

Feb. 20th Date Set for 'Phone System Change

If you live around Harold and your phone sounds funny on Sunday, Feb. 20, don't be alarmed. The new dial tone will signal the changeover at the Harold Telephone Company exchange from the old electro-mechanical switching system to a new, computerized, "digital" system.

The phone company says the service will be better, too—faster and more reliable—and that customers will now be able to purchase optional features like touch-tone dialing, call forwarding, three-way calling, call waiting, and speed dialing.

Harold Telephone Company President Paul Gearheart said the changeover reflects the company's "tremendous growth over the past ten years." The firm was incorporated in 1953 and the switching system being replaced this month was installed in 1956.

Gone will be the clackety-clack of the traditional system. The only sound made by the new switching unit is the hum of the fans that keep it cool. And where a technician might have taken pliers or screwdriver to repair the old unit, ironing out problems is now the (See Story No. 5, Page 4)

PERCHED well out of the reach of floodwaters on a plateau overlooking U.S. 23 at Harold, this building houses a new digital switching system for the Harold Telephone Company. The centerpiece of a $1.1 million project, the new system is currently being tested and is scheduled to go into service on Feb. 20.

Stanley Tells Work To Make Mines Safer

It may have taken a series of tragedies to provide the necessary push, but new laws and tighter enforcement could mean that Kentucky has "turned the corner" on the road to mine safety, the state's top mining official told industry representatives last week.

Kentucky lost on average one miner every five workdays in fatal accidents last year, Mines and Minerals Commissioner Willard Stanley told about 90 members of the Big Sandy Elkhorn Mining Institute at May Lodge Saturday night.

The state had 43 mine fatalities in 1982—the federal Mine Safety and Health Administration counted 46, but Stanley classed three of them as highway deaths—more than any two other coal-producing states.

It is a distinction the commissioner is clearly anxious to be rid of, and he outlined for the mine company officials changes—many of them mandated by the 1982 state legislature—designed to "make the coalfields completely safe."

No one needed reminding that it was a Floyd county operation—the RFH mine on Mink Branch of Mud Creek, where seven miners died a year ago—that gave an early boost to last year's grim tally. It, and the blast that killed eight at Topmost the month before, led to his department's focussing on blasting procedures during 1982, Stanley said.

With 339 operators using the method, "we didn't feel the need to eliminate" the controversial method known as "blasting from the solid," Stanley said. "There were too many people and too many tons" involved, he explained.

Under a new law which became effective last July, however, each mine engaged in solid blasting has been inspected and has had to apply for a special permit. Further, a person has been assigned as solid blasting inspector in each of Mines and Minerals' six district offices.

Each office has an inspector assigned to dust sampling, too. Samples can now be analysed promptly to see that sufficient rock dust has been spread to prevent ignition of highly-volatile coal dust in the mines.

And, as soon as a state hiring freeze is lifted, every district will have an electrical inspector also—a safety measure required by law since 1953 but never implemented, the commissioner said. Ten percent of mining fatalities are caused by electrical faults, he said.

Shot firers and drill operators shooting from the solid now need special certificates, as do emergency medical technicians. His department's training staff has been beefed up to see that miners are able to earn the certification they need, Stanley said.

Shot firers, who handle the explosives implicated in both the Adkins and RFH mine disasters, must now have a year's experience underground before they can be certified. Even then, they must take a course and pass a test for certification. Previously, only 90 days' experience was required.

Cracking down on illegal operators has also been a priority since the creation last July of a task force made up of state police and Mines and Minerals personnel. The task force has closed six mines and arrested over 20 operators in seven east Kentucky counties.

Apparently as a result of the crackdown, many formerly illegal operations are now licensed. By last October, 3020 mines had been licensed, up 254 from the previous year. While eight fatalities occurred in illegal mines in 1981, there were three in 1982, according to Mines and Minerals Department figures.

Closing down an illegal mine was initially a difficult choice, Stanley told the coal men. What steered him for the (See Story No. 4, Page 4)

Hall Sentenced To 10 Years for Slaying

Price Hall, 39, of McDowell, convicted last month of first-degree manslaughter in the shooting death of Ed "Panhandle" Moore and of assault in the shooting of Moore's two sons, was sentenced in Circuit Court Friday to 10 years in prison on the manslaughter conviction and one year on each of the assault counts.

The terms will be served concurrently.

Hall, who has already spent seven-and-a-half months behind bars, will be eligible for parole in the summer of 1984.

In passing sentence, Circuit Judge Hollie Conley followed the recommendation of the jury which convicted Hall on Jan. 11 and a pre-sentence report filed by Parole Officer Frank DeRossett, Jr., which noted that Hall had no previous convictions.

On the County Liquor Front...

Beer Vendor Regulations Draw Protest at Hearing

Part of Blame For Problems Laid to Board

The state Alcoholic Beverage Control Board is largely to blame for the problems facing Floyd officials in regulating establishments that serve beer, County Attorney Arnold Turner, Jr. charged this week.

The reason, he said, is that the liquor board handed out retail beer licenses to everyone who asked for them, "almost to the point of irresponsibility."

Now, with more than 80 licensed beer outlets in the county's unincorporated areas, the state still wants to take a "hands off" attitude, arguing that—with the exception of gambling and lewd dancing—what goes on in licensed establishments here is none of their business, Turner said.

If the state board had "acted with more prudence and wisdom" regarding the number of licenses it issued, had screened applicants; and checked on the location of the places they licensed, the county's present difficulties could have been avoided, the county attorney argued.

As it happened, licenses were issued to some premises accessible only by four-wheel-drive vehicles; convicted bootleggers were advised simply to apply in their wives' names; and so many licenses were issued that applicants who intended only to run package stores are being forced to offer food and games in an effort to remain competitive, Turner said.

"They dumped it on us and I resent it, especially since they still refuse to back us up," the county attorney complained. "We have plenty to do besides worry about roadhouses, but it would be totally irresponsible of us, in view of the void left by the state, not to respond with some regulations of our own."

A regulation that would place strict limits on the kinds of activities permitted on premises with retail beer licenses ran into opposition during the first of three scheduled public hearings last Thursday, and Floyd Alcoholic Beverage Control Administrator Denzil Allen said he was open to modification of the proposed rule.

Opponents said that the regulation—which would allow no music, dancing or games where beer is sold—would drive small retailers out of business, would deprive Floyd countians of decent places of entertainment, and implies they are "too uncivilized" to enjoy facilities that are commonplace elsewhere.

But Sheriff Henry Hale said he doesn't have enough deputies to handle the problems that could be anticipated if nightclub-type establishments were allowed to flourish here.

Cloyd Elliott who, with his wife, Jo Ann, operates CJ's Carryout at Price, charged in the hearing that people out in the county, where most of the support for legal liquor sales originated, were being subjected to excessive regulation and police "harassment."

Challenging reports that state police and sheriff's officers are being kept busy with tavern violations, Elliott said, "I've heard of no trouble. There have been fewer arrests and fewer drunks" since the county went wet. "I can see no problem except rumors."

While neither the type nor frequency of reported violations was made clear at the hearing, Sheriff Hale urged passage of the proposed regulation, noting that he has only two salaried deputies and insisting that he would need 20 to 35 deputies to police the county's beer outlets if the rule were not adopted.

Mike Turner operates T & T Liquors in the old movie house at Drift. He would like to turn the place into a nightclub, but that would be forbidden under the new rule. "What disturbs me greatly," he said, "is that I don't agree (See Story No. 1, Page 4)

Suggest Use Of New Gas Tax Funds on Route

There is hope that the two-lane "missing link" segment of US 23 between Prestonsburg and Paintsville will be widened to bring it in line with the remainder of the route which is four-lane from the Kentucky-Virginia line at Jenkins to Catlettsburg.

In an interview this week Kirby Ison, Pikeville highway district engineer, said that district highway officials, including himself and District general manager Ed Patton, have recommended to the central office in Frankfort that this improvement be made.

The recommendation came as an extra $12 million windfall for Kentucky highways is expected to result from the newly-enacted gasoline tax.

"Our proposal to Secretary Runke (of the state Transportation Cabinet) is in its early stages of consideration, but we are hopeful that if it doesn't violate any of the concepts for overall development of US 23 it will go through," Mr. Ison said.

"Overall development" plans for the route could indicate an alternate route from Prestonsburg to Paintsville which might generally follow the original US 23 across Abbott Mountain and down Little Paint Creek.)

District highway officials agree that the proposed improvement would not only eliminate a traffic bottleneck and an extremely dangerous section of highway but would also be highly beneficial to Prestonsburg Community College, Highlands Regional Medical Center, the town of Auxier, Jenny Wiley State Park and Combs airport.

Hearing Set On Tavern Regulation

A second hearing on a proposed regulation pertaining to retail beer outlets has been set for 1 p.m. Friday, Feb. 4, in the courthouse annex conference room, Floyd ABC Administrator Denzil Allen has announced.

Burns Victim Sues Coal Co.

Ronald Gullett, a 46-year-old Wheelwright man who suffered extensive burns when he touched a power line at a mine last February, has sued the mine owners and the power company for more than $10 million.

Gullett claims he suffered serious permanent injuries, had to have a foot amputated, and is totally disabled as a result of burns suffered when he came in contact with a high voltage current outside an Island Creek Coal Co. mine on Jack's Creek, Feb. 18 last year.

Named as defendants in the suit are the Kentucky Power Co., Bailey Mining Co., Wheelwright Mining Co., Inspiration Coal Co., Island Creek Coal Co., and the Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting Co.

The plaintiff, who was reportedly checking power connections on an electrical substation on Blue Branch of Jack's Creek when the accident occurred, claims that the defendants were negligent in failing to warn him of the dangers involved.

He is asking for $5,831,792.78 for his injuries and loss of earning power and another $5 million in punitive damages. In addition, his wife, Barbara, is seeking $150,000.

The Gulletts are represented by Lester H. Burns, Jr., of Burnside, and William M. Scaff, of Lexington.

(Suits filed in court present only one side of the issue in dispute.)

Tavern Operator Arrested After Incident at Price

Sheriff Henry Hale's most vocal critic at last Thursday's hearing on a rule to limit activities at taverns was arrested soon afterwards following an incident at the tavern he operates at Price.

According to warrants sworn out by Deputy Sheriff Jimmy Hall, Cloyd and Jo Ann Elliott, operators of CJ's Carryout, prevented him from serving a federal subpoena on one of their patrons "by using and threatening to use force, violence or physical interference."

Hall and another deputy, Phillip Tackett, were reportedly patrolling near the tavern around 8:30 p.m. Thursday when they spotted an automobile belonging to Phillip Booth, of McDowell, parked outside. The two officers, who were carrying a subpoena for Booth to appear as a witness in a federal case, found him inside but were allegedly shown the door by the Elliotts before they could serve the paper.

Six deputies and two state troopers returned to the scene but were also blocked by the tavern owners, said Chief Deputy Rodney Holbrook. By that time there were reports Booth had left the scene and the officers withdrew rather than force a confrontation, Holbrook said.

The Elliotts were arrested and later released from custody Friday after posting $200 cash bonds.

Coincidentally, Booth was himself named last week in a warrant accusing him of passing a cold check. Fred Kiper, of Lexington, said Booth paid him for two vacuum cleaners last August with a dud check in the amount of $1378. Booth was also released on a $200 cash bond.

Homemade isn't so hot, reveals the February Reader's Digest. The bread that Grandma baked had less than one-quarter of certain important nutrients that today's supermarket white loaf contains. In fact, in a survey of twelve countries, America's white bread was judged highest in overall nutritional content. Good news for average Americans, who consume 70 pounds of bread annually.

A Prayer... SLOW ME DOWN

Slow me down, Lord!
Ease the pounding of my heart by the quieting of my mind. Steady my hurried pace with a vision of the eternal reach of time. Give me, amidst the confusion of my day, the calmness of the everlasting hills. Break the tension of my nerves and muscles with the soothing music of the singing streams that live in my memory. Help me to know the magical restorative power of sleep. Teach me the art of taking minute vacations...of slowing down to look at a flower, to chat with a friend, to pet a dog, to read a few lines from a good book.

Remind me each day of the fable of the hare and the tortoise, that I may know that the race is not always to the swift; but there is more to life than increasing its speed. Let me look upward into the branches of the towering trees, and know that they grow tall because they grow slowly and well.

Slow me down, Lord, and inspire me to send my roots deep into the soil of life's enduring values, that I may grow toward the stars of my greater destiny. AMEN.

How Much About Death Can A Child Understand?

The young child of three to five usually understands little of death and seems to be disturbed about it for only a short time or for short intervals.

The child from five to nine may express guilt remembering past feelings and quarrels with the deceased. They will be very much influenced by the way in which adults in the family behave during the death and funeral.

