langley.

Anything Beats Handwringing

R. G. Dunlop, of The Courier-Journal, last week did an excellent job with a news-story on the siltation problem in all Eastern Kentucky lakes and the Corps of Engineers' concern for the future of the impoundments.

We were tempted to ask permission to reprint the story. But why? Anybody can see what is happening and needs no telling. Years ago, this newspaper, primarily interested in nearby Dewey Lake, warned everybody, including the Governor, the Congressional delegation from Kentucky, even the Secretary of the Interior, about what was happening at this impoundment.

Nothing was done then. And the Corps of Engineers apparently is wondering what can be done now, if anything.

One thing the Louisville district, Army Corps of Engineers, has done at Carr Fork reservoir in Knott county that is positive and promising. A sediment dam constructed at the Defeated Creek area of the reservoir before the water was impounded has removed about 10 per cent of the suspended solids (sediment), and a second scheduled for construction this fall will remove up to 40 per cent more. The sediment dams will cost about $500,000. Removing half the sediment at that point for $500,000 is considered a bargain by the Corps.

The Huntington district, Corps of Engineers, has been urged to build one or more similar dams on main Johns Creek to reduce the tremendous volume of silt that is rolling into the lake from upstream mines, farms and road-building work. The plan is still under study.

The Corps should do something. Anything is better than handwringing, which is about all that has been done to date.

To ease the court's plight in the situation where it must spend $135,000 of its own money on easements and other project-connected work before it qualifies for the $100,000 which Natural Resources will contribute toward acquiring easements, it was indicated that donated property easements will be credited against the $135,000 and that the county may be permitted to take credit for past legal expenses, court costs and engineering work. This latter expense may be as much as $35,000.

"This represents a substantial liberalization of the type of expenses we could take credit for in meeting this $135,000 requirement—money which we do not have," Turner commented.

The conferees also agreed to explore the possibility of getting financial help from the Appalachian Regional Commission and Big Sandy ADD on meeting the cost of future legal work and engineering needed to begin acquisition of easements.

The acquisition of easements remains the big task. Almost everybody agrees that the flood-prone town needs help, but landowners concerned about the easements they have been asked to grant, the lack of firm boundary lines and other factors have caused opposition enough to keep officials from making an all-out effort to get the work going. They admittedly are aware of the possibility of political repercussions.

The project which would deepen, widen and, where needed, straighten some five miles of Beaver Creek has been threatened on more than one occasion with cancellation. But for the political clout of Congressman Carl D. Perkins, the Corps of Engineers long ago would have called it quits, one official said. And it still could, at any time.

"I call it politeness if he who could command, persuades." Nietzsche any event, the state fire marshal has ruled that the wood-frame Paintsville Hospital will not be relicensed unless it is replaced by a facility that meets state fire safety codes.

In response to the prospect of closing Johnson county's only hospital, many residents of that county turned out for Thursday's meeting, making up the bulk of the more than 200 persons in attendance. After loudly applauding a ruling by Council parliamentarian, Carolyn Hay, that former HRMC administrator, Les Rankin, was out of order in exceeding the time allotted for his presentation of Highlands' case, Miss Hay sternly rebuked the partisan demonstration, ruling the audience also out of order.

If feelings ran high among the Johnson county residents, they are feelings expressed by residents of many communities in recent years, as regional and state health plans, designed to prevent unnecessary duplication of health facilities, have had the effect of favoring larger medical centers over local primary care facilities which residents value for their proximity and individualized care.

In a faltering statement in support of Paintsville Hospital, Dr. Paul B. Hall, the hospital's aging founder and owner, ended his remarks on an ominous note. "Unless you approve this (Paintsville Hospital's) application," he told the Council members, "there will be killings." Hall had previously voiced the warning at the Wednesday meeting of the project review committee.

An agreement by Hospital Management Associates of Louisville to buy the Paintsville Hospital Company from Dr. Hall for $500,000 is dependent on the Paintsville company's securing approval for its new facility. The Louisville company has made a down-payment of $50,000 to Dr. Hall, with the balance to be paid if and when Paintsville Hospital is granted its certificate of need.

In deferring action on the two hospital proposals, members of the Council noted that neither meets the certificate-of-need criterion that requires that proposals conform with the existing state comprehensive health plan. In assessing future bed needs, for example, not only are conflicting figures presented, but different methods are used to arrive at the figures.

In the case of an inconsistency between the state plan and a given proposal, provision is made in the review process for a revision of the state plan. With a view to seeking such a revision, the Big Sandy Health Council voted Wednesday night to have its plan development committee try to come up with figures that might justify an increase in the present state bed-allotment for the Big Sandy area.

"We are not trying to pass the buck," insisted Council staffer Laura Hopkins. "We just feel that there is too much at stake to be making a decision based on inadequate and conflicting information." Nor, she hoped, would the decision to refer the proposals to the plan development committee hold up the applications, since it is hoped that the committee will be able to complete its study in time to present its findings to the Winchester body when the two applications come up for consideration there on July 17 and 18.

Even if a formula is worked out that would bring the state plan and both of the local proposals into conformity with one another, the Paintsville Hospital proposal also faces problems on several of the other certificate-of-need criteria. The proposal has been cited for defining a need for acute care beds which is twice the state-defined need; for failing to show any formal or informal agreements with another acute in-patient care facility; and for failing to prove "an effective and economical use of resources."

Presentations were made to Sister Loretta Ann Hummelford, outgoing chairwoman of the Big Sandy Health Council, by Big Sandy health planner Linc LeMaster and EKHS health planner, Roger Meece, in recognition of her services to area health planning.

"We had no flood help from the state," Grigsby said. "We were told after the flood to keep the schools going, although major flooding had occurred at several schools, nine school buses had been lost and 2,500 pupils affected." He added that when he pointed out that the system had no money to cope with the situation, he was told the federal government would help.

That help, he said, will total $800,000 when the last payment is made.

Grigsby said that in the last four years the school board has spent $400,000 on roof repair. "We have over 100 buildings in the district, most of them old, and roof repair was necessary. We couldn't build new buildings. At that, we have done this work in spots, trying to get to the places where the need was greatest," he explained.

The superintendent said the school board has been working under a two-year plan with the state board of education to eliminate the deficit. This is the first of those two years.

"We're cutting the deficit in half this year, are keeping the schools accredited, and, I think, doing a pretty good job," he added.

Pennsylvania passed a state child labor law setting the minimum age for workers in commercial occupations at 12 years in 1848. The following year, the minimum was raised to 13 years, according to "Important Events in American Labor History," a publication of the U.S. Department of Labor.

oldtimer who was the despair of every game warden put on his trail. He got his fish by dynamiting the lake.

Officers dogged his trail, sat up nights trying to trap him. But he was always too wary. The dynamiting continued, but nobody could catch him in the act.

Finally, one bright, young officer came up from Frankfort, dressed in much the same fashion as the oldtimer, talking his language and fitting his movements to win the confidence of the quarry.

A few days later, the oldtimer agreed to accompany his new friend out onto the lake "to get a few fish" by the du Pont de Nemours route. Far up a cove, the oldtimer stopped his boat and reached for a stick of dynamite.

He scratched a match, held the flame to the fuse. The officer was congratulating himself on finally trapping this varmint when, the fuse sputtering, the oldtimer handed him the dynamite.

COULD BE

The mystery of the courthouse parking lot mockingbird may have been solved. For days now I've been wondering why this particular bird kept himself busy, running through a varied repertoire, and with such volume, while the mockingbirds around our place are acting as if they all had laryngitis. When I mentioned the matter to a friend he had an idea. "Maybe this bird up here in town is trying to drown out Lenna Moore."

THE GOOD STARLING

Motherhood ennobles even the hated starling. The other day, one of these birds found a worm, turned and fed it into the outreached, open beak of her young one that was as large as she. Maybe it's only the males that are so onery.

One thing I have always liked about John Wayne, who passed on the other day, and his movies was that you didn't have to cross-examine him and his cast after the play was over to determine who was the villain.

chised by the county. It is surmised that a substantial number of the remaining 65 percent are dumping garbage illegally.

The task force proposal would charge the county with responsibility for providing countywide pickup services, and would require that all households use the service for a $3 monthly fee, one dollar less than the existing charge. County franchises for garbage collection are presently let to the District Four Sanitation Co. and the Floyd County Sanitation Co., while part of the latter franchise is sub-let to the Martin Sanitation Co. and Akers Sanitation Co.

The solid waste task force reportedly considered the possibility of the county's recalling the present franchises and of the new commission itself taking over management of the system, on the argument that the commission would be better able to finance bond money, purchase the equipment that the expanded system would require, and enforce penalties for non-compliance.

In its 1974 franchise agreement, however, the fiscal court awarded the franchisees a 10-year contract, renewable for another 10 years at the franchisees' option, giving them a virtual 20-year monopoly on garbage collection in the county, and apparently tying the county's hands until 1994. Unless the county is able to buy back the franchises, or find legal grounds for recalling them, it appears that management of the expanded system would necessarily devolve on the present franchisees.

