

Jury Convicts 5 As Conspirators, Three Acquitted

When a group of miners converged on the Ray-Mac strip mine on a ridge near East McDowell two years ago, some of them were bent on driving the Pikeville operator out of business by force. And among the plotters was an aging coal operator who had long dominated mining in that area and who was known by the miners who worked for him as "papaw."

That much is implied in decisions handed down so far by a U.S. District Court jury in Pikeville, which has returned guilty verdicts against Prestonsburg coal operator Edgar "Papaw" Jones and four men employed by firms once mining coal for him.

Three defendants in the case have been acquitted. The jury has yet to return verdicts on charges against 10 other defendants.

The federal court found Jones guilty Monday on two counts of violating a federal anti-racketeering law. President of the JRM Coal Company, Jones conspired against the rival Ray-Mac company and had a hand in the explosion that blew a Ray-Mac auger apart, the jury found.

He was acquitted of three counts linking him with shots fired at the Ray-Mac mine and with the burning of a tippie leased by the firm.

On Tuesday, Mose Mead, German Stumbo, Teddy Kinney and Kenneth Rolland were also found guilty of being part of the conspiracy and of making the bomb that destroyed the Ray-Mac auger on Feb. 21, 1982. The four were also accused of trying unsuccessfully to blow up a bulldozer the same day.

In addition, Mead was found guilty of burning down a tippie Ray-Mac leased on Simpson's Branch, near Drift, Feb. 26, 1982.