Of utmost importance to children of any age is that they receive the support of a loving adult to help sort out their feelings, assure them that they are in no way responsible for the death, and encourage them to share their feelings with you.

If you have a question feel free to contact us. Sometimes we can be of help in lightening your load in these intensely personal situations.

The ‘Legal’ Alcohol Problem

Many of those who are critical of the action taken last week by the Floyd fiscal court with the support of some county officials to remove the “roadhouse image” from places which sell intoxicating beverages may not be aware that this was a move designed to prevent a repetition of the sorry state into which the county fell with a multiplicity of roadhouses years ago when the county was last wet.

At that time so-called “beer joints” with their juke boxes and “anything goes” atmosphere resulted in so many crimes of violence that a commonwealth’s attorney—rightly or wrongly—pronounced the county “the bloodiest soil in the Western Hemisphere.”

It occurs to us that the court and other officials are aware of what conditions were then and that they now are acting to prevent a return to such a situation. The county officials could have done nothing, but we who are always ready to criticise would have been ready to lay the blame on them if conditions did indeed develop that were like those which older citizens remember and fear.

It has been argued that the court should have been more concerned with the type of individual granted a beer or whiskey license, instead of trying to regulate the operation of these places after licenses were granted. But what assurance do they have that the best type of citizen, granted a license to sell intoxicants, could control a place without legal controls? It should be remembered that any proprietor who denies a troublemaker entrance might be open to a civil rights action.

The ABC board apparently wants to throw the entire problem into the hands of the county as long as county authority does not cut down on the sales of beer and whiskey. Meanwhile its chief counsel, Catherine Staib, appears to be derivative of the county’s first attempt to handle the situation.

Nobody is going to come up with a perfect solution of the problem, but officials of the county deserve credit for trying.

we are not sufficiently civilized that we can't drink and dance at the same time.”

Operators should police their own establishments, said Turner, who added that he has never had to call the police in the four months he has been in business. If necessary, the six percent tax the county intends to levy on retail liquor sales could be spent on hiring extra deputies, Turner said.

Sandy Boyd thought a compromise was possible. “People have got to be able to do more than drink,” he argued. “If they can only drink and have nothing to do, then they’re going to fight.”

At least the ban on amusement games should be eliminated, said Boyd, operator of Mud Creek Liquors at Harold. “Video games are now a part of life,” he observed.

While the proposed regulation would not apply in incorporated towns, some Prestonsburg retailers were concerned that a similar rule might be adopted here. Gladys Franco, owner of Franco’s Lounge and Grill at Lancer, said after the hearing that she has never had occasion to summon police there. In any event, the law already provides for revoking the license of any nightspot that turns into a trouble spot, she said.

Another hearing on the regulation has been set for 1 p.m. Friday, Feb. 4 in the courthouse annex.

Growing Child

THE SCRIBBLERS

The scribblers.

They just can't help themselves, according to Growing Child, the monthly child development newsletter.

They've just got to close their fists around those fat black crayons—and scribble. Around and around they go, in huge arcs, angular zig-zags, blurs, and blobs. Unfortunately, scribblers like to use walls for their canvases.

(If you provide an alternative for a scribbler, like a large chalkboard and colored chalk, an easel with newspaper and paint, or lots of plain paper (the back of computer printouts or shelf paper in rolls make marvellous drawing pads) you'll have fewer pictures on your walls.)

Scribbling may look like nonsense to adults, but there is some sense in it for a three-year-old.

When children learn to stop their arm movements in time, those big circles become faces. Tight round scribbles make eyes, looser ones make curly hair.

Sweeping lines stop short for arms, fingers, mouths, spiky hair. Pounding with the point of the crayon, when it becomes less violent, makes pretty dots of snow and gentle raindrops. Scribbling is necessary preparation for drawing—and writing, too.

But it's hard to know what to say to a youngster when you're presented with a work of art. “That's very nice” sounds as phony as it is. “What is it?” is embarrassing since the child probably doesn't know either.

“I really like purple scribbles” is probably the most honest, appreciative, and gracious thing you can say!

THE VIEW IS BRIGHTER

Have been giving the birds the silent treatment, the last few weeks, inasmuch as our pleas for their return have been ignored all winter long. And now they're beginning to congregate around our feeders—the sparrows, of course, a few flickers and titmice, a chickadee or so, the impertinent jays, some others I can't recall. And one or two cardinals whose beauty we particularly miss. If they could understand some of the remarks I've made during their absence, it's possible they never would return.

THE STORY OF A RETRIEVER

Jimmy Goble, of our staff, is trying his best to keep this column alive. This week, for example, he tells a two-part story.

The first has to do with the architect who was one of the greatest. He designed this skyscraper in such detail that he knew exactly how many bricks, how much mortar, how much wood and how many nails would be needed. Came the day when the edifice was completed, and—horrors!—one brick was left over. This stickler for details was furious. He seized the brick, ran madly to the edge of the nearby woods and hurled the offending object as far as he could.

While you're pondering the point, if any, of Story No. 1 we turn to No. 2.

This woman who boarded a commuter train with her toy poodle found the lone seat available was pretty well occupied by a big man who was smoking a big, black cigar, but she sat down, anyway. Soon the dog showed signs that the cigar was making him sick. The woman asked her seat companion if he would mind not smoking. He assured her he would, and sent up a powerful smoke signal that he himself was not exactly pleased with her and the dog.

It wound up with the woman snatching the cigar from the man's mouth and tossing it out the window. Whereupon he retaliated by snatching the poodle from her arms and tossing it out the window in the wake of the cigar.

The woman jumped to her feet, pulled the emergency cord and the train jolted to a stop. They looked out, and back there, coming down the tracks, was the poodle, and he had something in his mouth.

No, it wasn't the cigar. Go back to Story 1.

Paul Revere, The Patriot, was also Paul Revere the bell maker, engraver, goldsmith, the first man to roll sheet copper. He served his country in many capacities.

task was evidence of the “massive slaughter” of young men in makeshift mines “with no fans, no timbers, no nothing,” he said.

He shut down a wildcat operation of Mid-South Coal Company, one of the biggest coal firms in Knox county, on December 7, although its contributions had made the company—which also runs three legal mines—politically influential, Stanley noted. “I felt if I couldn't catch the big ones, I might as well let the little ones go,” he explained.

While Kentucky has had no fatalities in legal mines since the new law took effect last July, it would be naive to hope that mine disasters are a thing of the past. The Department of Mines and Minerals now has 12 trained and fully equipped mine rescue teams and has purchased a 27-foot motor home for use as a command center during rescue operations, the commissioner reported.

Equipped with radios, telephone, sirens and lights, the mobile unit will give rescue workers a place that is protected from the usual press of onlookers to study maps and plan strategy, it was said.

The traditional banter of speakers preceding the commissioner included a number of brave jokes about the current slump. Although Kentucky still leads the nation in coal production, the state last year fell about five million tons short of the 157 million tons mined the year before and unemployment was running at 26.1 percent in November, according to the most conservative estimate.

But the emphasis of Commissioner Stanley's address Saturday was not on sales but on safety—and on creating a consciousness among miners that will help ensure it. With 3043 mines in Kentucky and some 59,398 miners, “it is a constant battle,” he said, “to keep people alert to the fact that they can get hurt.”

task of an operator seated at a keyboard and peering into a video display tube.

In fact, problems should not arise often and, when they do, he will generally know about it before the customer does, said Gerald Robinette, director of the changeover project. The new unit will automatically scan every line in the early hours each morning, he said, and make a print-out report of any problems.

Some 2500 customers are served by the phone company's Harold exchange, with about the same number served by the firm's other exchanges at Grethel and Wheelwright. The Grethel exchange should receive a digital switch system later this year, Gearheart said, and the Wheelwright exchange some time after that.

In addition to the change in the switching unit, calling capacity has been more than doubled between Harold and Grethel, a route that can now handle 40 calls simultaneously, compared to 19 in the past.

The new Harold exchange will be housed in a building recently constructed high on a hill across U.S. 23 from the existing building and well out of the reach of floodwaters that swirled perilously close to the old exchange in 1977.

The project represents a $1.1 million investment, Gearheart said. It is a far cry from the simple crank-phone system strung up along Mud Creek in 1909 by B. F. Elliott—later Floyd county surveyor—who is said to have brought the idea back from the Philippines where he had seen field telephones operating during the turn-of-the-century Insurrection.

One change that Harold subscribers will have to adjust to—they will need to dial all seven digits when making a local call, instead of only the last five digits, as many are accustomed to doing. It won't be enough to dial 8 any more, but 478 will put customers in touch with a “state-of-the-art” switchboard, boast company officials.

Jail Bill Paid, Bevins To Remain in Laurel

Laurel County Jailer “Big John” Bowling was hopping mad. Floyd fiscal court was four months behind on bills for a Floyd prisoner's accommodation in the London jail, Bowling said last week. And, unless he was paid soon, he would personally bring the prisoner back to this county and deposit him on the judge-executive's doorstep, the jailer vowed.

Apparently that won't be necessary. A check was sent to the Laurel county jailer Monday, said Judge-Executive Jerry Lafferty, Jr., to pay for the lodging of William “Okie” Bevins, the Printer man being held there while he awaits trail on charges of murdering five men in an Allen auto parts store in October, 1981.

Bowling said he had made repeated calls to the courthouse here to get his money, only to be put off each time. “He ain't a bit of trouble,” the jailer said of Bevins. “But we ain't going to hold him if we don't get paid. There's no reason for them being so far behind. I've got a payroll to meet.”

One reason for the delay in payment, Judge Lafferty intimated, is that Laurel fiscal court has been charging the top rate—$17.50 a day—for housing out-of-county prisoners. While that amount is permissible under state law, most counties charge much less—around $12.50 is common—and Floyd charges only $10.

Bowling said Laurel fiscal court voted last month to reduce its rate to $12. “That's about right,” he said, when told that Floyd officials had agreed to pay him $1400 this week.

The 71-year-old Bevins has an eye malady that requires frequent trips to a doctor's office but is an otherwise undemanding prisoner, his jailer said. The accused man's sons, Bill and Roger, each visit their father a couple of times a month, Bowling said.

Bevins' trial has been set for April 4, in Greenup Circuit Court, where it was moved on account of the strong feelings the case was said to have aroused here.

Elk Horn Coal Buys Transcon Floyd Holdings

Sale of the Transcontinental Coal Company's Floyd county holdings to the Elk Horn Coal Corp. for a reported $12½ million was confirmed here this week.

Transcontinental Coal, which is a successor to the Diamond Coal Co., is based at Ivel in which vicinity it and its predecessor, the Greer-Ellison Coal Co., have been involved in coal production since the mid-1960's.

The transaction involves apparently 14,000 acres of coal lands on Ivy Creek, Buffalo Creek and in the headwaters of Cow Creek. Coal reserves conveyed have been estimated as high as 20 million tons.

In addition to coal holdings, Transcontinental also conveyed to Elk Horn its 700-tons-per hour preparation plant located across the Big Sandy River from Ivel and all its mining equipment.

Mining operations on the holdings conveyed will continue under the name of Transcontinental Coal Co., Inc.

Initial production from the coal acreage began with surface mining on Ivy Creek by Greer-Ellison. Future operations, which are dependent upon an uncertain coal market, will include both surface and deep mining.

Records Law Designed To Ensure Public Business Done in Public

Kentucky law provides that all public records shall be open for inspection by any person. The Open Records Act, found in Kentucky Revised Statutes 61.870 to 61.884, was enacted into law in 1976. The purpose of this law is to ensure that public business is not being conducted in secret.

The definition of "public records" is comprehensive, and includes books, papers, maps, photographs, cards, tapes, discs, recordings, and other documentary materials which are prepared, owned, used, possessed, or retained by any public agency. Although any person has the right to inspect public records, certain procedures must be followed. Demands to inspect public records should be made during the regular office hours of the agency. The custodian of records may direct that the individual who requests to inspect public records file a written application describing the records to be inspected. If the public record sought to be inspected is not in the possession of the custodian he or she shall inform the applicant as to the public record's whereabouts or designate a place, time, and date for inspection of the public record.

There exist 10 categories of public records to which the public right of inspection does not extend. These exceptions are found in Kentucky Revised Statutes 61.878. Records containing information of a personal nature cannot be inspected if such inspection would result in an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy. Inspection cannot be made of any records or information the disclosure of which is prohibited by federal or state statute or regulations. Preliminary recommendations or memoranda containing opinions or policy formulations cannot be inspected. Likewise, inspection cannot be made of any preliminary drafts, notes, or correspondence with private individuals.