A 1976 move to buy back the Floyd County Sanitation operation for $315,000 failed. It was widely believed at the time that the asking price was excessive. A subsequent offer of $30,000 was turned down by Floyd County Sanitation.

The question of whether a district solid waste commission could levy a property tax to finance the new system, if it is adopted, was also discussed but not resolved by the task force. While the law requires states and counties to put such proposed taxes to a popular vote, it is uncertain whether a district commission falls under the same requirement. While Assistant County Attorney Eric Hall expressed the opinion, at a recent task force meeting, that the requirement would apply to a district commission, his opinion was disputed by Robert McAninch, task force chairman.

Members of the task force include, besides McAninch, William D. Music, Anthony Castle, Ralph Caudill, and Mrs. Nancy Davenport. McAninch recently praised the task force members for their diligent study of the solid waste problem. The task force will be automatically dissolved on June 29.

Asks Help for Libby

I am sending this in the hope that the people of Floyd county and anywhere may read this and be able to help this girl with whatever amount you can afford.

Elizabeth Ann Allen (Libby), to all her family and friends) was injured in a car wreck in January.—Her spine was severed and she is paralyzed from her arms down. She has just been released from the Cardinal Convalescent Hospital where her bills are so much she can work a lifetime to pay them. She was formerly a beautician in Allen and hopes to be able to resume her work in a small way from her wheelchair. Both her grandfathers are dead, also her father. She has only her mother to help her. She is now in an apartment in Lexington, with only a bed and a stove. She needs some furniture and drapes to keep her apartment liveable. She now has sheets over her windows.

She called me and asked me to help her, and, since I am a widow, this is the only way I could think of now. She needs, most of all, a couch, kitchen table and chairs, dresser and chest of drawers, most everything else it takes in a home. With her determination to be able to make her own way and the faith she has in me and all the people everywhere, I do pray and hope with all my heart we will not let her down.

Her address: Elizabeth Ann Allen, 3713 Camelot Drive, Lexington, Ky. 40503, Apartment 2.

Anyone who can help her, send it to the above address. She doesn't know I'm doing this. Think how happy she will be when the donations start coming to her and think how happy we will all be to know we have helped someone.

Blames Floyd County

For Almost Everything

I dare you to print this letter in your paper. When will the people of Prestonsburg quit being jealous of Paintsville and work together with them as neighbors should?

The latest deal is the attempt to close Paintsville hospital. Now it seems to me that all the bad events in the Floyd county schools this past season are a result of meanness and jealousy. The good Lord has a way of paying you back for what you do.

Why not let Paintsville alone and quit trying to be the big hub all the time? You fought the Paintsville Lake project; you no doubt pulled political maneuvers to keep the Mt. Parkway link from being completed for nearly 9 years. (Incidentally, your Bluegrass 80 is going along in record time—many more miles but with political pull.

I am sorry about the school explosion problems, bomb threats, etc., but maybe you all had it coming. Johnson county folks would not think about trying to close up your institutions like you are doing with your interference. Think about that.

If small towns like West Liberty and Louisa need hospitals of their own then certainly a big place like Paintsville needs her own hospital also. Why don't you Floyd county people contribute to help your neighbors build a new hospital? Oh, no—it might detract from P'burg. By the way your Highland Region has had so many shake-ups and problems it has taken you forever to get it all together.

How about "live and let live" and keep out of other people's business unless it is to help them. Amen!

Martin Power Outage

Lasts for Six Hours

Refrigerators began to defrost, stores were plunged into darkness, and some hospital services were disrupted in Martin yesterday (Tuesday) owing to a six-hour power failure.

According to a Kentucky Power Co. spokesman, the blackout was caused by lightning which struck a utility pole, knocking out automatic switching devices around 10 a.m.

At Our Lady of the Way hospital, the lab and X-ray departments were shut down, as were an oven and elevator, but surgical and obstetrical services continued under emergency power.

Service began to be restored to the town shortly before 4 p.m.

The days have passed, five years gone by, The sun still shines high in the sky. But something has gone that can't be replaced— The look in your eyes and the smile on your face.

We must keep on going as though you were here; You were our inspiration and you loved us so dear. We will never forget you and your presence we feel.

We love you, Dad, and always will. NOLA ARROWOOD JENNINGS

A Gracious Gift

I noticed in the last issue of The Times Mrs. Elizabeth Owen's memory of a gift from her daughter. I, too, had the wonderful experience. Although Mrs. Owens lives in Tucson, Ariz., and her daughter in Garrett, I live at Wayland and my daughter lives in Indianapolis, Indiana. On Memorial Day my widowed daughter went to the cemetery. When she returned she had me a huge bouquet of honeysuckles. Gold could not buy the present and the thought behind it.

pending in Congress was approved by a resolution adopted by the convention.

A resolution, introduced by H. J. Stites of Louisville, condemning Senator Richard P. Ernst for his failure to take a position on the subject of the Bill known as the Five Fold Adjusted Compensation Bill, was passed unanimously and with little discussion. Mr. Stites, himself a Republican, stated in presenting the resolution that several letters written to Senator Ernst on the subject had elicited no reply. One letter was finally received from the Senator but, the speaker stated, it was evasive; that it conveyed no definite information.

Emmett O'Neal of Louisville, was elected State Commander, by the convention. He succeeded M. K. Gordon of Madisonville, who presided throughout the convention.

Stephen S. Jones of Louisville, State Adjutant was re-elected. Mr. Wallen commented on the small percent of the Post membership in Floyd County and in this Congressional District, as compared with the number of eligibles. According to records read in the convention there are 600 eligibles in Floyd County and only 45 members enrolled in Floyd Post, or seven and a half per cent.

In the Tenth Congressional District the number of eligibles is 4190, while the total membership of posts in seven tenths per cent.

Every ex-service man who has an honorable discharge is qualified for membership in the American Legion.

Mr. Wallen believes that if the boys of Floyd County had seen and talked with the fine bunch of fellows at Lexington, they would realize what it means to be a member of the American Legion, and no membership drive would be necessary to swell Floyd Post to the limit.

Mr. Wallen thinks membership in the American Legion will appeal to all ex-service men who patriotically desire a better country and perpetual Americanism, and who have a fellow feeling for other ex-service men who fared less fortunately in the service. There may be a day when men now free from any necessity to call on the Legion for assistance, will find in that organization, a friend in need—a friend indeed.

HERBERT VANHOUSE GETS REFORM SCHOOL TERM

Herbert Vanhouse, 14, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Vanhouse, charged with horse stealing, pleaded guilty in the Circuit Court last Friday and was sentenced to a term of three years in the State School of Reform. Young Van House found the horse of Joe Harris of Brandy Keg, hitched on the river bank here, ungarded about three weeks ago and rode off with it down the Big Sandy and reached Auxier before he was apprehended. On the way he traded the saddle for another saddle, and is said to have offered the horse for sale. When asked by his mother where he intended to go, he said he did not know; that he did not intend when he took the horse to keep it, but when he got started he just kept on going. Young Vanhouse has been in trouble through complaints of petty thefts and on several occasions has taken possession of visitors horses, but heretofore the facts in those cases did not indicate more than the boyish prank of stealing a ride.

Officer Says Callers Complain of Littering In Disposal of Beer

Last week's emptying of 385 cases of beer under sheriff's supervision into a storm sewer at the corner of the courthouse lawn has evoked protests—not against loss of the beer but against the litter left behind.

Conservation Officer Dalton R. Conley said Monday that he has received two or three telephone calls from Prestonsburg residents who are complaining of the accumulation of beer can tabs and bottle tops on the lawn. They also reported that a patch of grass had been killed.

One anonymous caller inquired, he said: "How can you expect the rest of us to stop littering when it's permitted on the courthouse grounds?"

"I told these people," Conley said, "that if they would swear out warrants, I would make arrests. That's my job."

Nobody has asked for a warrant, however.

Revival Scheduled At Martin First Baptist

The First Baptist Church of Martin will be having a revival Friday through Sunday, June 22-24. Services will begin at 7 p.m. with special singing each evening. Wayne Gullian, pastor, will be the speaker for the revival.

1. The average 4-cylinder small car gets 22 mpg of gas. Assuming you drive 10,000 miles per year, and gas costs 90c per gallon, you'd use $409 worth of gas per year.

2. A 1979 LTD V-8 or Mercury Marquis gets 15 mpg (according to U.S. Gov't. EPA). Assuming you drive 10,000 miles per year and gas cost 90c per gallon, you'd use $603 worth of gas per year.