Tutor Program For Dyslexics Gains Support

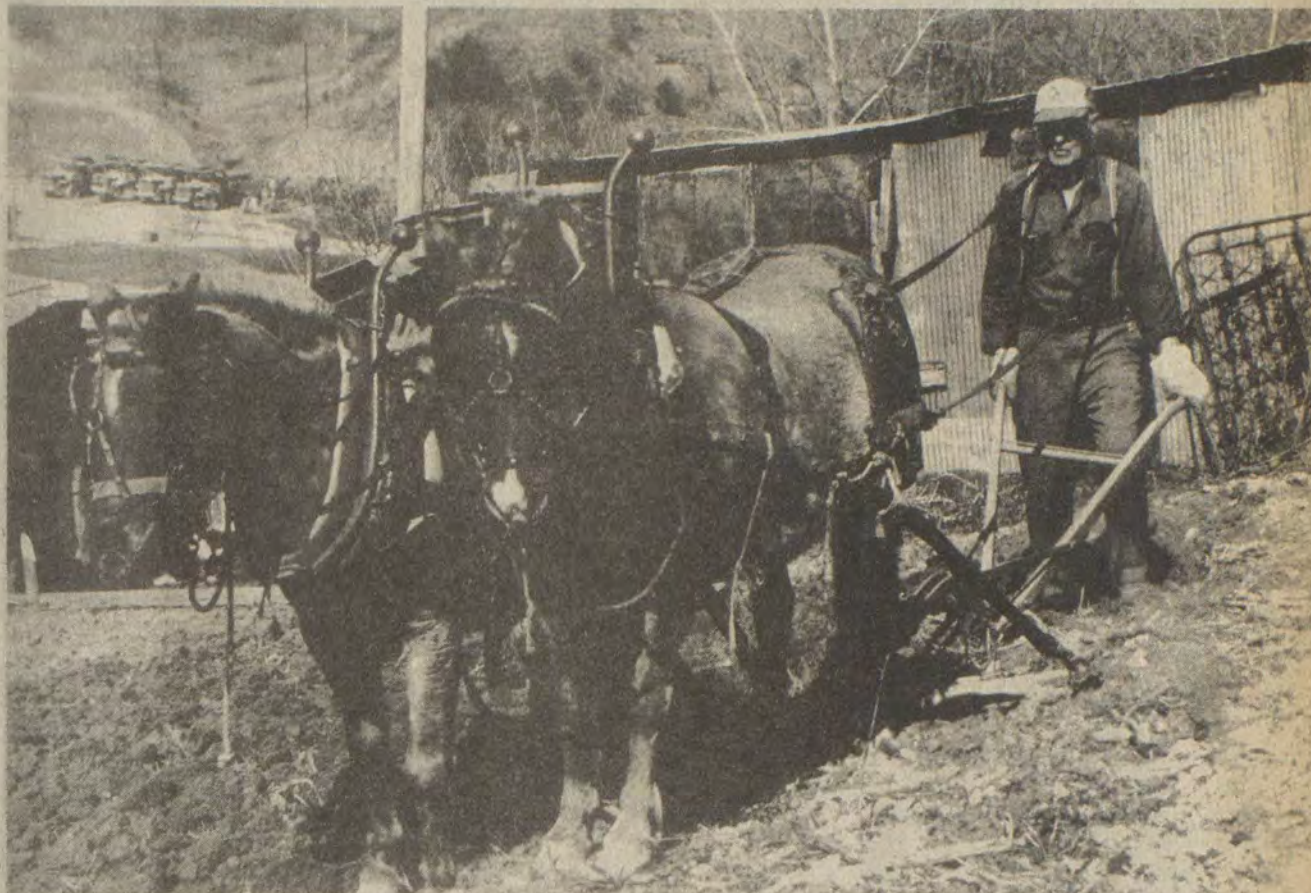

How does a bright seven-year-old feel when he discovers he is unable to master a skill his classmates are taking in their stride? That is the predicament faced by about 15 of every 100 youngsters, who are unable to read on account of a learning disorder called dyslexia.

Ann Latta, director of an organization called Floyd County Reading Research, told members of the Floyd Board of Education last week that, even when they are placed in special classes, dyslexic children often fail to improve. But one-on-one tutoring has proven remarkably effective in a Knott county program established four years ago, she said.

Mrs. Latta won the board's cooperation in setting up a similar program in this county.

Under a plan approved by the board, the tutoring group will ask Floyd grade school teachers for help in identifying dyslexic students, whose parents will then be asked to consider enrolling them in a remedial program conducted by the group.

A meeting for parents and others interested in learning about dyslexia has (See Story No. 2, Page 4)

Judge Accuses Mine Inspectors Of Martin Mine

Federal mine inspectors may have exposed miners to serious risk a year ago by stringing out the inspection of a Martin county mine in deference to the operator, an administrative law judge said in a March 30 opinion.

Judge Joseph B. Kennedy said inspectors from the U.S. Mine Safety and Health Administration (MSHA) were derelict in their duty on Feb. 28, 1983, when they delayed by a day a full inspection of the Pontiki Coal Corp. No. 2 mine on Meathouse Creek near Inez.

His opinion strongly suggests that inspectors deliberately ignored a build-up of coal dust around a belt line so that the coal firm, a MAPCO subsidiary, could work another shift before beginning a clean-up.

Kennedy called on the inspector-general of the Department of Labor to investigate why serious safety violations were not cited the first day inspectors entered the mine. The Labor Department investigator should find out whether inspectors stood to benefit from the delay or whether MSHA was "innocent to the point of naivete," the judge said.

"It was this type of callous indifference and dereliction on the part of the Pikeville district that led to the Scotia disaster," said Kennedy in reference to the MSHA performance. In the 1976 Scotia mine explosion, 26 miners and inspectors died.

The present case began Feb. 28, 1983, when five MSHA inspectors were sent to the Pontiki mine. Over a 25-day period, no beltline examinations were recorded, a fact the judge said should have prompted a visual examination along the length of the conveyor belt.

Because this was not done, inspectors missed an "enormous" accumulation of volatile coal dust, "much of it in suspension, amidst a chaotic scene of worn, stuck and damaged rollers, worn and broken suspension brackets, and bottom belts lying on the floor" in piles of coal and coal dust.

Conditions like this extended for nearly a mile underground and posed an "imminent risk" of fire or explosion in a mine described by a Pontiki attorney as "one of the gassiest in eastern Kentucky."

This Town...That World

SOMETHING MISSING

The sights and sounds of early spring, despite weather that on occasion is fit for neither man nor beast, are all back again around our place—all, except one sound. The birds are all back, and one cardinal has taken upon himself a responsibility that at one time was reserved for the roosters. He's our alarm clock at daybreak as he runs through his liquid repertoire. Two half-grown rabbits scamper around the premises, and our old friend, the groundhog, waddles his way along the hillside, out back.

The missing sound? The peepers which, every year that I can remember, have been the early birds in this business of heralding the springtime—they just aren't there.

We've been wondering why, and finally have decided it's because some of the weedkiller used on the hillside washed down into the little rill that has served the tiny frogs so long as their vernal choir-loft.