Other types of public records which are exempted from the right of inspection include test questions and examination data used to administer a licensing examination, the contents of real estate appraisals, records confidentially disclosed to an agency for the regulation of commercial enterprise, certain records of law enforcement agencies, and records of agencies involved in administrative adjudication involving statutory or regulatory violations.

Public agencies must decide whether to permit access to any records requested within three working days after receipt of any request to inspect. If a public agency chooses to deny access to a record, the agency must notify in writing the person making the request of the specific exception relied upon. A copy of a written response denying inspection of any public record must be forwarded by the agency to the attorney general.

Any person aggrieved by an agency's refusal to make public a record may appeal to the attorney general. The attorney general must then review the denial and issue within 10 working days a written opinion on the matter. If the attorney general decides that the agency should allow inspection of the record, the agency must either comply or institute proceedings within 30 days for injunctive or declaratory relief in the appropriate circuit court of this state. If the attorney general upholds the agency's denial, the person seeking disclosure may institute proceedings in circuit court. Actions by individuals who have been refused access to public records may be instituted in circuit court regardless of whether such individuals have first appealed any denials to the attorney general.

Kentucky's Open Records Law further provides that any individual shall have the opportunity to inspect any public record relating to him. Of course, the aforementioned exceptions to the Open Records Law likewise apply to this right of inspection.

Kentucky's Open Records Act grants to the citizens of this commonwealth the opportunity to inspect a broad range of public records. As such, this act guarantees that the public's business is not being conducted in secret.

Autistic Children Now Said Testable

Just who and what is an autistic child? Much interest, and misinformation, has been generated in this area in recent years.

Autism is defined as a severe disorder of communication and behavior which begins in early childhood. Children here are characterized by a lack of meaningful speech (in almost half the group) and are described as withdrawn into themselves, uninterested in others and/or affectionless.

According to information provided by the Kentucky Department of Education, Bureau of Education for Exceptional Children, for years autistic children were considered for the most part, untestable, although subsequent research has disproven this idea.

Studies by DeMyer, Lockyer and Rutter indicate that not only are autistic children testable, but that with careful, flexible testing, the results are reliable and have a high prognostic value.

However, the first step in testing an autistic child is generally agreed to be an accurate, comprehensive assessment conducted by a multi-disciplinary team. At minimum, this team should include a licensed psychologist, speech specialist, educational diagnostician, parents and a doctor to perform a medical assessment.

Assessment of the autistic child is obviously more than simply applying a set of tests, but should also include such techniques as observation, parent interview and informal assessment testing procedures.

Marcus (1979) states that many of the problems in assessment come from the frustrations of the examiner. He suggests that by using a positive, flexible approach, and reminding oneself that behavior is the autistic child's coping mechanism, the problems involved in the assessment procedure can be reduced. It appears then, the approach to the successful assessment of an autistic child needs to be like that of the education and treatment of these children—individualized and flexible.

While testing and dealing with autistic children is, therefore, difficult at many times, at least some progress is being made in the work with autistic child.

Specifically in Kentucky, the Department of Education, Bureau of Education for Exceptional Children, is participating with the National Society for Children and Adults with Autism in a personnel training project.

While this project during 1982-83 is providing a "hands-on" training for Fayette and Jefferson county Schools, a state-level training team will be providing several regional training sessions throughout the state during 1983-84.

Areas of training to be covered are student assessment, chronological age, appropriate and functional curriculum planning, instructional technology, non-aversive behavior management and parent involvement.

Illegal Credit Card Use Cited by Willett

"Illegal use of a credit card is considered fraud and carries a rather severe penalty," says Art Willett, South Central Bell manager. "A few in eastern Kentucky are attempting to use the celebrity trick again."

Willett said that one case has been referred to Bell's security department and that there will possibly be others. Using the credit card number of a known performer has been done before and several arrests were made. "The same thing will happen this time," Willett added. Federal law allows the penalty of up to five years in jail and up to $1,000 in fines.

Catholic Women Re-Group

Catholic churchwomen met recently to reactivate their women's group and gave themselves a new name: Catholic Women's Guild. Previously the group was called the Catholic Altar Society.

The following officers were selected: Sandy Burchett, president; Gwen Hall, vice-president; Eileen Burchett, secretary and Mabel Donahoe, treasurer.

Future meetings will be held on the second Wednesday of each month. However, meeting times will alternate between mornings and evenings in hopes of broadening the participation of parish women in Floyd and Magoffin counties. Priorities will be established at the meeting to be held at 10 a.m. on Wednesday, February 9, at St. Theodore Church.

The group plans to participate in the Diocesan Council of Catholic Women as well as the local Council Churchwomen.

Attending the January 19 meeting were: Eileen Burchett, Pat Necessary, Sandy Burchett, Joyce Everly, Mabel Donahoe, Janice Hodson, Darlene Jones and Gwen Hall.

Sisters of Charity Set Building a Just Society As Their Top Priority

"The building of a just society" was named the primary goal of the Sisters of Charity by the 47 Chapter delegates who met at their Motherhouse, Dec. 27-Jan. 5, to set congregational direction, update policies and clarify goals for the coming four years. S. James Edward Roach, administrator of Our Lady of the Way Hospital at Martin, was one of the elected delegates.

After a full week of deliberation, the elected representatives drafted a letter to the 980 members of the congregation, urging them "to continue the integration of justice and peace concerns in your ministry and to become further involved in the building of a just society in which peace will flourish."

Members of the Order which was founded by the United States' first canonized saint, Elizabeth Seton, were urged to call one another to experience solidarity with the poor and to collaborate with existing groups working for peace and justice.

The Jenny Wiley Festival

During the past four weeks I have had an opportunity to study and enjoy the publicity given to the first annual Jenny Wiley Festival which was held in your city, October 6-9, through news stories, announcements and classified advertising that appeared in the columns of your newspaper both before and after this momentous occasion.

The statistics are revealing and speak well for the cooperation of the citizens of Prestonsburg, Floyd County and contiguous territory. Pictures that appeared in the publicity referred to tell the story better than the naming of individuals and organizations who gave of their time, talents and efforts, "beyond the call of duty," but, at the risk of missing the count of many recognition is due the following:

Officers, Maxine Bierman, chairman, Eva Collins, co-chairman, Paul P. Hughes, treasurer, and, Joyce Ramey, secretary; members of all communities, and a full-page ad paid for by County-Judge-Executive Jerry Lafferty.

To these individuals and organizations and countless other persons and organizations much credit is due.

Unfortunately, I was not able to be present for any of the activities on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this eventful week-end, but it was my great pleasure, privilege and honor to sit in the headquarters booth during the constant downpour of rain from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturday and greet the many persons who visited it and to autograph copies of "White Squaw" for those who brought them to me for that purpose and to serve as grand marshal of the parade that got under way at 4:30 p.m. sans the many floats, bands and other attractions that "gave up the ghost" as early as 2:45 p.m. and departed for home.

To one who devoted a quarter of a century to research of the records, written and handed down by word of mouth, this was, indeed, a warming occasion.

Since the event was billed as the first annual Jenny Wiley Festival, I predict it will be repeated year after year so long as time lasts.

To you and to all who cherish the memory of a person we love so much to the extent of calling attention to her in this appropriate manner, my heart-felt thanks.

Letter to Detractor

In answer to Mr. Phil Gruis:
Yes, it takes a special breed of person to live in Kentucky—how true! And you, Mr. Gruis, are sure not one of them.

Kentucky, especially eastern Kentucky, is a very loving place to live. Sure, we need to improve a few things but so does Iowa and all the other states in America. Sure, we have some overweight ladies in Kentucky but the slim ones far outnumber them.

I am a native of Germany and I came to eastern Kentucky in 1948. By the way, Mr. Gruis, I rent a few houses and I do not ask the renters if they go to church on Sunday. I do, however, beg them to consider it, for our salvation is all we take with us when we leave this beautiful place called "Eastern Kentucky".

I'd better quit now before the moss grows under my armpit or the possum in the kettle gets overdone. How stupid can you get? I haven't heard of such things in all my 34 years here.

I am glad you left Kentucky. You don't fit in here. The people of eastern Kentucky are loving, caring, sweet, considerate and honest. I am proud to be one of them!

Efforts Appreciated

Betsy Layne's new high school has been on the receiving end from friends, alumni and students this year. Soon after the opening of school, a group of people aided in landscaping part of the campus and another group aided in the construction of the football field. The beautification is to be completed in the spring.

Other groups contributing to help BLHS are the Bobcat Boosters and the Band Boosters. The Bobcat Booster Club aids the athletic departments by sending students to various camps and buying needed equipment. The Band Boosters are active in helping support the band by buying music, instruments, uniforms and other materials needed by the music department.

Recently a newly formed Men's Club in the area has done an excellent job in the D.W. Howard Gym. They have installed a sauna, whirlpool, and have added weights to the weight rooms.

The people who have contributed their money and time are too numerous to mention. We the staff and student body at BLHS do wish to thank them for the job they have done and are doing. We appreciate this now and are sure that future BLHS students will feel the same.

Ten Years of Progress

January, 1983 marks 10 years since Highlands Regional Medical Center opened its doors to serve the people of the Big Sandy. I want to thank everyone who has contributed to our successful decade of caring—our employees, medical staff, hospital volunteers, patients and friends of the Medical Center.

In the past 10 years, Highlands has made tremendous progress in advancing medical care. New surgical procedures have been successfully performed. To better diagnose diseases, sophisticated testing equipment has been added in many departments. Community health education is another area of growth at HRMC. Programs and services have been developed to meet the health care needs of our patients.

Currently we are beginning our $10 million expansion. It will add 47 patient beds and provide departments like the emergency room, laboratory and operating room with new or expanded space. We expect to dedicate our new facility in 1984.

We have ambitious plans for future health services at Highlands Regional. A residency program to bring family doctors to Eastern Kentucky for post-graduate education is a real possibility. Patient education programs will expand. We will continue to provide the most up-to-date equipment and procedures in the fast-changing medical field.

We hope you are as proud as we are of the accomplishments of Highlands Regional Medical Center in our first decade. With your support, we will continue moving ahead because you're behind us.

Counted Blessings

As I look back over this year 1982, I find so many, many things to be thankful for. First, I tried to count my blessings but there were so many that I could not remember them all. Then I tried to remember where I was each time that I was blessed, and if I were as thankful as I should have been. Yes, I asked myself many personal questions. For instance I asked myself "Where were you when it was necessary to give? Were you on the receiving end when you should have been on the giving end? And at all other times?"

I found that I was on the right end and had the right spirit at all times and yet I could have and should have given more of my time and talent to many who were not acquainted with the Creator of heaven and earth, the greatest architect that has ever been known, the God of heaven.

Salutes Betsy Layne

Am writing concerning the recent Greenup Co. tournament in which the Betsy Layne Bobcats played. The team played excellent ball, was runner-up in the tournament and Marty Meade was the most valuable player. The Betsy Layne community should be proud of the team they have and the sportsmanship the coach and team showed. The Pep Band was great and won first place. The cheerleaders and majorettes were excellent. Congratulations to Coach Newsome and the team. Here's hoping you win the Fifteenth regional championship.

Comments Job Corps

We recently received the attached letter from the parent of a former corpsmember of our Center. We thought you might like to publish the letter in your paper for those individuals in the community who are supportive of the Job Corps Program and also for those who are interested in knowing more about Job Corps and how it works.

PRESTONSBURG JOB CORPS CENTER
By THOMAS E. HUMMER
Center Director

The letter follows:
I am writing in reference to my son, Bobby G. Rice, Jr. It is apparent that the Prestonsburg Job Corps has done a commendable job in providing a start on his ability to make his way in this new world.

We were all proud of the Hospital Certificate of Appreciation from the Paintsville Hospital and the Student of the Month awards in Math, reading II, driver's ed, a high school diploma, a second place winner in swimming, plus the awards for being a completer.

All of these things were accomplished while he was burdened with the knowledge that his mother and three baby brothers were hungry and without clothing.

While my financial status is very bad at present, due to circumstances beyond control, I have paid taxes on funds of approximately $300,000, and I think that programs such as this one are a credit to these taxes.

I don't know if this letter will help in any way, but I am hoping that it will help to give my son a chance.

To Cure a 'Nasty Mess'

Floyd countians, let's get behind our Solid Waste Program and make it a big success. This is our lifeline to beautifying Eastern Kentucky.

I have been in many parts of the country and have never witnessed the countryside and roadways in such a nasty mess as we have here in this area.

On many occasions, in talking to outsiders, it will become part of our discussion about the garbage and filth in Floyd and a few surrounding counties. It is a disgrace and sickening feeling to see our roads strewn with garbage, old cars, furniture and just about anything you can imagine. Just look at the roadside dumps that have been around for years and the new ones that spring up almost daily, and most of them in the name of "Fill Wanted" signs beside the road. Why can't the people that need the fill get the right kind of fill in the first place, and that is dirt and rock? We have enough dirt on the strip jobs and all over to make a proper fill.