3. Therefore, you would only save $194 a year by driving the small car.

4. Buy a new LTD or Mercury Marquis now at Town & Country, and we'll write you a certified check for the difference in one year's gas costs of the small car and one of these fine Ford or Mercury Cars.*

Observe 50th Wedding Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Johnson were honored on their golden wedding anniversary Sunday, June 2, with a reception held at the Irene Cole Memorial Baptist Church by their children.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnson moved here from Flemingsburg and Mr. Johnson was Soil Conservation officer here until his retirement. They are the parents of four children, Cloyd Johnson, of Prestonsburg, Larry Johnson, of Jakarta, Indonesia, Mrs. Carol Hicks and Mrs. Linda Marshall, both of Richmond.

At the reception, the table held a centerpiece of yellow roses and daisy mums interspersed with baby's breath, and the three-tiered cake with yellow daisy and scallop trim was encircled by greenery and yellow daisy mums, as was the crystal punch bowl. Crystal and gold candelabra holding white candles were placed on either side of the cake.

Many friends joined in honoring Mr. and Mrs. Johnson and they received many gifts which they graciously acknowledged.

HERE FROM MOREHEAD

Mr. and Mrs. Troy B. Sturgill had as their guests last week, her sister, Mrs. Monroe Wicker, and Mr. Wicker, of Morehead. Joining them for the week-end were the Sturgill's daughter, Mrs. Forrest Skaggs, and Dr. Skaggs, of Lynch, and Mr. and Mrs. Forest Skaggs, Jr., of Lexington. Own AKC Champion

Nicrist Snow Crevasse, English bull terrier owned by Mr. and Mrs. Larry A. Akers, of Redondo, Calif., formerly of Floyd county, has achieved the winning record necessary to be acclaimed a champion by the American Kennel Club of America (AKC). This record includes wins at the prestigious Kennel Club of Beverly Hills, the Kennel Club of Pasadena (of Rose Bowl fame), the Santa Barbara Kennel Club and Best of Breed win at the Kern County Kennel Club in Bakersfield, California in April of this year.

Larry Akers is the son of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Akers and the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Akers, of Banner.

He became interested in this rare breed of dog while studying the history of General George S. Patton who owned a bull terrier named "Willie". Although originally bred in England, bull terriers are fast becoming popular in America as they make excellent companions and watch dogs.

Coming Up—the Festival Season

Kentucky woodlands are in bloom. Bees are buzzin', and cane shoots are greening the fields. Fruit trees dangle small green globes like holiday tree trimmings, but later this year the fruit will be ripe, sweet and delicious.

All of it means that Kentucky is one sweet place to be during festival season.

Festival season? It's just about any time in the commonwealth when enough people get together and start planning apple pies in Casey and Johnson counties, banana puddings in Fulton and sorghum making in Morgan.

Plans are already made for the annual Breathitt County Honey Festival to be held in Jackson on Labor Day week-end.

"The planning committee has done extensive work to make this a truly outstanding festival," says Ruby Haiflich of the arts and crafts committee. "The arts and crafts part of the event will be housed in a tent on Jackson's Main Street."

Main Street in the Breathitt county seat will be the center of all festival activities. "We are trying to establish a quality show," added Mrs. Haiflich.

Interested persons who have art work or crafts to exhibit may contact Mrs. Haiflich at Rt. 1, Box 249, Campton, Ky. 41301. Slides or photos of arts and crafts show must accompany applications for the juried show.

The Morgan County Sorghum Festival, set Sept. 28-30 on Main Street in West Liberty, is one of the largest festivals in the state. At least 100 craftspeople and artists are already scheduled to exhibit and sell.

Here in the Morgan county seat, dozens of booths under a giant tent will display handmade quilts and countless patchwork items. There will be handmade furniture, handcarved woodenware, dolls, dollhouses, toys, games, leatherwork, holiday ornaments, hand-punched tinware, panels for pie safe doors, original art, homemade bread, country ham and biscuit sandwiches plus soup beans cooked in a giant kettle.

The sorghum festival is well-established and known in many states for its quality crafts and arts featuring work of local and area people. Some especially invited guests artists will exhibit handmade jewelry, knives and guns.

For further information about the sorghum festival contact Mrs. B. C. Phillips, West Liberty, Ky. 606-743-3648.

The Kentucky Apple Festival in Paintsville is set the first weekend (usually a week long event) in October. Apple products are featured in a downtown area marked for pedestrian traffic only. A number of school and civic programs, country music entertainment and dances highlight the apple festival.

Down along the southern border of the state where Fulton and South Fulton are neighbors, hundreds of pounds of bananas and vanilla wafers are made into the world's largest pudding as a highlight of the International Banana Festival.

This August event is a tribute to the area where bananas made a gigantic crossroads market. This tropical fruit was shipped into Fulton by railroads and distributed to all parts of the world.

Of course, it's still spring, but a Kentucky summer is upon us. What better way to satisfy that sweet tooth than with banana pudding, Kentucky honey, sorghum molasses or apple butter oozing thick nectar over and around a split biscuit, flaky and still warm.

Most Kentucky counties, towns and cities have special events planned. Write now to chamber of commerce organizations, Jaycees, city officials or to your Kentucky Department of Public Information and Kentucky Department of Parks, Frankfort, for information about these events.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS OF SMITH CABLE T.V.

Due to a ruling of the Federal Communication Commission, it is illegal to "trap-out" Channel Seventeen, Atlanta, for those who do not desire its service. Therefore, the Franchise Authority has granted permission to Smith Cable T.V. to charge one uniform rate of $7.50 dollars. The agency regrets its inability to allow those few who do not desire Channel 17 that option, but the only alternative would be to deny all customers that service. A vast majority of the Smith Cable T.V. system have indicated their desire for said Channel 17, consequently, the majority interest is best served by this action.

Neighbor Cooperation, 1958

In 1958, when Loran Davis, Brady Shepherd, Carl Chaffins and Sam Goodman decided that Dingus Street in front of their homes needed paving, they got at it in the most practical way. Shepherd and David supplied all materials with Davis furnishing a truck. In 14 hours, from 4 a.m. to 6 p.m., the four men paved a 21-foot long street, 14 feet wide to join with the paved section of the street.

Since that time, Dingus Street has long since been completed by the city.

Allen Park Is Home To Babe Ruth League

By KENNY RICE

Lee Frazier, president of the Floyd County Babe Ruth League, was concerned about having a central playing field for the members of the league before the season began.

Most of the Babe Ruth teams in the county had to take a back seat to softball at the few available fields. The other teams were playing on fields designed for Little League play and were too small for games among boys in the 13-16 age group. Lacking a suitable field for practice and games had hurt the Babe Ruth program in some towns. Frazier thought the county needed a field for Babe Ruth play to upgrade the league and to keep interest alive in the communities with teams.

The new park at Allen appeared to be just the place for the county Babe Ruth league to play their ambitious 40 games per team schedule. The field was almost perfect in dimension for Babe Ruth play plus the field's being lighted meant more convenience for the 200 plus games the county teams had scheduled.

In March of this year, Frazier and the league were still not sure the Allen facility would be ready in time for the season opener. And if the field was ready, the Babe Ruth League was not certain they would get to play all their games there for fear of softball taking over the grounds.

In early April the Allen situated park, officially titled The Floyd County Park, let the Babe Ruth League know they had a home field for the summer. The teams could play their 40-game schedule on a nice, lighted field, without worry of whether or not the game conflicted with a Little League or softball game. The Floyd County Park was the home of the county Babe Ruth League.

"We gave priority to the Babe Ruth and Little League baseball programs because they were in need of a field," said Co-Director of the Floyd County Park, Jimmy Gray. "Occasionally a church or community team will use the field to practice softball if there's no interference with the baseball schedule."

The adjacent field to the Babe Ruth diamond is a lighted Little League field which has become the home of the Harold-Allen-Prater Little League. Gray notes that the Little League field is not for the Harold-Allen-Prater League only.

"We've had teams from Garrett and Martin practice on the field already, and we expect more teams to use the field," Gray continued. "And I think that's great because this is the Floyd County Park which was built to serve the recreational needs of all Floyd countians. That's why I'm glad to see all the county Babe Ruth teams taking advantage of the park."

The Babe Ruth teams play every week night and start at 11 a.m. Saturday and play all day. There is no admission charge to the games, and there is plenty of parking. Having all the Babe Ruth teams playing at one site appears to be another boost to the growing Babe Ruth program. The program is also getting needed support from county high school baseball coaches, and some have expressed to me the noticeable improvement in players who played Babe Ruth over the summer, before playing high school ball.

The Floyd County Park is so impressive to area Babe Ruth directors that the park has a good chance of landing the regional tournament, which has usually been played in Pike county.

FLOYD COUNTY PARK

Speaking of the Floyd County Park, the six lighted tennis courts are ready for play with no charge for court use. The park also has a lighted full-length basketball court, lighted shuffleboard court and lighted horseshoe pitching area. The park is getting ready to move into phase two of the proposed three phase project, which, when completed, will include additional tennis courts, a nine-hole golf course, a swimming pool and a community center.