Just a hint of "Silent Spring."

Shelter for Women Loses State Help Second Time

For six years, efforts have been made here to set up a place to shelter battered women. Twice has the project seemed on the verge of realization, only to fail at the last moment, victim of a turn in the political tide or some other whim of fortune.

For Janie Beverley Hall, president of an organization called SAFE (Shelter for Abused and Family Emergencies), her worst fears were confirmed by a March 26 letter from an official of the state Human Resources Cabinet. The letter said an offer made last July to provide state funding of $50,000 for a temporary shelter here was being withdrawn.

"I felt like I'd been dropped from a bridge," said Mrs. Hall, a nurse employed by Mountain Comprehensive Care. Not that the state action was unexpected—Frankfort officials had warned in February that funds would not be forthcoming unless the group could find a house, furnish it, and start accepting clients.

The real disappointment, said Mrs. Hall—who saw a $90,000 state pledge withdrawn four years ago—was that, once again, the shelter organizers came close to clinching a deal, only to see it collapse through the group's inability to put the final pieces in place.

In both instances, the shelter group had a house, furnishings, a director, support from referral agencies, and a pledge of interim funding to tide the project over until state funds could be "drawn down."

In 1980, when the group was called DASH (Domestic Abuse Support and Housing), it had a house in Pikeville—the result of a pact, some say, between Human Resources Secretary Grady Stumbo and Pike Judge-Executive Wayne Rutherford, for whom the promise of a spouse abuse shelter might have been helpful in his bid that year for re-election.

DASH also had interim support from Mountain Comprehensive Care and other donors, who furnished the house, installed an alarm system, and began to staff it. But Rutherford lost the election—and the $90,000 committed by Stumbo went in other directions.

Reorganized as SAFE, the shelter group got a pledge from Secretary Buddy Adams last July that Human Resources would come up with $50,000 for a shelter, if a like amount could be (See Story No. 5, Page 4)

Academic Recognition Planned in Schools

The Floyd Board of Education met Wednesday, amid continuing signs that recent scrutiny of the school district by state officials is having an effect here.

The most obvious sign was the presence of an observer from the state Education Department, following a directive issued by the state board in February. Don Fightmaster, of the state department's office of local services, took notes occasionally but declined to participate actively in the local board meeting.

In the wake of criticism of Floyd school officials by a citizens' group last June—some of it having to do with the conduct of the school board's monthly meeting—the state board voted in February to monitor the local board until June.

Other evidence of the closer state scrutiny—some of which was invited by the Floyd board itself when it agreed to be part of a School Effectiveness Program designed to assist lagging school districts—was the hiring of a consultant to evaluate custodial services and the tightening of accounting practices in the schools.

On a recommendation of the state Division of Buildings and Grounds, a consultant will be employed to assess the schools' janitorial needs and to develop job descriptions for housekeeping staff. On a recommendation of the Division of School Finance, principals and clerks managing school activity funds will be instructed to adhere to a uniform accounting procedure.

Tighter rules for determining what sorts of activities can be counted as part of the school day prompted some grumbling among board members, some of whom were angry that the school-sponsored senior trip must be counted as an absence. While the board held that the 175 students taking the trip to Florida this year would be granted an "excused" absence—a designation which allows them to make up work missed—some board members said the trip should be counted as an educational activity.

Rising River and TV System Concern Council at Meet

Reports that water was rising and threatening homes on Arnold Avenue and Lake Drive, problems with television reception in the city, and charges that discipline has broken down at the Job Corps Center exercised members of the Prestonsburg city council Monday night.

While the council met, and on into the early hours of Tuesday morning, workers from the city's fire and streets departments operated pumps in an unsuccessful attempt to keep water from flooding the basements of several city homes.

Cause of the flooding was apparently a blocked culvert behind Druther's Restaurant, which dammed runoff from the rains which soaked Prestonsburg all day Monday and continued until around midnight.

Officials of Cabletelevision, Inc., which enjoys a franchise to supply cable television service here, declined to appear before the council to answer consumer complaints. An official in the firm's New Jersey office called Friday to say the company is unwilling to invest in needed repairs and is trying to sell the system. City Manager David Evans told the council.

The cable operators said earlier that a taller antenna would have to be installed and much of the system's transmission lines replaced—both costly undertakings—if service was to be measurably improved.