This week I witnessed, of all people, a school teacher dumping waste beside the road. No wonder this problem carries over in every generation. The kids are not taught by parents and teachers to properly care for our countryside and dispose of waste properly.

I know that a lot of people don't pay or take advantage of the garbage pickup because they feel they can take care of their own garbage. Well, they do this by taking their garbage to the strip jobs, burn it, or take it to a roadside dump. Do the people that do this think this is proper? The way I feel is that you just put your problem over on someone else.

Another little trick is to throw your garbage bags in the back of your truck and haul it around until you feel safe to dump it off on the roadway or on someone else, and many times it's set out just anywhere. Maybe that is why we have a lot of healthy stray dogs.

Let's all rally around our Solid Waste Program and be concerned and once again be proud of our beautiful county.

Backs 'Tarp' Law

The Blue Grass Automobile Club-AAA strongly endorses Section 14 of Senate Bill 144, which went into effect last July 15. This legislation states that no vehicle shall be operated upon any public highway for a distance of over one mile whose load is susceptible to shifting or spillage unless the load is covered with a device suitable to prevent spillage.

There is concern that this new law has been blocked by a restraining order. AAA has contacted the State Police and understands that Section 14 is not subject to the same restraining order imposed on all other portions of the bill. It currently is being enforced by the State Police, and officers are encouraged to first witness the spillage before a ticket is issued. However, this procedure is not necessary in cases where a truck is obviously overloaded and has no protective cover.

Our auto club represents more than 55,000 AAA members in central and eastern Kentucky and is concerned about their safety. We believe truckers have a right to transport products along Kentucky's highways. Yet, we also believe that a motorist has a right to travel these same highways without fear of having the car struck or damaged by coal or other objects falling from uncovered trucks. Aside from being hit by these objects, accidents can occur when a motorist drives over debris which has fallen onto the highway from a truck.

Spillage from overloaded, uncovered trucks is not only a threat to a motorist's safety, but also can be costly in automobile repairs.

The Blue Grass Automobile Club commends the Kentucky General Assembly for its concern in enacting this legislation and salutes the State Police for its efforts in enforcing it. If you want to express your concern on this issue, AAA invites you to call our public relations department at toll-free 1-800-432-0996.

Roadblock Nets $1596 For Special Olympics

A roadblock sponsored by the Prestonsburg Kiwanis Club on the weekend raised $1595.98 to help send handicapped athletes to the Special Olympics, club president Rob Schissler announced this week.

The Special Olympics is an international program of physical fitness, sports training and athletic competition for mentally retarded children and adults.

Among upcoming events in which special olympians from this area will participate are a basketball tournament in Frankfort next month, a track meet in Pikeville on April 23, and the state track meet at Murray, June 9-11. Moreover, three from this region will be participating in the International Games in Baton Rouge, La., July 12-18.

Schissler expressed thanks for Floyd countians' "generous response" to the Special Olympics appeal.

Up-Hollow Road Medicine

Att'n: Hollow Dwellers of Floyd County:

Are you one of the many hundreds of people who live in an area served only by a dirt road? Is your road adequately maintained by the county? If not, aren't you tired of traveling these roads with holes and ruts cut out that will nearly drag the bottom of your car out? Are you tired of promises and no action? Don't you think it is time that the county quit treating you like a second class citizen and provide you with the services to which you are entitled?

Cheer up, Floyd Countians, you are not at the end of the rope. There are actions you can take.

Being both fair and honest, I would suggest that you take the following actions:

First, contact the magistrate for your district and then contact the county judge executive. Discuss with them what work is needed on your road and get them to make a commitment as to when this work will be done. Give the county a reasonable length of time to complete this road work. If the work hasn't been done and you haven't been contacted in a reasonable time, then you can assume that the county isn't going to repair your road. Then I would suggest that you write out a petition addressed to the State Auditor's office in Frankfort, Ky., requesting an audit of the Floyd County books with respect to the amount of road funds allocated and the expenditures shown during the past 5 to 10 years. Be sure to have all the people that live on your road sign the petition before sending it in to Frankfort. Also, state in your petition that when the audit is completed, you and others in your community request a meeting with Floyd County officials and a representative from both the State Auditor's Office and the State Attorney General's Office.

It might surprise people, but there is always a possibility that county records may show that thousands of dollars have been spent on some of these roads for repair, gravel, drain pipe, etc., when in reality the only thing done was to grade these roads possibly twice a year.

The reasons for a meeting after an audit would be for everyone to review the road expenditures as shown in the county records. County records might show an expense of two thousand dollars on the road where you live but you know for a fact that the county has only graded this road twice for this given year. You could at this meeting let the state officials know about this matter and demand to know where the rest of the money went. This would probably result in an in-depth investigation of county finances by the Attorney General's office, and criminal proceedings would probably follow.

In summary, contact your magistrates and county judge-executive first. If you don't receive any cooperation from them, which many of us haven't, then don't hesitate to send your petitions in to Frankfort. Then, if you have to, call or write the State Auditor's office weekly until they perform the audit that you requested. Good luck, friends, and if I can assist you in any way just let me know.

This letter is only to inform the citizens of the various approaches open to them and is not intended in any fashion to be slanderous toward any person or persons.

Three Years Later

I made formal application to the federal government for home gas service at the Prestonsburg office of Columbia Gas in Sept. 1979. They would contact me when gas was available. The process of federal approval was supposed to take at most six months.

The first communication I received on the matter was this past month (over 3 years later) from Kentucky West Virginia Gas. They provided me with a form on which I'm to check whether I anticipate the need for gas in any of the years between 1983 and 1986. My only conclusion is that the gas companies that tap Eastern Kentucky's gas reserves are trying to shut out local residential customers altogether.

Disagrees on Bills

In answer to "Pay Garbage Bill's is Agency's Plea," I believe Mr. McAninch is wrong, when he thinks people in Floyd county should pay for services they don't receive. If we the people in Floyd county allow this to happen to us, what will be next? Another thing he is wrong about, as he stated in last week's Floyd County Times, that part of the burden should be placed on the landlord. Well, sometimes the tenants leave owing hundreds of dollars rent behind, I don't feel like the landlord should be stuck with their garbage bill, too.

I feel like if the people had been treated fairly, the system would have worked. I think each household should have been asked to sign up, also I think each household should pay one bill. But the real tragedy is, you get one bill for your house, then get another bill for your security light which burns in the yard.

We also have several homes in hollows where trucks cannot get to. This would be very unfair for them to pay for these services.

I say, make the fines stiffer for dumping on public highways.

Proud of Grady Stumbo

This is a letter to express my pride in an Eastern Kentucky boy, who is your candidate for Governor, Grady Stumbo.

I now live out of state, not by choice, but if I ever saw a person dedicated to the betterment of Kentucky it is Grady Stumbo.

Get involved in what is happening in your state. People from different areas think we from Eastern Kentucky are so dumb we can't walk the streets alone. Well, here is proof that our background gives us the courage to try the things others think impossible.

Kentuckians, be proud, get excited, show your support, get involved. You can show the rest where the backbone and heart of Kentucky really is. I'm proud of Grady Stumbo.

No Service-No Pay

In answer to Mr. McAninch's statement in last week's Floyd County Times. One point he made was to add the cost of garbage to the annual tax bill. I wonder if this would be right, for I don't believe in paying for services you don't receive. I think this should be voted on.

Attorneys File To Quash Bills

Attorneys for a man indicted for murder and for 13 persons indicted on drug charges in December have filed motions in Circuit Court asking that the indictments be dismissed. The reason they give is that the foreman of the grand jury which issued the bills is not a resident of this county.

Gary Johnson is attorney for seven of those indicted on drug charges and Public Advocate Ned Pillersdorf represents six accused of drug offenses and Alfred Music, who is accused of slaying Curtis Hall at Martin, Dec. 10.

While jurors are required by law to be residents of the county in which they serve, Ulysses C. Horn, foreman of the jury that issued 37 indictments here Dec. 27, is a resident of Johnson county, the lawyers claim.

Horn is employed by the Floyd Board of Education as a supervisor. The attorneys' motions for dismissal of the indictments, which are scheduled for a hearing this Friday, are not expected to delay trial of the cases.

Floyd Could Have Second Gubernatorial Candidate

Conceivably, Floyd county could produce two candidates in the May primary for the Democratic nomination for governor.

Dr. Grady Stumbo, native of McDowell, now of Hindman, already is a candidate and busy on the campaign trail.

And William B. Sturgill, formerly of Prestonsburg, now of Lexington, and Kentucky's secretary of energy, is pondering his chances of winning before nailing down an earlier decision not to run.

Sturgill said that he decided last fall to stay out of the race because he didn't think he could win.

But since that announcement, the three announced candidates are not "catching fire" with voters and certain "political leaders" are encouraging him to run, Sturgill said Monday.

"Naturally, when political leaders come to you and talk about it—and some have—you have to reflect on your decision," he said.

"I've always wanted to be governor of Kentucky. The big reason I'm not a candidate today is that I can't convince myself that I could win."

The encouragement of others "has not changed my opinion, but it has made me reconsider," he said.

Sturgill said he planned serious discussions of a candidacy in the next two weeks, but a decision to run would require "a drastic turn in the cards."

He commissioned a poll to determine his popularity with voters and their response was "not a bellringer," Sturgill said.

Lt. Gov. Martha Layne Collins, Louisville Mayor Harvey Sloane and former state Human Resources secretary Grady Stumbo are the only announced candidates for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination.

Sturgill said their campaigns thus far have been little more than a fund-raising contest.

"One thing that bugs me is that (the candidates) want to spend all their time telling you how they're going to win instead of how they're going to serve," he said.

"I believe they should focus on the issues instead of how much money they can raise."

Sturgill said he is financially prepared to mount a campaign, adding, "I probably wouldn't hold a lot of fund-raisers, either."

The multi-millionaire Sturgill is a son of Mrs. Dorothy M. Sturgill, of Prestonsburg, and the late Troy B. Sturgill who long was a public official and political leader in this county.

Whatever anybody else does, Grady Stumbo says he is in the race for the nomination to the end. Last week he stepped up the tempo of his campaign with a Pikeville-to-Paducah "marathon" by bus, conferring with voters and community leaders and speaking at stops across the state.

Attorney General Warns of "Lottery"

Attorney General Steven L. Beshear has announced that many Kentuckians have recently received notice in the mail from the American Testing Institute, Miami, Florida, that they have been "computer selected" to participate in a television test procedure whereby the consumer is requested to complete a TV test response form and return it with a check or money order in the amount of $14.80. Every participant who completes the test response form is guaranteed receipt of a free gift. The company asserts that the gifts include a lifetime membership in a film club, microwave ovens, TV sets, stereo systems, watches, cash prizes ranging from $500 to $2,000, a trip to Mexico, among other prizes.

"Consumers should know that the U.S. Postal Service has filed suit against the American Testing Institute charging them with conducting lottery," said Beshear. "A judge's decision is pending as to whether or not all incoming mail to the company can be stopped for possible violation of federal mail statutes."

Beshear cautions consumers to give careful consideration before participating in this alleged lottery. Citizens are encouraged to contact the Office of the Attorney General, Consumer Protection Division, 209 St. Clair Street, Frankfort, Ky., 40601-1875, should you have complaints or inquiries regarding this matter.

Vincent hopes 'Winds' blow away bad vibes

Jan-Michael Vincent — who has one of the key roles in ABC's seven-part "novel for television," "The Winds of War" — has been tagged throughout his career as being a loner and a difficult actor to work with.

Surprisingly, Vincent, admitted that, indeed, he isn't the easiest person to get along with.

"I guess I am a little stand-offish, but I was always suspicious of getting too comfortable with success.

"I always thought that someone was going to pull the rug out from under me," says Vincent, who has been featured in such films as "White Line Fever," "Buster and Billie" and "Hard Country."

"That's a possible reason why people were leery about me. But I've learned not to be too defensive."

He's hoping that his performance in "The Winds of War" may help him overcome his reputation.

He plays Byron Henry, an American civilian working in Italy in 1939, who falls in love with Natalie

Jan-Michael Vincent

Jastrow (Ali MacGraw), an older American-Jewish woman. As their relationship deepens, he finds himself being inexorably drawn into the war.

"I read the script and I said that I'm going to do this. I was really taken with it and it is one of the best things I've ever done," says Vincent.

"The Winds of War," based on Herman Wouk's novel, airs Sunday, Feb. 6, Monday, Feb. 7, Tuesday, Feb. 8, Wednesday, Feb. 9, Thursday, Feb. 10, Friday, Feb. 11 and Sunday, Feb. 13.