"Within the next two years, I think this park will be a showcase for other parks to look at," Gray commented. "We've never had anything like this in Floyd county. After everything is completed, we will have a park here that is usually found only in urban areas. When this is finished, we'll have something to offer everyone. It'll be the type of place people can come and stay all day if they wish. I hope people will take advantage of the park and will take care of it."

PRESTONSBURG TENNIS SEASON

Prestonsburg's tennis team finished their season with a 5-5 mark. The Blackcats of Coach Russell Music won their first four matches against Boyd county (5-4), Hazard (7-3) and Sheldon Clark (8-1, 3-2) before losing five in a row to Lawrence county twice (3-6, 3-6), Ceredo-Kenova, West Virginia twice (3-6, 4-5) and Knott County Central (4-6). The Cats came back to beat Knott County Central 6-3 to even their season record.

Prestonsburg was led once again this season by Russell Music, Jr., who went unbeaten during regular season play for a third straight year. Music won all 10 of his matches during the season including 6-3, 6-1 win against Hazard's Glen Combs, the number three seed in the Eastern Kentucky regionals. Music won his first two matches in the regional tourney at Morehead, beating the number one player from Russell and Ashland Blazer respectively before losing to the tourney's number one seed Mark Randolph of University Breckinridge who won the regional and advanced to the quarter finals of the state tourney. It was the third straight year Music lost to Randolph who is the only person to beat Music in high school competition.

"I think it might have been a little psychological (his loss to Randolph) because it was the third straight time they've met in the regionals," Rhonda Music, Russell's sister and the team's statistician, "Randolph has the advantage of playing in tournaments in the Ashland and Lexington areas, but it was still another good year for Russell."

David Allen, in his second year on the team, had six wins during the season including an 8-0 win against Joe Bryan, of Boyd county. Sophomore Robert Allen came through with some key wins including an 8-0 win against John Shackleford, of Hazard. First year player Phillip Minns won five matches with an 8-1 win against Joey Hammonds, of Sheldon Clark. Eric Herrin, a sophomore, played an important role on the doubles team this season, playing first or second doubles. Freshman Bobby Hamilton won three matches in his first year of tennis and is being counted on along with the rest of the young team to be solid next season.

Mark McGuire was undefeated on this season's team after seven matches but left the tennis team to concentrate on golf. McGuire, who has lost only one match in three years, and Music are regarded among the best in the area.

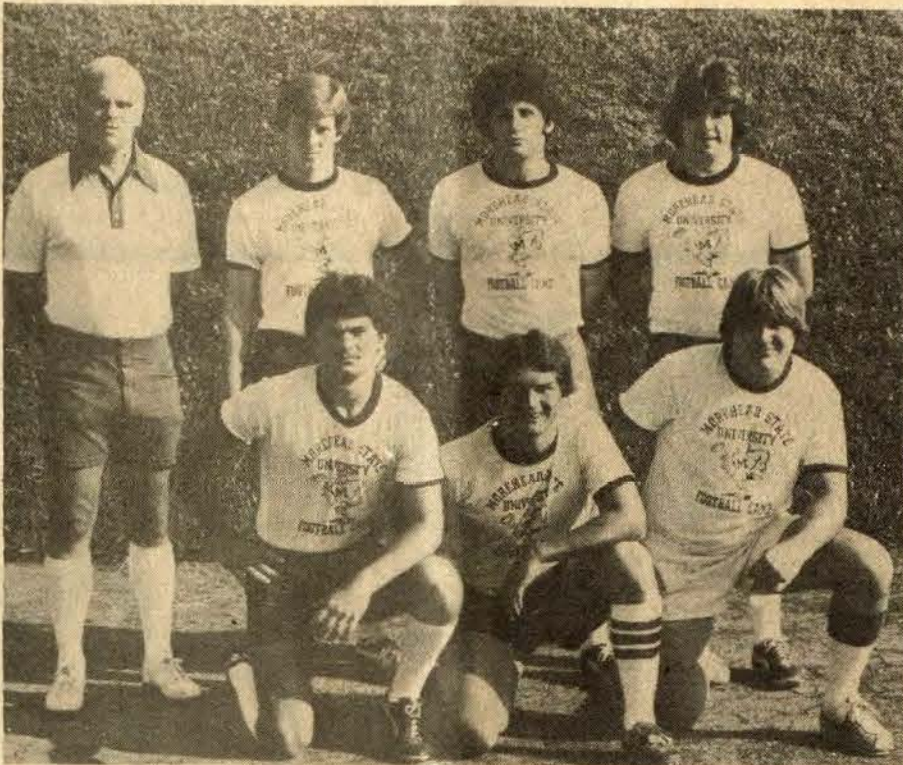

"We had more freshmen interested in Tennis this year. For a school as big as Prestonsburg, I expect more out for the team. However, many are playing golf now and these interested in tennis have declined. All kinds of people use to be on the courts at Archer Park, but that's declined. I'd say 60 to 70 percent of the tennis players around here have switched to golf," Coach Music said.

Music did not have enough girls out for the team this year to have a squad. "I tried to get the girls to come out, and we had a couple who played last season, but they weren't interested this year."

Forest Service To Dedicate Trail

The U.S. Department of Agriculture's Forest Service is adding another recreation facility to the attractions that are found on the Daniel Boone National Forest according to an announcement by Forest Supervisor Richard H. Wengert, of Winchester.

The Sheltoe Trace will be dedicated at 2 p.m. Saturday (June 23), as the 100th national recreation trail in the national forests under the National Trails System. The dedication will be held at Cumberland Falls State Resort Park, near Corbin.

The "Sheltoe" is an Indian name meaning "Big Turtle" and it was the given name to Daniel Boone by Chief Blackfish when he adopted Boone into the Shawnee tribe as his son following the capture of Boone and his men while they were making salt near the Licking River in northeastern Kentucky. Boone explored much of the area through which the Sheltoe Trace passes.

The trail, which starts at the extreme northern end of the Daniel Boone National Forest, runs generally from north to south for approximately 254 miles through five ranger districts and 11

Eastern Kentucky counties. It passes through deep canyons, along narrow ridgetops, rivers and lakes, and through areas of strikingly beautiful rimrock cliff country where rock arches or natural bridges abound and where a great variety of flowers, shrubs and trees are to be found.

It connects with the Jenny Wiley Trail, near Morehead, and will extend at its southern end into Tennessee to connect with the John Muir Trail in Pike State Park.

The Sheltoe Trace is expected to be used for a wide variety of purposes, including backpacking, day hikes, hunting, picnicking and camping excursions, administrative use by Forest Service personnel for forest fire protection and for horseback riding and off-road vehicles where such use is appropriate on certain sections of the trail.

Users of the trail will find many other nearby recreation facilities available to them. These include campgrounds, picnic grounds, boating facilities, a swimming beach and historical sites and areas.

The Jenny Wiley Trail which terminates at the Ohio River across from Portsmouth, Ohio, connects with the Sheltoe Trace near Morehead, Kentucky. At its southern end, the Sheltoe Trace extends for a short distance into the Pickett State Park in Tennessee where it connects to the John Muir Trail.

Huddleston, Ford Are Honorary Chairmen

Praising Kentucky's Democrats for uniting so quickly after the primary, Democratic gubernatorial nominee John Y. Brown, Jr., announced Saturday the appointment of U.S. Senators Wendell Ford and Walter "Dee" Huddleston as honorary chairmen of the campaign for this year's Democratic ticket.

Attending the Saturday afternoon news conference were Senators Ford and Huddleston, Democratic nominee for Lieutenant Governor, Martha Layne Collins, present Lieutenant Governor Thelma Stovall and John Y. Brown, Jr.

Brown told reporters, "Heading into the fall elections, I feel our Democratic party will be more revitalized, unified and active than ever before. The response to my winning the nomination has been tremendous. We have had offers of help from all the top members of the Democratic party."

Both Ford and Huddleston announced they will be making campaign appearances throughout the state in behalf of the Democratic ticket.

Huddleston said, "I think all Democrats can be proud of the ticket we have which is headed by John Y. Brown, Jr."

Senator Ford also expressed his pleasure at being asked to act as an Honorary Campaign Chairman.

Club Presents 18th Annual Program

The 18th annual Achievement Program of the Joy Bible Club of Eastern was held May 26, completing the year's work for the boys and girls of the Bible Club until the fall term.

The program began with the older group singing, "I'm Trusting Alone In Thee," with solo parts sung by Duke Martin, Mitsy Branham, Angela Gayheart and Daneene Martin. The younger children excelled at illustrating "The Wordless Book" and "Sir Knight of the Shining Way." They also recited from memory a Bible verse for each letter of the alphabet. A poem by Vickie Clark led into a medley of songs with Cavan McCann, Robin McCann and Paul Shepherd taking solo parts.

Jenny Wiley Music Theatre Begins 15th Season Tonight

The Jenny Wiley Summer Music Theatre opens its 1979 season tonight (Wednesday) with the musical revue "Starting Here, Starting Now."