On a motion of council member Paul Hunt Thompson, the panel voted to invite Gerald Torrey, director of the Prestonsburg Job Corps, to appear at its next meeting to answer allegations of worsening conditions at the facility. The allegations, contained in an anonymous letter sent to council members, include charges that staff members are selling drugs to students and that discipline at the center has collapsed.

Anticipating construction of new offices by the First Commonwealth Bank on that site, the council officially closed an unused section of Friend Street, leading from Arnold Avenue to the river. Arguments were being heard in an appeals court in Catlettsburg this week on a suit filed by Garland and Wonnell Godsey in an attempt to block construction of the bank.

The city will participate in a federal program designed to promote the hiring of Vietnam veterans, the council decided. Under the plan, the city and federal government will share the cost of salaries for three veterans to be (See Story No. 8, Page 4)

A PRESTONSBURG Fire Department diver emerged from floodwaters in the middle of a residential block downtown Monday night, as other fire officers manned pumps in an unavailing effort to keep the rising tide out of nearby homes.

The waters rose rapidly in a gully running between Lake Drive and Arnold Avenue as runoff from the day's persistent rainfall was unable to trace its customary path to the river. City Manager David Evans said the runoff was blocked by a culvert installed recently between Arnold Avenue properties owned by David Leslie and Druther's Restaurant on Lake Drive. The corrugated iron culvert had apparently collapsed, Evans said.

Although five pumps were pressed into service—the East Equipment Company, South Central Bell and the Middle Creek Volunteer Fire Department brought pumps to supplement one operated by the city fire department—the waters began to recede only when the rain abated, about midnight.

By then, several homes—including those of Bill and Dolly Pettrey, Julia May, and Garland and Wonnell Godsey—had water in their basements, and heating and air-conditioning units in the newly-built Combs law offices were knocked out of commission.

At one point during the emergency, a city gasoline dealer's refusal to sell the city fuel on credit threatened to shut the pumps down. City police forced the manager of the SuperAmerica station on North Lake Drive to sell about 10 gallons of fuel to the city under threat of arrest for obstructing governmental operations.

Corps of Engineers inspectors were expected to investigate the flooding this week.

On Volunteer's Role

Amy Lively

Organizing and operating a volunteer program was the subject of a recent speech by Amy Lively, Highlands Regional Medical Center public information officer. She addressed the midyear meeting of the Kentucky Library Association at Berea.

The group of 35 librarians requested this presentation on volunteer program planning, recruitment and management. Due to funding cutbacks, many librarians have a growing interest in utilizing volunteer resources.

Tipsy Driver Survey Shows Most Take Defensive Stance

A poll of Kentucky drivers arrested for drinking reveals most people arrested for DUI are very defensive about their behavior.

The survey, which was administered by Western Kentucky University health and safety faculty to 4,834 people who attended the state's mandatory Alcohol-Drug Education Program, reveals some other interesting statistics about the kinds of people arrested most for drinking and driving, and their attitudes about themselves.

The researchers suggest emphasis on the required nine and one-half hour course for drunk drivers (three evening classes on consecutive weeks) should focus more on helping offenders overcome their defensiveness "in order to promote a more accurate assessment of the drinking problem and its associated risks."

Fifty-two percent surveyed reported having had at least one wreck in the past five years, yet, when asked to rate their driving ability when sober, 98 percent rated themselves as average or above, the survey shows.

When asked about their perceptions of their drinking problem, only about 20 percent rated their drinking as a problem.

Each year more than 25,000 Americans die in automobile accidents, in which at least one driver was under the influence of alcohol, and recently the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration reported that the estimated proportion of fatal highway crashes in which alcohol is involved has increased from 50 to 55 percent.

WKU's survey, which polled 1982 ADE participants, also found offenders were predominantly male, young to middle age, unmarried, employed in an unskilled or semi-skilled occupation and earning a below-average income.

College students made up only four percent of the group.

IN APPRECIATION

I did not realize that your paper circulation extended over so many states until after the tragic death of our son, James Monroe Vanderpool, of Hippo, which happened March 5, 1984. We have received cards of sympathy from scattered states which stated that they read of the accident in the papers.

At this time we would like to express our heartfelt thanks to everyone that showed an effort in trying to comfort us in the time of our sorrow.