Floyd Player at Georgia "Stars" in Unusual Role

The Georgia Bulldogs are more than just a championship football team and a running back named Hershell Walker. The "Dawgs" are a fine basketball team as well. Just ask Joe Hall whose Kentucky Wildcats fell to Georgia in a January 29 game at Athens.

That defeat hurt hardcore Wildcat fans except maybe for those around Wheelwright High School and at Alice Lloyd College, is No. 14 in the Bulldog lineup, and although his playing time has been brief since joining the team as a "walk-on" last year, he is well-liked at Georgia and highly respected for his abilities on the hardwood.

Jones, a basketball standout at Wheelwright High School and at Alice Lloyd College, is No. 14 in the Bulldog lineup, and although his playing time has been brief since joining the team as a "walk-on" last year, he is well-liked at Georgia and highly respected for his abilities on the hardwood.

While others quit their teams and "walk away mad" because they feel they aren't playing enough, Jones is an exception to this all-too-common situation.

Jones, who stands 5-11 and weighs 170 pounds, was the Kentucky Mountain Conference Player-of-the-year as a senior at Wheelwright where he holds the career assist record with 1038. He averaged 22 points, 9.2 assists and 3.4 rebounds per game in his final season. At Alice Lloyd College he continued his successful play by leading the team to a top-ten finish at the Little College National Championships. He averaged 17.3 points and 7.2 assists.

After a year at Alice Lloyd, Jones, who had always wanted to play for a major college team, called Georgia Coach Hugh Durham who encouraged him to try out for the team as a walk-on. "I had heard about Coach Durham coming here (to Georgia)," explained

Jones. "I knew he was a good coach, and I felt there was an opportunity for me to contribute toward building a solid program."

Last season as a walk-on, Jones was a practice player who helped prepare the team for the upcoming opponent. However, Coach Durham showed enough confidence in him to put him into the lineup late in the first half of Georgia's 62-61 victory over Georgia Tech last year. Jones also played against Carson-Newman and had two steals, an assist, and a free throw in one minute of action. This year Jones has scored five points.

"My role is to help the other players get better in practice," said Jones. "However, I'm also looking to get into some game this year. I always have to be ready because I never know when Coach Durham will want me to go in. A player can never afford to be surprised to go into a game. If he is, it means he's not ready. I approach every game thinking that I am going to play."

That Jones is well-liked at Georgia was made obvious in a lengthy feature article in the sports section of the Athens Daily News. Daily News Sports Editor Billy Harper called Jones "one of a rare breed who simply loves the game of basketball and would enjoy practicing at midnight."

Harper concludes his article as follows:

"A starter, Monroe Jones is not. But, nonetheless, I've got to think he's a very valuable member of Georgia's basketball team. There are many ways to contribute to a team besides just putting a ball through a hoop, and Monroe Jones contributes."

Jones is happy at Georgia. "I like the city, the school and being on a team in the SEC," he said. And, he's not going to fret if his position on the team is something less than star status. "I really just enjoy the game," says Jones.

Jones is a son of Monroe and Carlotta Jones, of Bevinville. His grandparents are Ralph and Nova Moore, of Price, and Bart and Hazel Jones, of Bevinville.

Banquet Honors PHS Grid Team

By WENDE BUCHANAN

The Prestonsburg Blackcats wrapped up their seventh season under Coach Phillip A. Haywood with a banquet held in their honor, recently.

Coach Haywood, whose skills have guided the Blackcats to the Class AA semi-finals for the past two seasons, spoke of the triumphs and set-backs of the past year and recognized players, individually.

In the awards ceremony, Todd Johnson received the Scholar-Athlete Award for being the senior football player who maintained the highest grade point average.

Offensive and defensive awards recipients were as follows:

B.J. Sturgill, best offensive lineman; Kelly Flanagan, best defensive lineman; John Gilliam, best defensive end-linebacker; Brad Hughes, best receiver; Robert Midgette, best offensive back, and John DeRossett, best defensive back.

Receiving this year's Most Valuable Player Award was John Gilliam while the Special Teams Award went to B. J. Sturgill.

Team members selected for the Class AA Dream Team included seniors John Gilliam, B.J. Sturgill and Robert Midgette, and juniors John DeRossett, Todd Nairn, Bryan Pace and John Anderson received honorable mention for All Class A-AA Area Football.

Named Coach of the Year by his peers, Haywood has recorded an enviable record since coming to PHS in 1975. The record stands as follows: 7-4, 1975; 8-4, 1976; 6-5, 1977; 6-4, 1978; 7-4, 1979; 8-3, 1980; 10-3, 1981, and 10-2 for the past season. The Blackcats have won the district championship three consecutive years and the regional crown twice.

Makes Loan of Medical Equipment

Onda Lowe Hunt, director for Floyd county Disaster and Emergency Services (left) joined County Judge-Executive Jerry Lafferty, Jr. (center) and McDowell Appalachian Regional Hospital Administrator Edward V. Collins last week as a variety of medical equipment, part of the county's old Civil Defense stockpile, was loaned to MARH through Judge Lafferty's office. A similar loan of equipment was made several months ago to the Mud Creek Clinic after fire destroyed most of that facility's medical hardware.

By DWIGHT E. LESLIE
HOME PLANT PRODUCTION

Home-grown vegetable transplants are becoming more and more popular each year. Hot beds offer an easy solution to the home gardener who wants to produce good, disease free plants for home use. Hot beds involve less investment than a greenhouse; however, considerable time and labor is required for proper management.

The success of any hot bed is largely determined by its location. It should be located on a southern slope in a sunny place where there is little shade. Sites should be well-drained, with the surface water directed away from the hot bed. Less heat is needed if the hot bed is not in a windy place and it should be reasonably close to a water supply.

A good hot bed frame is tight and well covered so that very little heat escapes. Several materials can be used to construct low-cost frames. Anything from one-inch rough oak lumber with 2"x4" stakes as supports to polystyrene insulation board may be used.

The typical hot bed is usually six feet wide and the length is usually six to twelve feet. For tomato plants, the frame should be about 24 inches high on the rear side and sloped to about 16 inches high on the front side. Ground for the hot bed must be leveled. Bank the outside of the frame with soil one-half to two-thirds of the wall height. This helps conserve heat by stopping cracks and providing some insulation and at the same time provides for drainage around the frame.

Hot bed covers may be of sash, plastic, or similar materials. A double-layer plastic covered frame will provide a low-cost that conserves heat and is fairly durable. The cover frame should be built of 2 by 2 inch wood and then cover it on each side with 4-mil. or 6-mil. clear plastic. Use thin lathe strips to secure the plastic to the frame. Four or six inch strap hinges can be used to secure the cover on one side with some type of fastener or hook to hold the other side.

The most common ways of heating a hot bed are by electricity, warm air or manure. Manure is probably one of the most common heating materials. Manure mixed with straw is a very cheap way to heat a plant bed. A mixture of two thirds horse manure and one third straw is the best form of manure for heating hot beds. Microorganisms break down the manure, which in turn generates heat to warm the soil. For further information on hot beds, contact the Floyd County Extension Office at 886-2668 and ask for publication ID-16, "Hot Beds For Plant Production."

Broad Form Deed
Surfaces Again
In Land Dispute

In a case that involves the interpretation of a turn-of-the-century broadform deed, four Left Beaver residents have filed suit in Circuit Court here to block stripmining on their property.

Maggie Taylor, her son Marion and his wife, Patty, and Kathy Conn Layne are surface owners of tracts on Stumbo Hollow, near Printer—properties included in an area that the Triple Elkhorn Mining Company wants to mine for coal.

The surface owners point out in their suit that when Alex L. Stumbo and Louisa Stumbo, who once owned the land in question, sold their mineral rights to the Northern Coal and Coke Company in 1903, they expressly excepted from the transaction "all timber over eight inches in diameter, clear of bark, stump high."

The strip and auger mining contemplated by Triple Elkhorn would do irreparable damage to their property, claim the plaintiffs, who are seeking from the court a declaration of their rights and an injunction against the mining.

Their suit differs from more general challenges to the traditional broadform deed—where surface owners argue that their predecessors never envisaged stripmining when they sold their mineral rights—by its appeal to a specific exception written into the deed.

The landowners have also lodged their objections with the state Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection, where the mining company has a permit application pending.

Named besides Triple Elkhorn as defendants in the circuit court suit are CSX Minerals, Inc., and George Barnett. CSX Minerals, formerly the Western Pocahontas Coal Corporation, is owner of the coal leased for mining by Triple Elkhorn. Barnett is previous owner of the tract now owned by Marion and Patty Taylor.

In selling the property to the Taylors in 1971, Barnett reserved all mining rights and, in 1981, agreed to let Triple Elkhorn mine the land. The present owners argue that their claim to the surface and timber precludes this, however.

The Taylors are represented by John Logan Griffith, of the Burchett and Barber law firm. Layne is represented by David Rubinstein, of the Appalachian Research and Defense Fund.

Rubinstein said he intended to file this week for a temporary injunction, a motion he expected to be considered this Friday. The DNREP hearing on Triple Elkhorn's permit application has been set for Feb. 14 in Frankfort.

(Suits filed in court present only one side of the issue in contention.)

"Fat-free fat" sounds almost too good to be true, but studies indicate that a new synthetic, calorie-free fat substitute called sucrose polyester (SPE), is an effective weight-loss agent in the chronically obese. The February Reader's Digest reports that tested dieters who weighed from 200 to 390 pounds lost an average of four-tenths of a pound daily when SPE was substituted for a portion of the fat in their diets.

That's what The Salvation Army represents to thousands of people with nowhere to turn. But The Salvation Army is more than that. It's a place of worship. And a center for wholesome recreation.

The Salvation Army can be summed up in just six words:

Set Award-Winning Children's Series

"Prestige 1," an award-winning children's series the whole family can enjoy, airs Saturdays, beginning February 5, at 6 p.m., on KET.

The one-hour specials are humorous, poignant, suspenseful and witty and explore a variety of themes, including friendship between peers and between young people and their elders, young love, marriage, courage, compassion and ambition.

"Rodeo Red and the Runaway," the first program, tells the story of a prairie loner who befriends a young fugitive. Geraldine Fitzgerald stars as the strong-willed Ella, and Marta Kober plays the runaway Stacey who discover a common bond in their love for Ella's horse Big Red. Building on Stacey's concern and consideration of the horse, Ella asks Stacey to consider her parents' feelings and show them some concern, too.

In the remaining programs a group of high school students "practice" for marriage, a sensitive youth learns a bittersweet lesson of love, a young girl grapples with her addiction to food, a fairy godmother grants a young girl seven wishes, a deaf child and teenage boy are drawn into new experiences and a 14-year-old girl befriends an old "shopping bag lady."

The programs, most of which were based upon published works, were originally produced for ABC's "Afternoon Specials," NBC's "Special Treat" and CBS's "Saturday, Film Festival."

Dividend Benefits VETS

Almost $6½-million will be paid to 36,165 Kentucky veterans during 1983 as a result of dividends declared by the Veterans Administration on insurance policies.

Lee Caudill, regional office director of the VA in Louisville, said these veterans have kept their GI insurance in force since their discharge from military service.

The record high dividend was made possible because of lower than expected death rates among policyholders and improved interest earnings on the insurance funds' investments.

No application for the annual dividend is needed, Caudill said. Each policyholder will receive the dividend in the month of the anniversary of the individual policy.

In Kentucky 601 World War I veterans will receive $148,000 in dividends; 29,758 World War II veterans will receive $5,860,000; 4,323 Korean War veterans will receive $309,000, and 1,483 veterans holding Veterans Reopened Insurance policies will receive $154,000.

Dividends differ under each program depending on the amount of insurance, age, plan selected and length of time the policy has been in force.

Little Blackcats Are Co. Champs

The Prestonsburg Elementary "B" team cheerleaders were named best in the county recently at the Floyd county grade school cheerleading competition held recently at Betsy Layne High School. The girls, known as the "Little Blackcats," have also won first place in the Prestonsburg Invitational and second place in the Clark Invitational tournaments. The squad is sponsored by Debbie Schneider.

What's the fastest growing industrial nation? One of the smallest, reports the January Reader's Digest. It's Hong Kong, the world's leading exporter of general textiles, knitwear, radios, toys and electronic games, and the third most important financial center. With the finest natural harbor on the China coast and a fleet of merchant ships second only to America's, it looks like tiny Hong Kong will keep right on growing.

Encore Performance Of "South Of The Mountain"

SOUTH OF THE MOUNTAIN is a brand new production by the Roadside Theater of Whitesburg. It was premiered in Whitesburg at the new Appalshop Theater last November with full houses each night. Since that time, Roadside Theater has received so many requests for another local performance that on February 12th at 7:30 p.m., Appalshop will once again present SOUTH OF THE MOUNTAIN.