The theatre celebrates its 15th anniversary season this year with a musical lineup that also includes "The Robber Bridegroom," "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum" and "Pippin."

"Starting Here, Starting Now" is a departure from the usual offerings at Jenny Wiley. It is not actually a play in the traditional sense of the word. Instead, it is an evening of musical entertainment with a performing cast of three, who sing and dance to the tunes of songwriters David Shire and Richard Maltby, Jr. Maltby and Shire have written for such artists as Pearl Bailey, Andy Williams, Roberta Flack and Barbara Streisand.

It is a fairly new show, having opened originally in New York in March, 1977 to glowing reviews from the drama critics. The tunes range from a blues-like tune, "Autumn," to a lively top-hat-and-cane song and dance number, "One Step". Another tune, selected by many critics as their favorite from the show was one entitled "Crossword Puzzle" and was the mournful lament of a brainy girl whose boyfriend had left her because she was able to outdo him in working the Sunday Times crossword puzzle. In all, there are 25 tunes in the show.

Bill Campbell, general manager of the theatre, said he is happy with the choice of "Starting Here, Starting Now" to open this anniversary season. "It's a great show," he said. "It has lots of singing and dancing and is just pure entertainment. It's really the perfect show to open up what we believe will be a perfect season."

Campbell said the show will run from Wednesday, June 20 through Sunday, June 24 and will continue on Friday evenings through August 17. In addition to "Starting Here, Starting Now," the theatre will present three other shows which will run on Wednesday, Thursday, Saturday and Sunday, evenings through August 19. Those shows are "The Robber Bridegroom" (June 27 - July 15), "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum" (July 18-29) and "Pippin" (August 1-19).

Ticket information may be obtained by calling (606) 886-9274 or by writing the Jenny Wiley Summer Music Theatre, Box 22, Prestonsburg, Ky. 41653. Curtain for all performances is 8:30.

The opening of "Starting Here, Starting Now" will not only kick off this special fifteenth anniversary season for the theatre, but it will also serve as an unveiling to the public of some facelifting the Jenny Wiley theatre has undergone recently. Campbell said that improvements include the construction of some special lighting towers, the installation of a removable wooden floor to cover the cracking concrete stage floor and the installation of a new sound system in the theatre.

Campbell said donations and the purchase of season tickets and patron tickets are welcomed to help defray the cost of the improvements.

The theatre, which opened at Jenny Wiley State Park in 1965, has been bringing professional productions to the area since 1968. This season it will be staffed with a company composed mainly of professional actors, singers, dancers, musicians, and technicians. A few of the company members, who will appear in some shows later in the season, will be from the area.

Suit Seeks To Enforce Junkyard Law Here

The Department of Transportation filed suit in circuit court here June 14, asking an injunction to require Frank Adams, doing business as Adams Used Auto Parts, to comply with provisions of the state's so-called Junkyard Act.

The suit alleged that Adams had not procured a license to operate his automobile and materials recycling establishment near US 23, in the vicinity of the Plantation Motel and had not maintained fencing high enough to shield it from the view of passing motorists. An alternative to fencing is to move such places of business at least 1000 feet from any road.

Department of Energy: The New Power in Government

By Donald P. Jacobs

Because of the turmoil in Iran, the apparent inevitability of dollar-a-gallon gasoline, and the specter of gasoline rationing, the nation's newest cabinet department has become its most conspicuous. Hardly a day goes by when the Department of Energy (DOE) isn't either making news or responding to it. With a staff of 18,000 and a budget of $10.8 billion, DOE thinks big and has an enormous impact on the economy. Its decisions affect you intimately, in everything from how much you pay for gas and oil to how high your utility bills are.

What It Does

The Department was established by the Department of Energy Organization Act of 1977. Among other things, this legislation transferred to the DOE all operations of the Energy Research and Development Administration, the Federal Energy Administration, and the Federal Power Commission. The DOE now includes:

- The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission. This independent five-member commission sets rates and charges for the transportation and sale of natural gas and for the transmission and sale of electricity. It also issues licenses for the construction, operation, and maintenance of dams, powerhouses, reservoirs, and transmission lines.

- The Energy Information Administration. This agency collects and distributes information on energy reserves. It also reports on the financial status of energy-producing companies.

- The Office of Energy Research. This office conducts research into solar energy, nuclear power, and other alternatives to oil and coal.

The National Energy Act, passed in 1978 after nearly a year and a half of deliberation, confers specific responsibilities on the DOE, as well as on other agencies and departments. The Act:

- Requires the DOE to set energy efficiency standards for 13 categories of home appliances by late 1980. The categories are refrigerators and refrigerator-freezers; freezers; dishwashers; clothes washers; clothes dryers; water heaters; room air conditioners; central air conditioners; home heating equipment; furnaces; television sets; kitchen ranges and ovens; and humidifiers and dehumidifiers. (DOE can expand the list to include other major appliances if it wants to.)

- Requires the DOE to set targets for increased recycling by industry, and report annually on progress.

- Authorizes the Secretary of Energy to establish a loan program

(paying up to 75% of cost) to encourage the development of small hydroelectric facilities in existing dams that are not currently being used to generate electric power.

- Requires the DOE to study energy conservation in apartment buildings.

Living With Uncertainty

As Secretary of Energy James R. Schlesinger sees it, uncertainty is "a large and ever-present consideration" in energy policymaking. "If the key features of the nation's energy future were all known with greater certainty," he told the Senate recently, "then the correct choices for United States energy policies could be more easily determined today." The major question marks are the behavior of world oil prices, the potential for new oil and natural gas discoveries, the course of action adopted by the oil-exporting countries, and the results of American research and development efforts.

It is because of these uncertainties that one can't say for sure whether there will be gas rationing this summer or enough heat next winter. A host of less immediate but equally important questions also remain unanswered—including whether solar power will ever win widespread acceptance, whether nuclear power will ever be completely safe, and whether routine use of "trash power"—energy derived from conversion of municipal and other waste—will ever be more than an environmentalist's dream.

No matter what happens in the next five or ten years with regard to the use of unconventional forms of energy, there appears to be no doubt that, at least for the next few years, the United States will be heavily dependent on oil. We are "teetering on the brink" of the stage where demand for oil permanently exceeds supply and "prices go sky high and stay there," Deputy Secretary of Energy John F. O'Leary said recently.

Nevertheless, O'Leary believes there are "new options we can add in time. We think there are technologies which will convert coal and oil shale into the materials that commerce demands today. We are devoting major efforts toward expediting commercialization of these processes."

The basic commercialization strategy is to take these "promising technologies" and remove as many stumbling blocks to their use as possible. For example, the DOE recently signed contracts for two processes that convert coal into clean fuel. The DOE has also been eagerly eyeing the potential for oil shale. Experts at the Department believe shale can supply billions of barrels of oil. Serious environmental questions and problems of inducing oil companies to invest in the needed technology have prevented shale-conversion projects from getting off the ground. But the DOE is now supporting a three-dollar-per-barrel tax credit to encourage oil companies to build required facilities in Colorado and other states, and at least one company has expressed a willingness to go ahead with this plan.

Contingency Plan For Rationing

Last March, President Carter sent Congress three standby energy conservation plans and a standby rationing plan. If approved by Congress, the plans would be implemented if the President finds that the country is in "a severe energy supply interruption" or that implementation is necessary for the U.S. to fulfill its energy conservation obligations under the International Energy Program (which, when triggered, requires member nations to share available petroleum supplies and take conservation measures).

Either House of Congress could, by a majority vote, disapprove a presidential decision to implement the rationing plan. If it is implemented, here's how the plan would work:

- Gasoline ration checks, redeemable for coupons, will be issued primarily on the basis of motor vehicle registration.

- Ration checks will be issued quarterly in a form similar to U.S. Treasury checks but in gallon denominations rather than dollars.

- The DOE will calculate ration allotments based on annual average fuel consumption for each class of vehicle. All passenger cars will get the same allotment, regardless of fuel efficiency.

- Priority allotments will be given to essential public services, such as fire protection, police, and ambulances.

- Farmers will receive, in addition to allotments for their registered cars and trucks, enough ration rights for tractors and other gasoline-powered equipment to meet food and fiber production goals approved by the President.

- The DOE will contract with financial institutions to exchange the ration checks for coupons. To buy gasoline, drivers will have to present the coupons at service stations.

- The DOE will permit the purchase and sale of ration rights in a "white market," with prices determined by normal market forces—that is, without government intervention. The "white market" will allow persons with a smaller need for gasoline to sell ration coupons to persons with a larger need.

- The states will be given ration coupons for distribution to a limited number of hardship cases.

The three standby energy conservation plans would prohibit gasoline stations from selling fuel during certain weekend hours, require owners of nonresidential buildings to maintain thermostat settings at no higher than 65 degrees, and restrict the lighting of advertising signs and window displays.