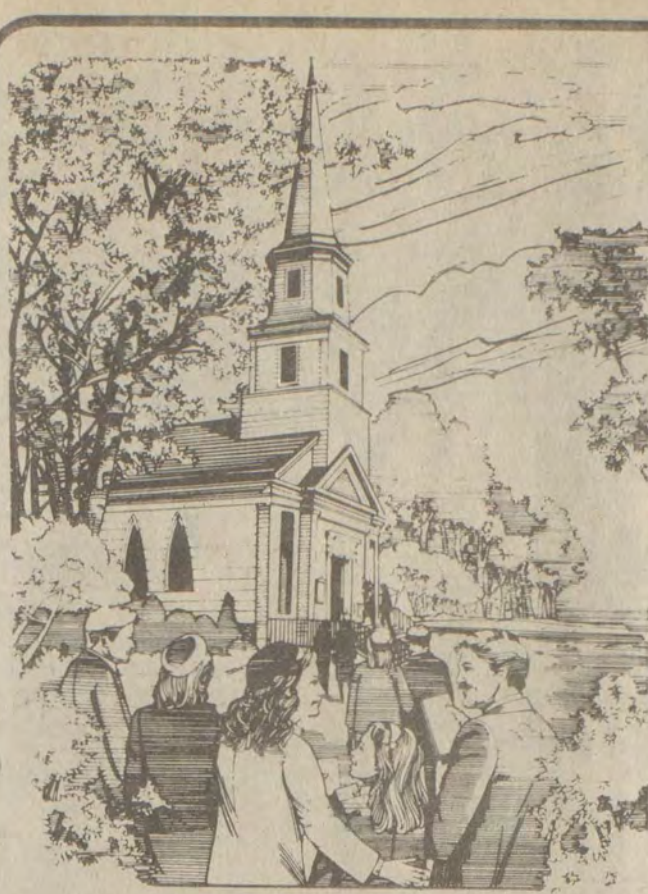

We wish to convey our thanks to the Respond Ambulance Service; to the doctors, nurses, staff and everyone present at the emergency room and chapel of the Highlands Regional Medical Center of Prestonsburg. Also thanks to James' fellow-workers at the tippie. We want to thank the Sheriff's Department and Constable Bob Hackworth for their service.

The presence of all of the friends and neighbors at the Philadelphia Church on Brush Creek will never be forgotten, and meant more than you might have realized.

We thank you all from the depths of our hearts for so many beautiful flowers, sympathy cards, the beautiful singing and preaching of the Regular Baptist brothers, the visiting of all of the brothers and sisters from churches scattered far and near, those who brought food and help. In simple words we appreciate everyone. We also want to thank the Hall Funeral Home for its kind and courteous service.

I am sorry I could not shake the hand of everyone present. I am also sorry that the two nights at the church house and also the day of the funeral that people could not get in the church and had to go back home. Again, thanks, everyone, and may God bless you.

Girl Loses Arm In Bizarre Mishap

In what was described by an Ypsilanti, Michigan traffic investigator as "the strangest, most bizarre accident I've ever been involved with, four-year-old Angela Slone, granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Slone, of Riley's Branch, Bevinville, has lost one arm, suffered a fractured skull and other injuries which will require surgical reconstruction.

The accident occurred March 9 when a pickup truck, left idling by its driver in "park" in front of the apartment where the toddler and her family live, was accidentally put into reverse, then into forward. A 13-year-old passenger, in an effort to halt the runaway truck, hit the accelerator instead of the brake. The truck, with four passengers, next hit a refrigerator lying on a sidewalk, but this failed to stop it, and the refrigerator was shoved into a parking lot where Angela Slone was playing. She was caught on the truck's bumper as it smashed through the wall of an apartment building.

A six-hour operation to reattach the severed arm was not successful, and doctors have told her family that Angela will not be able to wear an artificial arm.

Her mother has not left the hospital since Angela was injured, and her grandmother, Mrs. Ed Tackett, of Belleville Michigan, is caring for Angela's younger sister, Kristina.

Moved from the University of Michigan's Mott Children's Hospital's intensive care unit to a moderate care unit, Angela's condition has been upgraded from critical to fair.

An Angela Slone Miracle Fund has been set up by a woman who has never met the Slones but was moved to do something after reading of the accident and the child's injuries. She is Susan Jennette, who says, "I just hope people will do a little soul-searching and dig into their pocketbooks."