SOUTH OF THE MOUNTAIN is the story of two generations of a mountain farm family and the changes they face as industrialization and a modern way of life move into the mountains. The story and music were written by Roadside member Ron Short from Dickenson County, Virginia, and are about his own family.

According to Dudley Cocke, Roadside's program director, "Roadside's goal has always been to create theater for our community, theater that makes sense to people who live here. The new Appalshop theater gives us an opportunity to perform more often at home giving the local audience a chance to see our work."

Reservations should be made to insure a seat. This can be done by calling Appalshop at (606) 633-0108 or writing Roadside Theater, P.O. Box 743, Whitesburg, KY 41858. When writing please include name, address, phone number, and number of seats you want to reserve.

Roadside Theater is a part of Appalshop and is partially funded by the Virginia Commission for the Arts, the Kentucky Arts Council, the National Endowment for the Arts, and the Lyndhurst Foundation.

State unemployment insurance agencies which operate under direction of the U.S. Department of Labor provide payments for workers temporarily out of work.

ASK YOUR ACCOUNTANT!

Should I open an Individual Retirement Account?

That's a question that many people have asked us in the past twelve months. The answer is probably no if you have your retirement arranged so that you can live a life-style in retirement that will allow you to do all the travel, hunting, fishing, and relaxing that you have always wanted to do while working. However, you may not have all your financial arrangements made to live that life-style. We are of the opinion that your social security benefits will not provide the life-style that most people desire. Ask your accountant about a First Commonwealth Individual Retirement Account. You can now deposit up to $2,000.00 per year in the IRA if you are employed. This account could grow to a several hundred thousand dollar retirement fund. Best of all your contribution is tax deferred as well as the interest it earns. You can still take advantage of this opportunity on your 1982 tax return if you have not filed. Ask your accountant. An Individual Retirement Account may be your condo in Florida or a cabin in the mountains or a carefree trip to Europe. Let us give you all the details today.

Kentucky's Quilting Women

By VICKI DENNIS,
Kentucky Commission on Women

A piece of Kentucky's heritage is about to be shared with the country and it will reflect the role that women have played in keeping that heritage alive. The Kentucky Quilt Project, "Kentucky Quilts: 1800-1900," is an exhibit of quilts from Kentucky's history which will be on display at Louisville's Museum of History and Science from Feb. 5 to March 31. But the project will not stop with Kentucky: it will then go on a two-year tour through the Smithsonian Traveling Exhibition Service to museums across the country.

The project is the result of long years of finding, tending and preserving quilts from the last century by Bruce Mann, a Louisville quilt collector who first realized in the 1970's the importance of this tradition to Kentucky's history. Following his death in 1980, friends of Mann carried on with his work. This exhibit then is a tribute to the vision of Mann, to the tenacity of his friends, but especially to the women who, during the last century, pieced together the fragments of their lives and of their history into a colorful combination of the practical and the poetic.

The years between 1800 and 1900 in Kentucky's history often were not comfortable ones for its women. Many were pioneers who followed their men by horseback or on foot across the Virginia mountains, or who floated downriver with their families, from Pennsylvania. Usually their lives were hard, filled with backbreaking days which lasted from the dark hours before dawn to long after dusk. Some quilting historians say that making quilts provided these women with some relief from this difficult life, that gathering with other women into "quilting bees" offered diversion, companionship. Others maintain that quilting was simply an extension of an age that demanded practicality, with a very practical result that one could definitely put to good use on a cold winter's night.

There are other theories of quilts and quiltmakers, of course, but the one I prefer sees quilting as an art form, in fact, an art form that was, and still is, almost exclusively female. Quilting began in this country at a time when women were rarely recognized as artists. There were few women painters, sculptors, poets. But nevertheless, women recognized and responded to the artistic need within themselves and searched for other methods of expression. Pioneer women silently demanded that their barren world somehow be surrounded by color and beauty and that this world be shared with other women. The quilter expressed her art as deliberately as any other artist, selecting bits of fabric as carefully as the painter selects colors to fill a palette, maneuvering her needle into impossibly small stitches with the same skill that the painter moves the brush or the poet the pen. I believe that these women knew exactly what they were doing, that they were deliberately creating an art form that would someday go beyond the appreciation of their families, beyond a touch of warmth of winter.

These quiltmakers of the last century formed an artistic bridge into the present, keeping alive within women a creativity that might have died away from lack of use, keeping this spirit alive with their designs and stitches and passing it lovingly along to the next generation of women. Today's women artists and craftspeople are not hampered by the same old prejudices; they are busy creating women's art in many genres. But it is good to keep a sense of history, to weigh the past against the present, to keep in mind the vision of a Kentucky woman of the last century, trudging across the hills to join her neighbors in keeping art alive for the women of today.

The Museum of History and Science, 727 W. Main Street, Louisville, is open Tuesday through Saturday, 9:30 to 4:30 and on Sunday from 1 to 4:30 p.m. For more information about "Kentucky Quilts: 1800-1900," call the museum at (502) 587-3138.

‘Miracle on Caney Creek’

By ALICE O. MARTIN

Friends of Alice Lloyd College and Caney Creek Community Center bid “Welcome” to the recently published work of A.L.C. President Jerry Davis. From a wealth of authenticated sources which include the personal memories of the indomitable June Buchanan, Dr. Davis has fashioned a smooth-flowing narration of anecdotal material which provides valuable insight into the struggles and successes marking the growth of the institution.

The central figure in this mountain saga is the aforementioned Dr. June Buchanan. And for those of us who knew her only as a symbol of authority, we are thrilled to find answers to questions we somehow never got around to asking: What about June Buchanan’s early life? Where was she born? Who were her parents? Was there anything out of the ordinary in her early life that marked her for the extraordinary role she was to assume in later years? Who saw to her upbringing? Why did she come to the mountains at such a youthful age? Why did she choose to remain? What contact has she maintained with family and friends in the “world she left behind”?

Dr. Davis not only answers most of these questions for us in the first of eight clearly outlined chapters, but provides photographic material that makes our beloved June all the more human. His conclusion to this informative section brings Miss Buchanan’s New York parents into the isolation of the mountains where they view their daughter in her rural setting. We weep with a mother who had likely envisioned a life of splendor for her daughter and marvel at the wisdom of a father who saw, understood, and accepted a lifetime of service for her instead.

The remainder of the book is history already familiar to most Alice Lloyd people but a record that will not be put aside for future reference only. The summation of events stemming in and flowing outward from Caney Creek Community Center is not a dry recital of facts. It is a history set against a background of colorful stories guaranteed not only to delight the progeny of the chosen subjects but entertain the reading public as well. For this and the continued inclusion of valuable photographs we are eternally grateful and pay tribute to those responsible for seeing to their preservation in print.

A significant omission to this book and one we view with dismay is the exclusion of Dr. William S. Hayes whose term of presidency at the college included the exasperating years of the turbulent 60’s. Unlike many college presidents, Dr. Hayes did not point his suitcase to the nearest exit when the going got rough. We applaud his efforts and long for a sequel to this book that pays just tribute to a man who gave generously of his time and talent to the mountain people.

A significant inclusion to the book, and one to which we can refer for rededication when we feel our own lives slipping, is the chapter devoted to “Following the Purpose Road.” Originally developed by George H. Palmer of Harvard University, this plan envisions a purposeful existence for every human life and offers constructive guidelines for achieving it. The diagram embodies the basic philosophy of Alice Lloyd College which is service. Its design still hangs on the wall in Cushing Hall at the College.

A friendly suggestion to those at Alice Lloyd College who are in a position to do so: Have Dr. June Buchanan give an oral interpretation of the Purpose Road while she is still capable of doing it. Tape her rendition and play it not only for college students but for visitors shown through Cushing Hall. No one can quite match Dr. Buchanan in her impressive analysis, and this, perhaps more than any single factor, will convince posterity of the continuing need for the Miracle on Caney Creek.

(Copies of “Miracle on Caney Creek” are available upon request. Address: Miracle on Caney Creek, Alice Lloyd College, Pippa Passes, Ky. Zip Code 41844. Books are gratis, but contributions to the College are always welcomed and graciously acknowledged.)

FLOYD COUNTY HEALTH NEWS

By JANE BOND
Health Educator

Glaucoma is the second leading cause of blindness in adults in the United States; approximately one out of every seven blind persons is a victim of glaucoma. This disease strikes with very few symptoms, and for this reason regular screenings in persons over age 45 are urged since this is the high risk age for the disease.

The health department is having a glaucoma screening clinic on Wednesday February 2.

A nurse from the health department will be in Martin on Monday, February 7, from 10 until 2 at the Beaver Valley Clinic. She will offer T.B. skin tests, urinalyses, immunizations, blood pressures, anemia screenings, and pap tests. These clinics are free services of the health department and the public is welcome.

KEEPING IN TOUCH

IT'S AN OBLIGATION OF ELECTED OFFICIALS

STATE SENATOR
BENNY RAY BAILEY

“Thank you for your recent newsletter. I always enjoy receiving them and appreciate the information on the 1982 Session.”

The above quote from one of the hundreds of responses to the “Newsletter” that Benny Ray mails out periodically to the people of District 29 points out an important aspect of the job of state legislators—keeping in touch with the people they serve.

Since 1980, Benny Ray Bailey has represented the people of District 29 in the Kentucky State Senate. Since that time, Benny Ray has attended hundreds of meetings, mailed out tens of thousands of “Newsletters” and answered thousands of constituent phone calls to keep the people informed of state government activity and to assist the people with any matter of state government.

Before the 1980 and 1982 Sessions of the General Assembly, Benny Ray traveled to all points of the District to hold community meetings with the people to gain their input. During the 1980 and 1982 Sessions, Benny Ray held community meetings with the people of the District each Friday afternoon, Saturday and Monday mornings to gain the insight and concerns of the people about pending legislation that the Legislature was considering or needed to consider. Before each Session of the General Assembly, Benny Ray informed the people, through newspaper ads and direct mail, of his Frankfort home number, his Frankfort office number, and the toll free Legislative number in Frankfort. Benny Ray’s home telephone number has always been published so that the people of District 29 can always have access to their State Senator.

Benny Ray’s actions as your State Senator have been guided by the words of Thomas Jefferson who said, “The best electorate is an informed electorate.” Benny Ray has constantly strived to make the people of District 29 the most informed electorate in the State of Kentucky. He keeps in touch—he feels it’s his obligation as your State Senator.

Kentucky Afield

WINTER FISHING REPORT
Mild weather through the Christmas holidays gave Kentucky's die-hard winter fishermen ample opportunity to get in some cold-water angling this year. Those of us who prefer to stay inside watching football games and waiting for warmer weather might nevertheless be curious about how our hardier compatriots are doing, so here's a brief rundown of conditions around Kentucky, current as of Jan. 12.

Crappie fishermen at Kentucky and Barkley lakes are having pretty good luck fishing deep (12-15 feet down) around the channel drop offs.

There have been heavy discharges below both Kentucky and Barkley dams, so tail-water fishing has been slow. Generally there's some good catches of sauger made around this time of year, so if conditions stabilize below the dams, these fish should become active.

Crappie fishing is about the only activity at Barren, Nolin and Rough River lakes. Good fishing seems to come in spurts, followed by several lean days. Two anglers at Barren recently caught around 80 crappie in one day, but others haven't been able to duplicate their success. Only a few white bass and an occasional largemouth are showing up.

Not much is happening on Green River Lake, although there were some reports of decent crappie catches below the dam. The same is true at Herrington, where only a few fishermen are out on the lake, primarily crappie fishing.

But things are a little more active down at Cumberland, where some bass anglers are taking limits of largemouths on jig-and-rind combinations, crank baits or spinner baits. Crappie fishermen who know how to fish 20 to 30 feet deep over the creek channels and submerged cover are also doing pretty good. Trout fishing has dropped off below the dam, but there are some five to six pound walleyes, as well as an occasional whopper rockfish—up to 32 pounds—coming from the Cumberland tailwaters.

Trotting for trout is the top activity at Laurel. The catching isn't exactly furious, but the fish are running good size, up to around four pounds. The trout, which were down in deep water back in the summer, have moved shallow and bank fishermen are catching them now on worms, cheese and corn.

At Cave Run, where there's been a little more winter activity than usual, an occasional musky is showing up, usually from out in the main lake. Every now and then the crappie will turn on for a day or two, then just as suddenly turn off again.

The story is about the same at Buckhorn, where crappie is the main fish this time of year. However, one Buckhorn angler got warmed up recently by boating a 45-inch musky. Other East Kentucky lakes report little or no activity, but there are a few crappie and an occasional trout being taken from the Fishtrap tailwaters.