...about your Social Security

By JOHN FAULKNER
Manager of the Prestonsburg
Social Security Office

Q—I have been collecting social security disability benefits for nine years. In a few months, I'll be 65. Should I file an application for retirement benefits?

A—No. If you are receiving checks as a disabled worker, your disability benefits will automatically be changed to retirement benefits when you reach 65. If you are getting checks as a disabled worker, disabled widow or widower, you will get instructions when you reach 65 because your rights and responsibilities will be somewhat different than they are now.

Q—Two years ago, I was severely injured in an auto accident and haven't worked since. Even though my condition hasn't improved, I've been thinking of trying to get some kind of job because I need the money. If I do go to work, will my disability benefits stop right away?

A—No. But if you take a job, you should notify social security. People who return to work before there has been any significant medical improvement in their conditions can be eligible for a trial work period to test their ability to work. During this nine-month period, they may work and still get disability checks. If you show you can work after this trial work period, you will be paid benefits for an adjustment period of 3 months. Of course, if your attempt to work is unsuccessful, and are still severely disabled, benefits will continue.

Q—When I retired last year, I arranged to have my social security checks deposited directly into my bank account. I'm going to move in a couple of months. I've already notified the bank. Should I notify social security, too?

A—Yes, you should, so that you will get any correspondence social security sends you. It's also a good idea to notify the post office and ask them to forward your mail. That way, you'll be assured of receiving all your mail.

Operation Requirements Of Youth Camps Cited

By JANET E. HICKS
Health Educator

Warm weather is finally here, and, along with many other summertime activities, thousands of Kentucky children will be attending camp this year.

"While many agencies sponsor day and residential youth camps, such as YMCA, Boy Scouts, Campfire Girls, and numerous church groups, all have one thing in common—they must obtain an operating permit and must comply with Kentucky's youth camp regulations," said Earl Compton, administrator for the Floyd County Health Department.

In a recent interview, Compton said, "This permit must be obtained from the county health department prior to the camping season, and is issued to each camp after compliance with regulations is met."

"If food is to be prepared and served at camp, a permit to operate a food service establishment also must be obtained and the operation must meet requirements of the Kentucky Food Service Code," Compton said.

To safeguard the children, all camps are required to have certified personnel on duty 24 hours a day. If swimming or other water sports are provided, a certified lifeguard also must be on duty," Compton said.

"We inspect each youth camp at least twice during the camping season, once prior to opening and once during the actual operating period. This is to insure that all regulations are being met and all safety and health hazards have been eliminated," Compton said.

Concerned parents or prospective camps having questions about camp regulations should contact Carl Baldrige at the Floyd County Health Department.

Should the Trucking Industry Be Deregulated?

PRO: The following statement represents the position of Congress Watch, a public interest lobbying group.

Trucking deregulation will be one of the first opportunities for Congress to challenge a special interest on the issue of inflation. Comprehensive legislation to deregulate trucking is essential to aid consumers, who every day pay inflated prices at the supermarket because of excessive transportation costs.

The trucking industry is the keystone of our transportation system, with $108 billion in revenues last year. Truckers are regulated by the Interstate Commerce Commission, but the regulation works to the advantage of the industry and to the detriment of consumers. The current regulatory structure is founded on two principles: 1) legalized price fixing and 2) control over entry into the trucking business. These restrictions create a cozy situation for the trucking industry, which is aided by the ICC in keeping out annoying competition from new truckers and in preventing rate-cutting.

This wasteful regulation costs consumers up to $2 billion a year in higher prices. Everyone in the country is affected by these costs, even though they are hidden. For example, freight costs account for at least 8 cents out of every dollar spent on food. Not only is ICC interference costly, but it is often irrational. Uncooked chicken can be moved without ICC involvement, but the transportation of red meat is subject to pages of ICC regulations.

Raw agricultural goods are exempt from ICC regulation, so they are transported at a lower cost. But this exemption only applies to unprocessed materials—so corn can be transported to market without ICC interference. But if that corn is manufactured into corn chips and moved someplace else, it comes under ICC control. Also, a farmer may take his crop to market, but he is generally not allowed to haul anything back, such as fertilizer or seed he might need for the next planting. This empty truck home wastes fuel.

Empirical evidence shows that trucking rates decreased when some items became exempt from regulation in the 1950s. Deregulation resulted in a dramatic decline in prices and a significant improvement in service (for example, rates dropped 23% for poultry products and 19% for fruits and vegetables). The present system is a costly luxury, maintained for the benefit of the industry. The country can no longer afford this waste.

To its credit, the ICC has begun to open up some aspects of pricing and entry in trucking. But like the Civil Aeronautics Board, the ICC will require new instructions from Congress if the crushing weight of nearly a century of protectionist regulatory practices are to be removed. Congress must:

- Remove the barriers to entry into the trucking business to open up competition and allow truckers to serve new routes without lengthy legal battles
- Prohibit the present legalized price-fixing performed by "rate bureaus"

The regulated trucking companies claim that the present regulatory system protects the public. But from what? In view of the excessive profits they have earned under the present system (a rate of return of around 20%), it is understandable that the trucking companies would like to preserve the status quo. But their arguments are not persuasive.

They claim that small cities and towns will not get adequate truck service without regulation. However, a recent Senate study showed that carriers serving small communities were satisfied with serving these markets and would continue to do so without regulation. The Senate study, which surveyed 165 communities with a population of 250,000 or less, predicts that the benefits of deregulation—lower rates and a variety of price/service options—would be available to small and large communities alike.

Industry officials also claim that deregulation would lead to chaotic conditions, but the excellent performance of large parts of the industry operating without ICC controls contradicts this assertion.

The case for a fundamental rethinking of regulation of the trucking industry is a compelling one, particularly in light of the success of airline deregulation. There are thousands of trucking companies, and more competition among them should lower prices while continuing reliable and safe service. Deregulation will only serve to strengthen the solid competitive principles on which our economic system is based. Senator Kennedy summed up the problem of trucking reform very well when he said: "Congress must face up to the fact that... trucking is seriously inefficient and inflationary and—perhaps even more importantly—that it is unfair to every American working man and woman who must pay higher prices for the products they eat and wear and use because of it."

CON: The following statement represents the position of the American Trucking Association.

Although cloaked in the glowing rhetoric that it would ease consumer costs, trucking industry deregulation has the potential of increasing prices for goods throughout the nation, imposing a new safety hazard on our highways and threatening the quality of life in rural America.

If legislation proposed by Senator Edward Kennedy (D. Mass.) and others is passed, there will be rate discrimination which will harm consumers, protections against tactics to monopolize trucking routes would be abandoned, safeguards against hazardous cargo would be made more difficult to enforce, and controls to eliminate dangerous drivers would be weakened. The deregulation proposals would virtually end 44 years of oversight of the trucking industry by the Interstate Commerce Commission, America's first consumer protection agency.

On the heels of the unexpectedly easy drive to deregulate the airlines, government and consumer group deregulators have turned their sights on other long-established economic regulations. But, already, the facts show that there is no relationship between the alleged short term success of airline deregulation and the proposal for deregulation of the trucking business.

To understand the dangers of motor carrier deregulation more fully, it is necessary to recall the factors which led to the passage of legislation in 1935 to give the motor freight industry stability.

There was fierce competition on routes between high-traffic cities, while small cities went with no service or were being grossly overcharged when they were served. There was no uniformity upon which the public could depend—no price or safety standards. It was an era characterized as "chaotic."

Then, the argument for regulation was strong. But now it is urgent. If a much smaller, pre-1935 industry was unstable without controls, imagine the bedlam that will ensue in the free-for-all trucking industry of today's size and scale!

If history is any indication, the effect of deregulation would again be to plunge the highway transportation industry into a cutthroat competition which would ultimately force smaller trucking firms out of business. This would severely reduce service and sacrifice safety. What freight service would cost is anyone's guess.

A recent poll of several of the nation's most respected transportation analysts found unanimous agreement that deregulation would drive small and marginal carriers out of business, resulting in less competition and higher freight rates—particularly for rural shippers. What this would mean for the consumer is a series of ever-increasing prices for most goods.

Those who support deregulation of the trucking industry claim that regulation is inflationary and that consumers pay billions of dollars in excess transportation charges. These claims are outrageous.

Why is it, for example, that transportation costs have risen less rapidly than the Consumer Price Index over the past decade? From a base of 100 in 1967, the cost of shipping goods by regulated general freight carriers rose to 181.8 through the third quarter of 1978.

During the same period, the Consumer Price Index rose from 100 to 197.8, or 16 points higher than the price of regulated motor carrier service. This is because the government must approve price increases under today's regulation.

On the question of safety, a national survey of 10,500 intercity truck drivers by Dr. Daryl Wyckoff, a professor of Business Administration at Harvard University, found that drivers whose companies are not regulated by the ICC consistently drive too fast, rest too little, and in many cases, actually fall asleep at the wheel.

Another reason to doubt the consumer benefits of deregulation is that small-town America, if served at all, will pay higher freight rates for less frequent pickup and delivery service.