Contributions may be sent to the Angela Slone Miracle Fund, 3582 Pheasant Run, No. 2, Ann Arbor, Michigan 48104.

(Angela was said this week to be continuing her recovery and the Shriners organization is working to finance purchase of an artificial limb.)

Reffett-Bosworth Vows Solemnized

The marriage of Miss Deborah Lynne Reffett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ermil Reffett, of Beckley, W. Va., and Mr. Scott Greg Bosworth, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. Bosworth, of Cincinnati, O. was solemnized, September 24, 1983 at 6 p.m. on the lawn of White Hall State Shrine, Richmond, Kentucky.

The Rev. Randy Osborne officiated at the double-ring ceremony in which the bride used for her ring that of her grandmother, who was married in 1935.

The bride, given in marriage by her parents, was escorted to the altar by her father and wore a 1930's heirloom traditional candlelight satin gown. The gown was designed with a romantic "V" neckline and Juliette sleeves. The bodice was enhanced by a floral design constructed in the satin by piping which formed a deep cumberbund affect and the gown was adorned with a cathedral-length train. The bride wore a satin-covered picture hat which was slightly rolled on one side and the crown was covered with alencon lace and pearls and a fingertip-length veil of imported silk illusion. She carried long-stemmed calla lilies with sapphire blue and white streamers.

Miss Lelia Masden, of Owensboro, Ky., who served as honor attendant, wore a sapphire blue taffeta gown featuring off-the-shoulder styling. She carried a brass lantern filled with sapphire and white silk flowers. Other attendants were Betty Jean Gray, of Allen, Joyce Preston, of Lancaster, Ky., Deana Wilson, of Shelbyville, Ky., Charlotte Holmes, of Lexington, and Lynda Sisk, of Shelbyville.

The train bearer was Rebecca Isaacs, of Gray Hawk, Ky., cousin of the bride. All were attired in gowns identical to that of the honor attendant.

Best man was Jay Burton, Jr., of Cincinnati and groomsmen included Woody Bosworth, brother of the groom, of Cincinnati, Chuck Tudor, Richmond, Ky., Rob Grubb, Walton, Ky., Robert C. Isaacs, of Gray Hawk (cousin of the bride), Tommy O'Day, Robby Wainscott and Mark Evans, all of Cincinnati.

A program of traditional wedding music was performed by Mrs. Rebecca Speaks, of Richmond, pianist, and Mrs. Lillian Bosworth, mother of the groom, soloist. Mrs. Charlotte Bosworth, sister-in-law of the groom, presided at the guest registry.

A reception was held in the Keene-Johnson Ballroom on the campus of Eastern Kentucky University.

Following a southern wedding trip, the couple is residing in Cincinnati.

The bride, a granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Taylor Reffett, of Hueysville, attended Allen Central High School and graduated from Woodrow Wilson High School in Beckley. She is also a graduate of Eastern Kentucky University.

The groom is a professional model employed with FACES modeling agency in Cincinnati.

The jury found Stumbo, Kinney and Rolland not guilty of firing on the Ray-Mac mine from the surrounding hills on Feb. 17 and 18 that year.

Kinney was president of UMWA Local 5967 at McDowell when violence erupted between members of the union local and workers at the non-union Ray-Mac mine. The defense had argued throughout the lengthy trial that the conflict stemmed from an effort by the union to organize the non-union operation.

Accquitted on Monday was Drexil Hall, 32, of East McDowell, who was president of the union local in February, 1982. Two other defendants, Donahue Halbert, 53, of Langley, and Linville Mosley, 37, of McDowell, were acquitted Saturday. Hall had been accused of firing on a coal truck as it crossed a picket line at the entrance to the Ray-Mac mine. Halbert faced charges that he sold guns and ammunition to the conspirators, Mosley that he drove a group of men to a hillside vantage point from which they fired on the beleaguered mine.

Those convicted so far have been released on bond pending sentencing, which was scheduled by U.S. District Judge G. Wix Unthank for May 25. The jury is expected to resume deliberations today (Wednesday) on charges against the remaining 10 defendants.

Trial of the 18 began Jan. 9 and was scheduled to be heard four days a week. The winter's frequent snowfalls, the week-long absence of the judge on other business, and the long list of witnesses—over 40 appeared for the prosecution—stretched the process out over three months.