Similar conditions will probably prevail until the lakes start to warm up this spring. Winter fishing often depends upon specific weather conditions and can change from day to day as the weather changes. But those who stick with it usually bring home enough for a fresh fish dinner, as well as getting out of the house and out in the fresh air for a while.

Workshop For Aspiring Doctors And Dentists

Sixty-five high school seniors who live in certain Kentucky counties and who want to become doctors or dentists will get an early start toward their goal next summer at the University of Kentucky, the University of Louisville or Kentucky State University.

The students will be chosen to attend a college preparatory workshop lasting five to seven weeks. Applicants must live in Kentucky counties or areas of some counties that historically have had too few doctors or dentists.

The workshops are offered through the Professional Education Preparation Program created by the 1980 General Assembly.

Students selected to participate will meet and work with medical and dental students and receive instruction in reading, writing, study-skills, and problem solving.

They will also attend science classes to prepare them for their premedical or pre dental studies.

Room and board and all workshop materials will be provided without charge to the participant. Each student will receive an allowance for personal expenses.

Interested high school seniors can get further information and application forms for their high school counselor or principal, by contacting the school superintendent's office or by contacting the Professional Education Preparation Program, Kentucky Council on Higher Education, West Frankfort Office Complex, Frankfort, Ky. 40601 (502-564-3745).

Applications must be received by April 2, 1983.

Graduating seniors who live in Floyd county are eligible to apply.

Early Scholarship Winner

Ronnie Taylor (standing, right), director of Development at Pikeville College, presented a $1,000 scholarship to Pikeville College to Heather Nicole Hunter, the first baby born in 1983 at the Pikeville Methodist Hospital. Heather Nicole is the daughter of Tracy and Fran Hunter, of Honaker. Cindy Sargent of WPKE (standing, middle) also presented the new baby gifts and certificates from area merchants.

Wants To Interview Best Area Quilters

If you make quilts and live in one of 22 Appalachian counties in Kentucky, Roydell O'Steen, instructor of home economics at Morehead State University, wants to talk with you.

O'Steen and Dr. Jacquelyn McCullough, head of MSU's Department of Home Economics, are conducting an Appalachian Quilt Identification Project, an oral history of quilting in Eastern Kentucky.

"We are looking for people who make quilts and are willing to talk to us, be tape recorded, and be photographed with their quilts," O'Steen said.

She wants to find the three best quilters in each county or someone who has old quilts and knows where they came from, who made them, and how old they are. In addition, she would like to talk to anyone who has won an award for a quilt.

The project, which is being financed by a MSU faculty research grant, has just begun and will be completed in late June. Results of the project will be published in July.

Additional information on the project is available from O'Steen or Dr. McCullough at UPO 889, MSU, Morehead, KY 40351.

Good News Report

By THOMAS W. PAUKEN
Director of ACTION

Jo Ann Karr, of the Pleasant Grove section of Dallas, Texas, was sick and tired of the high rate of crime in her neighborhood. So were her neighbors. Everyone knew the police department was shorthanded and in need of help, and Jo Ann, a grandmother who had a Texan's deep appreciation for the meaning of law and order, decided to provide some. She called a meeting in her front yard of interested citizens and set about organizing a crime watch. Said Jo Ann, "We're going to learn to be nosy." That was in June, two years ago, and there were a hundred volunteers ready to learn.

Today there are more than 600 volunteers in Pleasant Grove, looking out for the homes and privacy of the area's 3,000 residents. Volunteers are from all age groups, their common bond to provide security for their neighbors. It was once an old frontier custom, and it's having the same positive results today.

Chairman Jo Ann Karr's Crime Watcher Group No. 1250, as it is known to the Dallas police, operates three round-the-clock patrols at no cost to the taxpayer. Volunteers provide their own vehicles and fuel. Some volunteers do their watching from their homes; others patrol on foot. Anything that looks out of place—any strangers behaving suspiciously—and the crime watchers are on the phone, reporting to the police.

Dallas Police Chief Billy Prince refers to them, and the 20 similar volunteer groups throughout the city, as the "eyes and ears" of his police department. "The way we operate is a matter of using good judgment and common sense," says Jo Ann. "You have the God-given right to protect your life and property, and that's what we're seeing to. We offer sound advice, too. Like, cut the shrubbery away from your windows so you can see out and someone can't use it for concealment. Trim the lower branches off your trees so a burglar can't use one as a means of entry. If you have a fence around your property, put a lock on the gate. A robber can't climb a fence, lugging a TV set. When a housewife goes shopping at the supermarket, she should carry only one check. If she carries her checkbook and it's stolen, the professional thief can quickly use it to his own advantage. We have to be smarter than they are."

And there's no doubt that the crime watchers in Pleasant Grove are just that. Burglaries are down 90 percent from a year ago, and, as Chief Prince recently wrote to Jo Ann and the Group: "A simple 'thank you' is never enough, but it is heartfelt and comes from the entire Dallas Police Department."

It's bad news when criminals prey on the neighborhood. It's good news when the Jo Ann Karrs of the neighborhood organize the residents, and take action.

Special Day Honors Minister and Family

Sunday, a special day of appreciation in Prestonsburg for Rev. Dean Pack and his family, was a joyous one. The friends and members of Irene Cole (First) Baptist Church spent their day wishing the Packs a farewell. This occasion was held at the home of Lucy J. Ransdell where more than 100 guests were present. Wade Moore was the photographer for this event.

The occasion was highlighted by many gifts of appreciation and a lovely floral centerpiece donated by Allen Florist. In addition, the following sonnet of appreciation was read, as prepared by Mr. and Mrs. Larry D. Hunt.

A "Pack" Full of Memories

Men of God have gone into mountains and plains,
But the Pack's came to Prestonsburg where it always rains

In just five years they have sowed many of God's seeds
And accomplished so many good deeds
They loved the young, they loved the old,
They did so many things that remain untold

They settled here at Irene Cole
Where they found and saved many a soul

We didn't always have that name
And you saw fit to change it, just the same

And now we're First Baptist as we use to be
Where we all have enjoyed your ministry

Prestonsburg football will never be the same,
Without your "Snoopy Hat" we may not win another game.

The "spectaculars" were a success
If you don't believe me, ask all the rest
Remember the time of the fabulous "eighties"
Where there were four men and nine lovely ladies

You showed a kind heart when you asked the school kids to take part,
You gathered the kids for the movie, "Joni,"

Not even knowing how many there would be;
You told them all it would be free admission
But from the high school he had to get permission.

Without the voice of Janice Pack
The choir will sound flat if you sit in the back

And then there is Kara who took a sick spell
While doing so, she just lay back and tried to get well
With all the stuffed animals "packed" in her bed
She couldn't get in, so she slept on the floor instead

As for all the mothers to be,
Dean saw fit for a new nursery
He set aside a special day
Which was to be sometime in May.

Without him to speak his part
I guess it's time for all of us to start.
You can thank him for the new nursery
Without his help it would not be.

When Dean plans a dinner
You might say, "it will be a winner."
He lined those tables from one end to another
Until he was told he could go no further.

All the families came to town
To eat, fellowship and gather around.
You did things that weren't always before and never the same,
Like the time you took Mommy Ransdell down memory lane.

And as things are meant to be
I am sure we'll all meet in Eternity
And now it's time to say good-bye,
We all have promised not to cry.

After you are gone, it just won't be the same,
We'll miss your prayers at each game.
We dare not guess what Helen will do
When she no longer has to look after you.

As for the rest of us, your memories will always be dear
And if you ever need a friend we promise to be near.

So to you, Dean, Janice and Kara,
We give you our love and prayers.
As we know things will work out,
Because that is part of what your ministry is all about.

God bless you and be with you always
From the people who love you.

This event was preceded by a week of events for the Pack family. This included an evening and dinner with J. R. Polk family of Mays Branch, dinner with Mr. and Mrs. Seldon Horne and Kim and their guest, Helen Clark, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Conley at the Carriage House in Paintsville and Mrs. Lucy Regan at Jenny Wiley Lodge.

Later in the week Mr. and Mrs. Ron Hooker and family had the Packs over for dinner at their home. Friday morning Janice Pack was surprised by a party held by her kindergarten class and teachers which ended Friday night with a slumber party for Kara. In attendance at the party were Rebecca Staude, Kim Horne, Randi Lynn Polk, Renee McCoy, Mary Elizabeth McCoy. Friday at a noon luncheon, a gift was presented to Dean Pack by the Ministerial Association in appreciation for his contributions to the community. This event was held at May Lodge.

This week, Mr. and Mrs. Adrian Laferty will be entertaining the Pack family at the Carriage House and Burietta Gearheart will entertain them at May Lodge.

Mr. and Mrs. J.W. Pangle, of Morristown Tenn., spent this past weekend here with their daughter, Mrs. Pack, and family.

The Pack family will be residing in Morristown Tenn. when they leave Prestonsburg. We all wish this special family and wish them the best of luck and God's richest blessings.

49th Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. James Cole, of Printer, were honored on Sunday, December 26, with a 49th anniversary party. The party was given to them by their children. A white and yellow three-tiered cake, baked by Bonnie Crisp, of Martin, was served.

Simulated Mine Explosion At Martin Shows Dust Danger

The state Department of Mines and Minerals recently simulated a coal dust explosion to show the dangerous power that can rock a volatile mine that is inadequately rockdusted, according to Commissioner Willard Stanley.

The coal dust explosion demonstration was held in the department's Martin district office.

Department officials illustrated the effects of such an explosion with new equipment which will be integrated into the mine safety and training classes taught throughout the state. Safety instructors in the agency's six district offices will combine clean-up techniques making mines less volatile with the explosion equipment to show miners the necessary steps in preventing potentially fatal blasts.

Colder weather leads to drier mines, which makes conditions ripe for an explosion unless operators take the proper precautions, Stanley said. "That's why the department held the demonstration, as a winter alert and a reminder to those working the coal fields," the commissioner said. "Operators and miners should be thoroughly cleaning up and rockdusting to assure an inert, non-explosive mine. It only takes a shovelful of coal dust to destroy a two- or three-bedroom home, much less a small, underground mine."

Stanley pointed out that similar conditions existed last winter when coal dust explosions from solid shooting rocked two miles and killed 15 miners.

The department recently purchased the $12,000 explosion kit equipment as part of an overall effort to emphasize safer blasting practices in the mines. Improved training is just one step Mines and Minerals officials have taken over the past year to make Kentucky's coal fields safer. Regular rockdust sampling and analysis, unannounced spot inspections, and emergency medical technician training, Stanley added, are some of the additional safety procedures.

In addition to Mines and Minerals inspectors and student miners, United Mine Workers representatives from District 30 in Pikeville and coal company operators attended the training demonstration.

The Titanic: An Inquiry

For 70 years the sinking of the Titanic with a loss of more than 1500 lives has intrigued the public imagination. Journalist Peter Williams uncovers new facts and challenges old theories on "Titanic: A Question of Murder," airing on KET Wednesday, Feb. 16, at 8 p.m.

The search for the truth behind the disaster took Williams to an international Titanic convention in Philadelphia. Interviews with survivors of the sinking ship re-creates the feelings of confusion and terror of the nightmarish morning of April 16, 1912, when the ship went down in icy waters.

Why did the "unsinkable" Titanic go under? Why were so many lives lost? Peter Williams examines the evidence, shedding new light on the arguments over the lack of lifeboats and evacuation drills. Through interviews and painstaking research, Williams reveals a story of tragedy, greed, intrigue and cover-up—the reality behind the legend of the "invincible" Titanic.

Coal Related Courses At Community College

In order to become a licensed land surveyor in Kentucky, one is required to take two 8-hour exams. The Community Services Program at PCC offers Land Surveyors In Training to prepare participants for the first of the two exams, "Fundamentals of Land Surveying Exam". Coordinator Hailu Bogale will be covering 90% of the test matter throughout the eight-week course with the assistance of specialists Charles Robertson, Robert Lawson, Harold Gibson, Charles Robinette and John Sammons. A detailed outline of course material is available at the Admissions Office of PCC. The course begins February 16, 6:30-9:30 p.m., in Room 159 of the Johnson Building on PCC campus.

Individuals occupying management positions in the coal industry and mine supervisors who wish an overview of the present coal markets are invited to attend a 9-week course entitled Managing in the Coal Business. Dr. Maurice E. Bailey, instructor, will present a broad understanding of the technical, business and financial aspects of the competitive factors in the coal industry by examining the relationship of coal to other fuels in the electric power industry, the use of coal in the steel industry, competition of Appalachian coal and other coals, and competition between large and small mining companies. To register for these courses or obtain further information, contact Linda Compton at 886-3863, ext. 215.