It is reasonable, therefore, to worry about the consequences of vast changes in the current system. Every American would agree that there are too many government regulations. But the regulations which should be eliminated are those which impose an unnecessary burden on business and consumers and fuel inflation, such as many spewed forth by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, Environmental Protection Agency and the Federal Trade Commission.

Perhaps Americans have taken for granted the safe and reliable movement of products and materials to cities and towns throughout the country. Few worry about how freight moves and how such reliable movement contributes to the American economy.

Today's trucking industry is dependable because of a valuable, stabilizing series of rules which have governed it for 44 years. These tested regulations should not be thrown to the wind.

Joining the Racquetball Craze

By Bryna Brennan

Racquetball, the fastest growing indoor sport in the nation, may well be considered the "mutt" of ball games because it draws from tennis, handball, volleyball, ping pong and paddle ball.

This exciting, fast-moving, stimulating sport has been gaining popularity among all age groups, primarily because it's easy. A beginner can step out on the court and within an hour or so, he can be playing a competitive game.

The sport, as the name suggests, is played with a racquet and a ball. The racquet is similar to a tennis racquet, but it has a shorter handle. They're constructed of either wood, aluminum or fiberglass. To find the racquet that suits you best, speak with a professional player, and try out different types until you feel comfortable with one. The ball, which can be purchased in almost any sporting goods shop, is similar to a handball. It's light and rubbery, and should be lively enough to bounce above your waist when dropped from eye level.

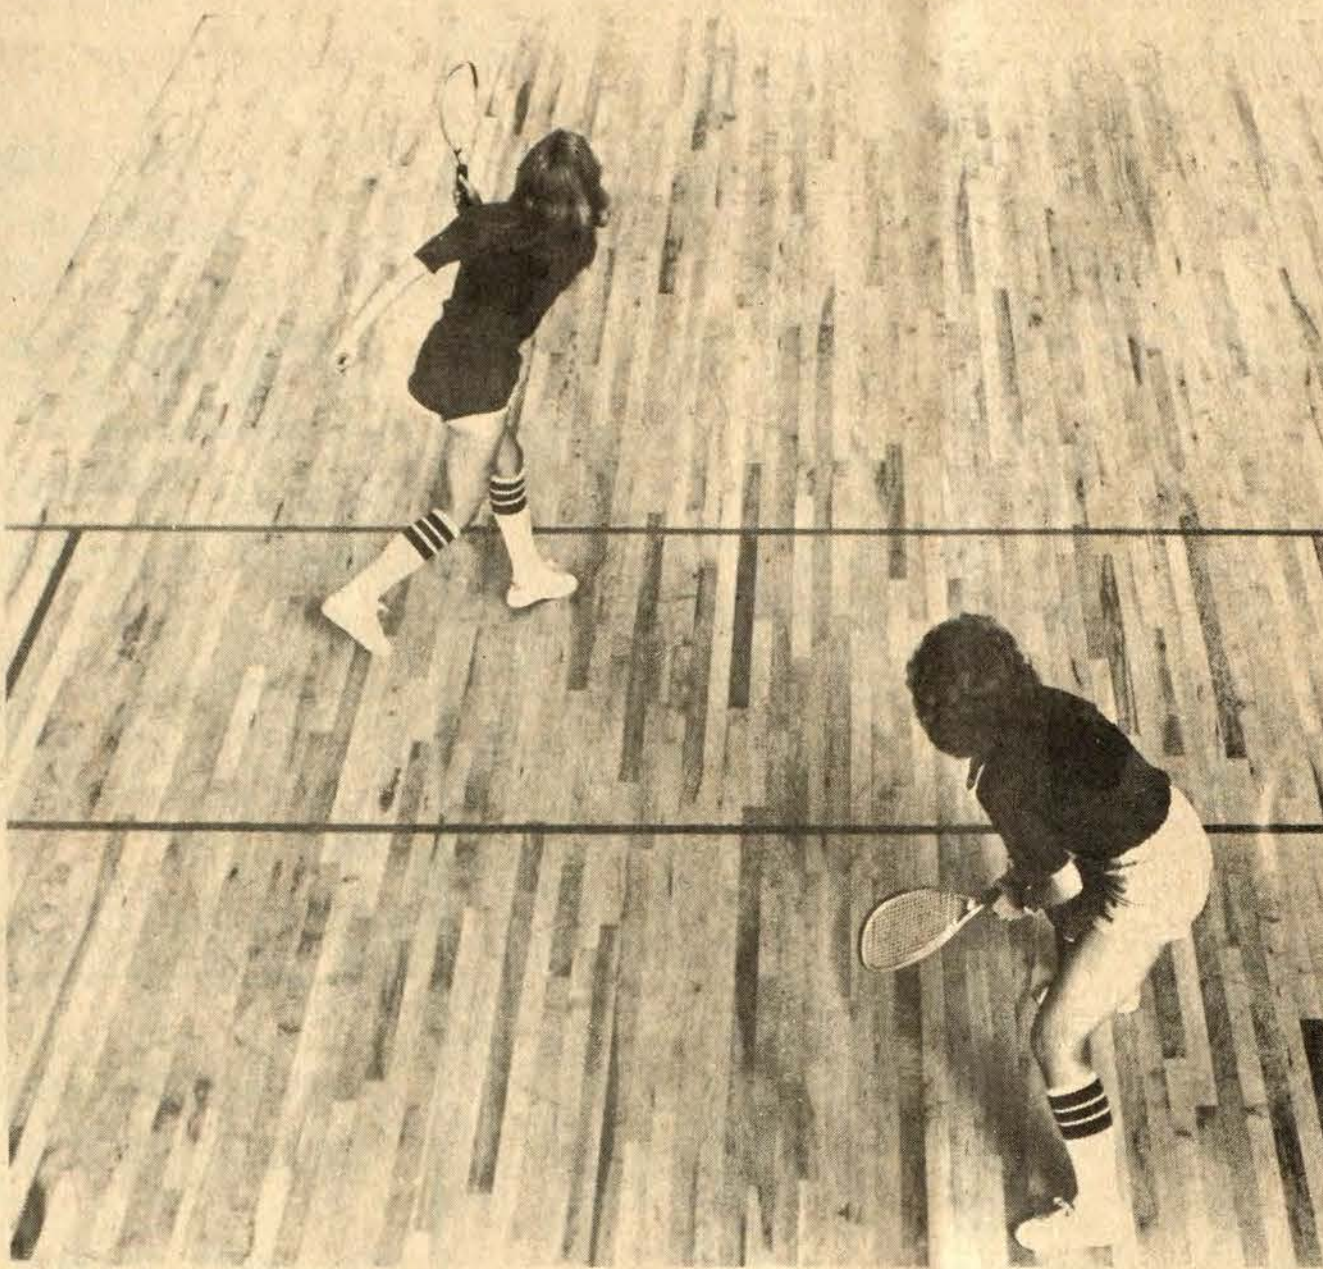

Now, on to the court. The court is exactly the same as a handball court, which consists of an enclosed, netless area 40 feet long, 20 feet wide and 20 feet high. There are six playing surfaces, including the ceiling walls and wood floors, and there are no "out of bounds" areas.

The winner in racquetball is the first player to reach 21 points, as in ping pong. Points are awarded only when you have the serve, as in volleyball. You can play with two people (singles), three (cut throat) or four players (doubles).

In singles, the game begins with one player standing in the serving zone, about 15 feet from the front wall. You, the server, bounce the ball in front of you and hit the ball against the front wall with your racquet so that the ball bounces back anywhere past the "short" line, which is about 20 feet from the front wall. You can hit any combination of walls, including the ceiling, but your ball must hit the front wall before it hits the floor.

Your opponent, who is also aiming at the same wall, may let the ball bounce or hit it before it lands. If you let the ball bounce twice, the server wins a point and retains the serve.

You get two attempts to serve.

Since this is the time you control your opponent most, you can use a number of strategies like making a hard low shot, or a soft, long lob. As with all ball games, hand to eye coordination is crucial. Remember to keep your eye on the ball.

Racquetball, which has its roots in paddleball, was born some 30 years ago by a squash pro who tried a shortened tennis racquet instead of a paddle. By 1968 the game became an official sport. It has gained rapid popularity because of its simplicity, fun, excitement and exercise value (you can burn off about 880 calories in just one hour of play).

For older folks the sport offers good exercise in a pleasant social setting. For the young, it develops physical and mental skills while teaching good sportsmanship. This year-round sport will improve your physical coordination and quickness. And the almost instant ability to play offers an incentive to continue.

The dress code is as simple as the game itself. Since the game gets heated, most men and women prefer to wear loose-fitting shorts and T-shirts. Sneakers are a must. Although racquetball is not considered a dangerous sport, eyeguards, which can be purchased in a sporting goods store, are a good idea.