In closing arguments last week, a dozen defense attorneys took the offensive, many of them charging it was Ray-Mac, not Jones, which sought to drive a competitor out of business. Central figures in the picture painted by the defense were Ray-Mac president Frank Justice and former state police captain Billy Lykins, who was hired by Justice the week violence flared at the Ray-Mac mine on Bill Hall Branch.

Conflicting testimony was given as to when Lykins—described variously as security chief or public relations officer—was hired by the non-union mine, or what role he played in the confrontation with union pickets. But defense lawyers stressed his state and federal law enforcement ties—in addition to his years with the state police, he was also once a U.S. marshal—to suggest Ray-Mac sought federal indictments as a means to curb Jones' influence in the McDowell coalfield.

In arguing for his clients, Drexil Hall and Austin "Bo" Moore, last Thursday, Pikeville attorney Bernard Pafunda said the standoff between Ray-Mac and the union men was shaped by a "tone of arrogance and power" set by Justice. But Assistant U.S. Attorney Thomas L. Self said that arrogance was exemplified not by Justice but by Jones and recalled for the jury a boast attributed to Jones by a key prosecution witness.

Shortly after the dynamiting of the Ray-Mac auger, Pearl Booth had testified, Jones sat down with her and her husband in Emma Pack's restaurant at McDowell. In the course of their conversation, she said, the coal operator slapped his thigh with satisfaction and said, "I'm just like J.R. Ewing, sitting here on South Fork...I can have anything I want done."

tucky," said Kennedy. By allowing the belt to run again under those conditions, mine operators risked the lives of 21 miners and five inspectors that day, he said.

Kennedy suggests that the abbreviated Feb. 28 inspection may have been a friendly warning to the mine management of a more thorough inspection that followed on March 1. When they did inspect the mine seriously, MSHA officials found conditions so bad they issued more serious citations than they had anticipated, earning the ire of Dennis Jackson, Pontiki's vice-president for operations, who felt the inspectors had "double-crossed" him, the judge theorized.

The administrative law judge's involvement in the case stemmed from Jackson's contesting the citations as being unfair. Kennedy found "probable cause" to believe Jackson knew of the violations at the mine. He also raised the fine against Pontiki from $1900 to $7500.

been scheduled for tomorrow (Thursday), April 12, at 7:30 p.m. in the Floyd county library. Two weeks later, on April 26 and 27, candidates for the tutoring program will be screened in Hindman.

If an otherwise intelligent child has a hard time learning to read, write, spell or do math, he or she may be suffering from dyslexia. There is no single identifying sign of the disorder but rather a cluster of signs—any one of which might appear in a normal child—say those familiar with the problem.

Among the signs Floyd teachers will be asked to watch for are: spotty performance on IQ tests, with students performing well in some areas, poorly in others; difficulty in distinguishing left from right; poor judgment of space and time; frequent reversals of numbers or letters; awkward movements; mild hearing and speech problems; and difficulty in concentrating.

Eight Floyd students are currently enrolled in the Knott program, which has proven able to lift dyslexic children's reading levels by an average of one year each semester. Mrs. Latta told the board. If as many as 20 students sign up, a program will be started in this county, she said.

Floyd County Reading Research is a private, non-profit organization staffed by trained volunteers—primarily, parents of the children being tutored. Interested parents are encouraged to attend the April 12 meeting or call Mrs. Latta at 886-6100 for information.

For some 40 years I wanted to meet and talk with Rufus Reed, but I never got around to it. Just as I long intended to make pilgrimage to Pippa Passes and meet Alice Lloyd, and never did.

Yet I, somehow, have a feeling that I knew them well.

Rufus Reed was little known outside Martin county and a few surrounding areas, but he touched many of us. He spent his long life (88 years) in a love affair with Nature and devoted much of his time to taking the rest of us to his magic land.

He was not a great writer but through his writings, both prose and verse, he expressed a oneness with creation and a love for everything living that moved many of us outside our prosaic selves.

He wrote for this and other newspapers his column, "Nature Trails," without thought of compensation. And he never stopped till only a few weeks before the end. For years his column came, neatly typed. Then, as his eyesight failed, he sent us handwritten "copy," and he kept it up, although his dimming vision made it difficult for him to make his script legible and keep it on line.

Several months ago he wrote me: "My eyes are so bad I can't read any more. So stop sending the paper. Save it for somebody else."

We continued to send the paper. And now I send flowers, too—flowers that should have been sent long ago.