OPEN MEETINGS

Kentucky law requires that meetings of public agencies at which action is taken by such agencies or at which public business is discussed are to be open to the public. The Open Meetings Act, found in Kentucky Revised Statutes 61.805 to 61.850, was enacted into law in 1974. The purpose of this act, as stated in its preamble, is to ensure that the public's business is not being conducted in secret. The right of the citizens of this commonwealth to attend meetings of public agencies stems solely from this act, for there was no common law requirement or constitutional provision requiring that public bodies meet openly.

A recognition of just what "meetings" or which "public agencies" are required to be conducted openly is central to understanding the scope of Kentucky's Open Meetings Act. Kentucky's statute is very comprehensive in defining a meeting. Its definition of "meeting" includes gatherings of every kind. A meeting occurs regardless of whether it is of a regular, special, or informational nature. In addition, casual gatherings held in anticipation of or in conjunction with regular or special meetings are defined as "meetings". The place where a meeting is held does not change its status as a "meeting".

The definition of a "public agency", as found in Kentucky Revised Statutes 61.805(2), is quite broad. Public agencies include, but are not limited to state legislative, executive, administrative or advisory boards, commissions, committees, or policy-making boards. In addition, county, city, school district or special purpose district boards, public commissions, councils, and offices are defined as public agencies. Committees of public agencies, including ad hoc committees, subcommittees, and advisory bodies, are also considered public agencies for the purposes of Kentucky's Open Meetings Act.

Although Kentucky law requires that all meetings of public agencies at which a quorum of members are present must be open to the public, there exist 11 specific exceptions to the rule. There are four "public agencies" which are permitted to conduct private, closed meetings. These public agencies include the Kentucky parole board, grand and petit juries, state and executive cabinets, and committees of the General Assembly other than standing committees. Meetings which federal or state law or the Constitution require to be conducted privately or secretly are also excepted.

In addition, there are five subject matter exceptions to the open meetings requirement. These exceptions extend to meetings of public agencies which are normally required to be open to the public but which, because of the nature of business to be discussed, may be closed. Meetings of public agencies may be closed when the business to be discussed relates to the acquisition or sale of real property, proposed or pending litigation, collective bargaining, industrial prospects, or personnel matters.

Kentucky law delineates the exact procedure to be followed upon going into a closed meeting. Notice must be given in a regular open meeting of the nature of the business to be conducted in the proposed closed session and the reason for the closed session. Once an agency goes into a closed session, no final action may be taken, and discussion may take place only with regard to those matters publicly announced prior to convening the closed session.

The schedules of all meetings of public agencies in Kentucky are to be made available to the public. Members of the public attending meetings of public agencies are not required to identify themselves. Kentucky law further provides that minutes of action taken at meetings of public agencies must be open to public inspection.

Kentucky's circuit courts have jurisdiction to enforce the Open Meetings Act upon application by any citizen of this state, by injunction or other appropriate court order. A court of competent jurisdiction may declare void any rule, resolution, regulation, ordinance, or other formal action of a public agency which was adopted in violation of the Kentucky Open Meetings Act. Furthermore, any person who knowingly attends a meeting of an agency of which he is member at which a provision of Kentucky's Open Meetings Act is violated shall be subject to punishment by a fine of not more than $100.

Kentucky's Open Meetings Act grants to the citizens of this commonwealth the opportunity to attend meetings of public agencies. As such, this comprehensive act guarantees that public officials shall not summarily decide what the public is entitled to know.

Unit Will Probe Insurance Fraud

A special unit to detect and investigate fraudulent unemployment insurance claims will begin operating Jan. 31. The unit has been established in the Human Resources Cabinet's division for unemployment insurance.

According to Human Resources Secretary Buddy Adams, the new fraud investigation unit is being set up to detect benefits already paid on fraudulent claims and to deter future fraudulent claims against the state's unemployment insurance trust fund.

"With Kentucky's unemployment insurance trust fund currently running in the red, it is not only our legal responsibility, but also our moral obligation to assure that benefits are paid only to those who are qualified to receive them," Adams said. More than $280,000 in benefits were paid to claimants filing fraudulent claims during the first half of 1982 alone, he added.

The new unit will be headed by H.C. Shipp, a retired Kentucky State Police officer and former field coordinator of the state police office of crime prevention. Shipp will direct six field investigators stationed in Prestonsburg, Lexington, Louisville, Elizabethtown and Hopkinsville.

Investigators from the new unit will review unemployment insurance claims for potential unreported earnings, misrepresented reasons for being out of work, incorrect history information, and false certifications about claimants' availability for suitable work, offers of suitable work and return work dates. Also, investigators will review administrative procedures for potential fraud within the unemployment insurance division.

A major investigative tool that will be used by the unit will be the unemployment insurance division's crossmatch system, said Adams. This computerized system detects potential benefit overpayments by comparing benefit payment records against the claimant's and employers' wage reports, he explained.

Crossmatches of claimants' social security numbers will also be made against the state's Corrections Cabinet records of prison inmates and against Human Resources' vital statistics death records.

Another part of fraud investigation concerns the unemployment insurance division's fictitious employer program, Adams said. To detect people using fictitious employers to collect benefits, investigators will verify, through personal contacts and audits, the employer and listed employees for every new account registered with the division, he said. "Also, a fictitious employer profile currently is being prepared for a computer crossmatch against suspicious employer accounts."

"Our efforts to combat fraudulent claims being paid should help reduce the growing drain on the trust fund and the accompanying rise in the federal budget debt."

Growing Child

One of a baby's favorite activities is to explore things with his eyes and hands together, according to Growing Child, the monthly child development newsletter.

At seven months, a baby wants to know how objects feel and his eyes naturally look at what his hands are exploring. He will pick up a clothespin, block, plastic cup, or toy and feel it, finger it, twist it—all the while looking at it.

This urge to explore is so strong that a seven-month-old will be quite happy playing himself for brief periods. When he is playing alone like this, let him be. Exploring with eyes and hands together is very important. Whenever a baby looks at an object and feels it at the same time, he is getting some very basic information about that object.

Just as important, he gets information about the same object through two different senses at the same time.

Looking and feeling are actually scientific experiments that a baby is making to learn some fundamental realities about this world and himself.

One of the most important things he learns is that he has eyes and that he can use them to get information about the world. His eyes and hands together can "match up" and organize information.

This "matching up" is important when a child gets to school. Letters and words have different shapes and forms and in school he must be able to use his eyes to recognize all those squiggly lines.

Many school children who have trouble reading are simply having a hard time recognizing the shapes of letters and words. To help them learn to use their eyes, teachers involve them in activities where they can watch what their hands are doing.

You can give a baby this valuable experience before he's even a year old by giving him objects with different "feels" to them: curved and straight, rough and smooth, heavy and light, big and little, solid and open. Give him only a few at a time, but change them when he's no longer interested.

For more information on the physical and social development of children up to six years old, write to Growing Child, P.O. Box 620N, Lafayette, Indiana 47902. Include child's birthdate when writing. A year's subscription costs $11.95.

Diet Called Factor In Stemming Cancer

Strong evidence suggests that diet itself plays an important role in whether a person develops cancer or not. The familiar adage, "You are what you eat," may not be far off the mark.

A National Research Council (NRC) committee commissioned by the National Cancer Institute offers certain guidelines that are "both consistent with good nutritional practices and likely to reduce the risk of cancer."

"According to studies made in different parts of the world, the incidence of breast, colon and prostate cancer is significantly lower among people who eat lots of vegetables," Walter S. Ross writes in the February Reader's Digest. This finding suggests that vegetables contain substances capable of inhibiting cancer in man.

One group of foods thought to inhibit tumor promotion or prevent the formation of carcinogens in the intestinal tract are those vegetables whose edible parts are seeds or tubers—dried beans, chickpeas, cereal grains, potatoes. The NRC recommends increasing consumption of these and other vegetables along with whole grain cereals and fruits in the daily diet.

Another NRC recommendation is inclusion of foods rich in carotene—a substance derived from vitamin A which is found in the yellow and dark-green vegetables, like carrots, sweet potatoes, spinach, kale and broccoli. "Studies have revealed an 'inverse relationship' between a diet rich in carotene and vitamin A and cancers of the gastrointestinal tract and bladder," Ross writes. Similar studies reveal a lower incidence of lung cancer as well.

Ross cautions against overdosing on vitamin A beyond what is found in food or in a standard multivitamin (generally 5000 International Units). This vitamin is fat soluble and stored in the liver. "The body can handle only a certain amount; high doses of vitamin A over a long period can become toxic...People can be harmed by reasoning that if a little 'A' is good, a lot must be better," he warns.

The cabbage family—including cauliflower, broccoli and Brussels sprouts—also appears to inhibit cancer of the colon and rectum, according to studies that have taken place in such diverse countries as Japan and the United States.

Just as there seem to be certain substances in foods that appear to inhibit cancer, others appear to promote it. Repeated studies connect high-fat diets with cancers of the breast and colon. The NRC also recommends a minimal consumption of salt-cured and smoked foods, which introduce substances suspected of being carcinogenic in humans. Heavy use of alcohol, especially in conjunction with smoking, is linked to cancers of the mouth, esophagus, larynx and liver.

"Following the NRC guidelines is no guarantee of avoiding cancer," Ross concludes, "but it will likely reduce cancer risk—and create a diet that will almost certainly be more healthful than the one most of us are now consuming."

Help Repeal A Bad Law.

CONGRESS WANTS A PIECE OF YOUR SAVINGS.

WHAT THEY NEED IS A PIECE OF YOUR MIND.

Recently, Congress quietly passed a withholding law that will cost American savers and investors the use of 10% of their interest and dividends.

In simple terms, effective July 1st, 1983, this new law requires banks and other financial institutions to deduct 10% of the interest or dividends you earn on your savings and investments. That money then goes to the Internal Revenue Service in much the same way as payroll deductions are now handled.

The sponsors of this law have told us it was designed to catch a small minority of Americans who evade taxes on their interest and dividends. But the truth is the law penalizes the great majority of America's savers and investors who pay their taxes faithfully. What's more, the federal government is now receiving all the necessary information to curtail tax cheating.

Though the law does include exemptions for some low income and elderly Americans, if they go through the red tape of filing an application, most savers and investors will forfeit some of the money they could earn in compounded interest.

We urge you to join our efforts by writing letters to your representative in Congress and to the two senators from this state. Tell them you want the 10% withholding tax repealed, because it would impose an unfair penalty on savers like yourself.

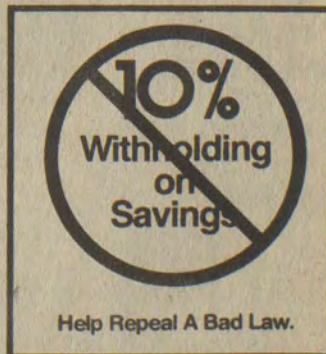

For assistance in contacting your representative and senators please ask any of our bankers. If we all act now, Congress will get a clear message from the voters back home, and they will work to repeal this needless law.

Course Offers Tools To Handle Inflation

With the present economy threatening nearly everyone's financial stability and inflation continuing to strain the American consumer, Money Management/Financial Planning will be more than helpful in dealing with the coming '80's. Homer Forster, a financial counselor with 15 years' experience in the financial arena, will be conducting this six weeks course at Prestonsburg Community College beginning February.

A nationally-recognized lecturer on both tax treatment of life insurance and real estate investments and financing, Forster intends to provide participants with an overview of financial planning tools and techniques necessary to implement a sound, personal financial plan.

A wide variety of subject matter will be covered ranging from real estate investment, life and health insurance, tax shelters, wills and trusts to retirement plans.

The course will meet on Wednesdays, 6:30-8:30 p.m. in the Pike Building, Room 113. Participants can register at the Admissions Office prior to the class date or contact Linda Compton at 886-3863, ext. 215, for further information.

Changes Reflect Federal Ruling

South Central Bell changed the way it does business on January 1, but don't be surprised if you don't notice anything different.

You'll only notice the changes if you come to us for new service or to make a change in your present service," said Art Willett, local manager for Bell.

Willett said people with questions about their individual telephone service or about their bills will still get answers by calling a Bell service representative. The phone number is in the Customer Guide pages near the front of your phone book. If you need repair service on telephones provided by South Central Bell, you'll still call in Prestonsburg.

"One of the bigger changes involves the sale of telephones," Willett said. "AT&T (Bell's parent company) has set up a new company to sell telephones and special services. It's called American Bell, Inc., and it started doing business January 1.

"South Central Bell is still leasing telephones, but we can only work with the equipment that was in service or in our inventory stock on December 31. If that stock runs out before 1984, we won't be providing phones, and people will have to go to other suppliers."