Then there's the racquetball club itself. You can choose from the private clubs, which usually require a membership fee and monthly dues or a semi-private club, which offers memberships but allows outsiders to play at hourly rates. Public courts are also starting to sprout up, and you usually can rent them by the hour.

Now is as good a time as ever to take up racquetball. Hitting a ball off a wall has never been made so easy or so much fun.

Proposed Law Would Require Budgets, Audits for Cities

Cities will be required to have a budget, a system of accounts and an annual audit if legislation approved last Wednesday by the municipal issues task force becomes law.

A copy of city audits will be filed with the Department for Local Government "for information," the bill draft says.

Specific guidelines for budgeting and accounting were not placed in the bill. However, guidelines including model systems will be provided by the Department for Local Government, the proposed legislation states.

A bill defining types of city government, previously approved by the task group, was amended to reinstate provisions for a city manager form of government. This does not constitute any major change in current law regarding this type of city operation.

A proposal that dealt with civil service and contained recommendations of a sub-committee also received approval.

The civil service proposal would make such provisions mandatory for urban-county governments and permissive for first- and second-class cities. If adopted, it spells out provisions.

Police and fire departments are covered in a separate proposal.

By a 9-6 vote the committee agreed to retain a portion of the bill that prohibits a civil service employee from running for an office in the city in which he or she is employed. The vote came on an amendment that would have required cities to provide a leave of absence for a candidate.

Stipulations that would have set 24-hour-on and 48-hour-off hours for paid firemen resulted in the postponing of this proposed measure. The group will be given written information on current scheduling practices for firemen before the measure is considered again.

Other issues to be addressed in concluding the work of the municipal issues task group are bonding of city employees and extra-territorial powers of cities.

'All Creatures Great and Small' To Premiere on KET, June 28

The unusual experiences of James Herriot, veterinarian and best-selling author, come to life with the premiere of "All Creatures Great and Small," on KET Thursday, June 28 at 9 p.m. (ET). The opening episode will be repeated Sunday, July 1 at 2:30 p.m.

The BBC-produced series is based on Herriot's first four best-selling books—stories that are based on Herriot's own experiences as a Yorkshire Dales veterinarian in the late 1930's, just before the war.

"All Creatures Great And Small" tells the story of a young, newly-qualified surgeon arriving for his first job in an established practice, his partnership with Siegfried Farnon and Farnon's ever-scheming younger brother, Tristan; his courtship and eventual marriage; and his acceptance by the local country folk.

Christopher Timothy stars as Herriot, with Robert Hardy co-starring as Siegfried, and Peter Davison as Tristan. The series will continue to air on Thursdays at 9 a.m. (ET) and Sundays at 2:30 p.m. (ET), for 13 weeks.

Focus in on Eyeglass Buys

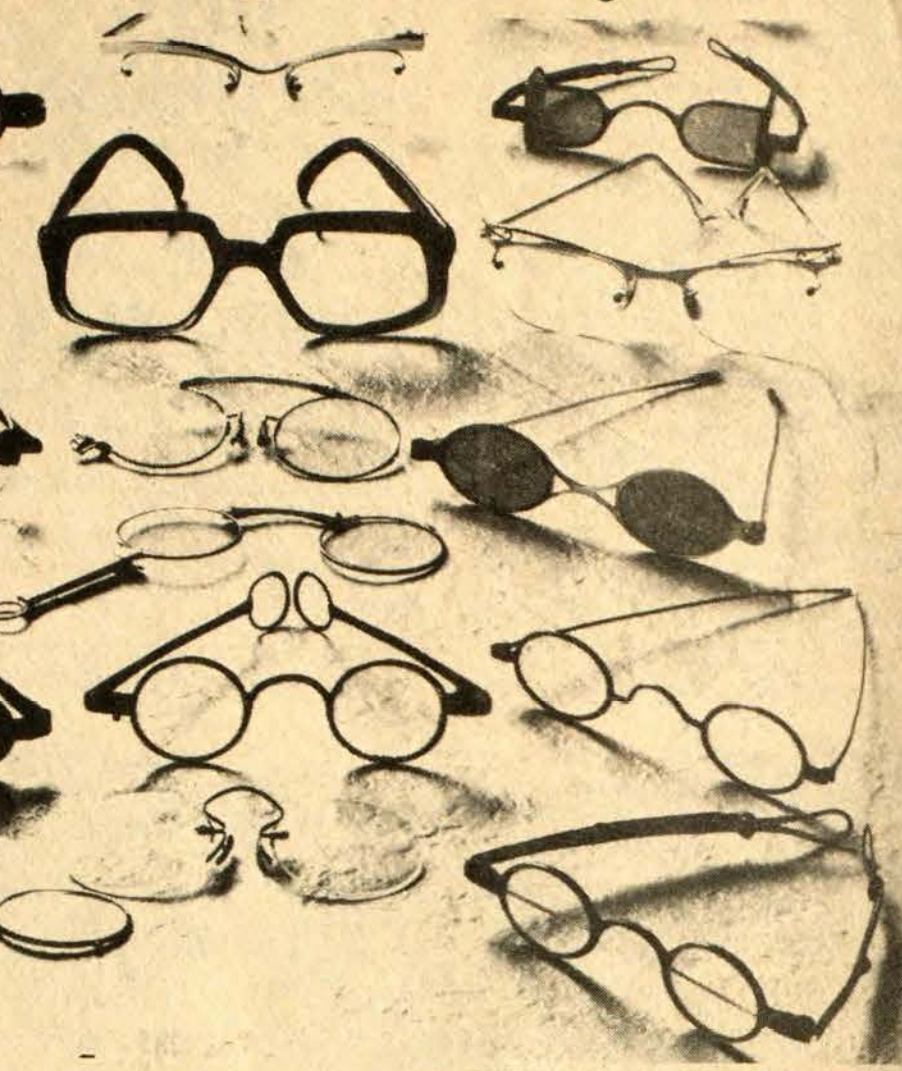

By Desmond Sharrer

"The cost of eyewear in this country is getting out of hand!" Sound like a familiar complaint? In one recent study, the price of identical pairs of glasses varied by as much as 200% in the same city. In states that banned eyeglass advertising, prices averaged 25% higher than in states where it wasn't banned. With over 50% of all Americans wearing glasses or contact lenses, that's a lot of consumer dollars wasted. Finally, something has been done about it.

A Federal Trade Commission (FTC) ruling that became effective July 13, 1978 gave consumers a better opportunity to shop around for the best buy for their eyes. Before the ruling, many state optometric associations prohibited their members from advertising. Optometrists and ophthalmologists prescribing glasses and contacts often required their customers to buy from them. The new regulation makes it mandatory for eye doctors to give patients their prescriptions immediately after an eye exam at no extra charge. If your doctor does not offer the prescription, ask for it. You decide where to buy your lenses at the best price. The new regulation also permits eyewear advertising, increasing competition and consumer awareness of price options.

Cost should not be the only consideration when selecting lenses or the doctor who prescribes them of course. You also want to assess the skill of your physician, the quality of eyewear you're purchasing and the service you can expect to receive if something goes wrong. Selecting the right eye doctor is in many ways the most important task, because when eye disease strikes, he is the only one who can treat you. If you notice something wrong with your vision, consult an ophthalmologist. He'll be able to diagnose your illness, prescribe drugs and perform surgery, in addition to selling you eyewear. If you've had your eyes checked recently and only need a new prescription, you'd do better going to an optometrist. He can spot eye diseases, (though he can't treat them) and he can prescribe and sell glasses or contacts. Since the optometrist does not have a medical degree, his fees should be less than a doctor's. Even less expensive is the optician, who only sells the lenses prescribed by others.

When it comes to assessing the quality of your eyewear, remember that price is not necessarily an indicator of value. For example, those fashionable designer frames may be no better for your eyes than another set of glasses, but they will definitely cost a lot more. The most important factor is the glass that goes into the frames, and without special training, it's impossible for most consumers to know when they're getting quality. It makes sense to consult your local better business or consumer affairs bureau to find out if others have complained about the service or products that a particular merchant or doctor offers.

But sometimes, even with the best intentions, mistakes are made and your glasses or contacts are prepared improperly. To make sure that whomever you're dealing with stands behind their product, ask a few pertinent questions before agreeing to any purchase. Find out how long you must wait before delivery of your lenses. What is the refund policy? If your prescription has been filled incorrectly the first time, who pays for replacement lenses and a second office visit?

If, despite all precautions, something goes wrong, make sure your prescription really matches your lenses. Go for another eye examination to check if the results are identical with your first one. If you have complaints or problems, contact your local consumer protection agency or licensing board for advice on the next step.

Workshop Held Here For Vocational Teachers

The Kentucky Department of Education held one of its four workshops for teachers who will be using competency-based vocational education materials for the first time at Prestonsburg Community College, yesterday and today (Tuesday and Wednesday).

Competency-based education breaks materials for each course into "modules," units on individual areas of skill or knowledge so that students may work at their own rates. Each module must be mastered before a student can proceed to the next.