OOPS!

This in the mail:

I noted with interest the picture of the seagulls which appeared in your paper last week. They were splendid specimens of wildlife, truly magnificent birds.

I wondered why so many of them were there together. Then it dawned on me... a truth known by all: "One good tern deserves another."

Washington, D.C. gets more snow than Antarctica, says the National Wildlife Federation's Ranger Rick magazine. Antarctica's average annual snowfall is only five inches. But because of the area's frigid temperature, the snow doesn't melt. Instead, it piles on top of the previous year's snow, forming a thick ice cap.

Investigation Of Job Corps Center Here Said Under Way

U.S. Labor Department officials and representatives of the Singer Corporation, which operates the Prestonsburg Job Corps Center under contract with the Labor Department, were said this week to be investigating allegations that discipline at the facility is in disarray. The allegations were made anonymously by a staff member in letters sent to various federal, state and city officials. The staff member said he or she is prepared to testify about alleged abuses at the facility but wishes to remain unidentified in the meantime because of Singer's "callous attitude" toward employees.

"The students are more in control of the dorms than the staff... The program is a shambles," wrote the complainant, who added, "I am afraid that a major incident will occur...and someone will be seriously injured."

Listed by name are at least eight staff members, who are variously accused of using drugs and selling them to students, sleeping on duty, physically abusing students or having sex with them.

One staff member is accused of warning some students he would "put out a contract" to have them beaten by other students.

Drug traffic is allegedly common among corps members, who are also said to be well armed and increasingly restive. Many students are on the streets when they should be in class, a staff member was recently assaulted by a student, and a baker's truck was recently looted when it made a delivery, the complainant alleges.

Among those named in 25 charges listed on two closely-typed pages are the following:

—a security officer accused of consuming brandy and valium at the center, selling valium and "speed" to a student, dragging students along hallways by the legs or neck, and frequently sleeping on duty;

—three resident advisors said to smoke and/or sell marijuana at the facility; and —three female counselors said to have "supplied dope" and/or had sex with center students. Two staff members allegedly became pregnant by corps members.

In the letter, the complainant accuses Singer of being unwilling or unable to manage the facility and says the man the firm sent from New York as director "is worse than the local one he replaced." Gerald Torrey was named to replace Thomas Hummer as center director last December. Torrey did not answer a reporter's call this week.

John C.C. Mayo...

As Capitalists Go, A Decent Man

By RON MARSTIN

John C.C. Mayo: Cumberland Capitalist, by Carolyn Clay Turner and Carolyn Hay Traum, Pikeville College Press, 165 pp., including appendices. $13.95.

For some, any kind words for John C.C. Mayo (1864-1914) will sound as convincing as an apology for Genghis Khan, but what Carolyn Clay Turner and Carolyn Hay Traum have given us is a credibly sympathetic portrait of one of eastern Kentucky's best-known and most controversial entrepreneurs.

It comes from the Pikeville College Press just as the state legislature has taken belated action to curb the worst effects of the coal lease Mayo made infamous—the broad form, or Mayo, deed.

Turner, who lives in Paintsville, is professor of humanities at Prestonsburg Community College. Traum is librarian at the Floyd county library. They acknowledge their subject has a mean reputation, obviously feel he has had a bad press, and are concerned to set the record straight.

Theirs is a careful piece of work, thoroughly researched, its judgments restrained. The authors have pored over Mayo's ledgers and notebooks. They have gleaned what they could from school and church records in Johnson, Floyd and Pike counties and from local newspapers, especially the Big Sandy News (Louisia) and the Paintsville Herald. And they have consulted local historians like the late Henry P. (Buck) Scalf.

At least as Turner and Traum tell it, Mayo's life is not always the most exciting tale—and the reader may nod occasionally as they chronicle the many mergers, divestitures and stock transfers by which he managed his rapidly growing fortune. But they demonstrate if nothing else that Mayo worked hard for what he got. In a surprisingly short career—he was only 50 when he died—he helped put together at least 76 companies, and this at a time when roads and railroads were practically nonexistent.

Further, the authors contend, Mayo was interested in much more than making bags of money. This was no absentee landlord, gobbling up Appalachia's mineral wealth without a care for the people who had lived here for generations. This was a native son, proud of his people, confident that they could take their place among the cultured, the prosperous and the powerful, and ready to show them the way.

If he had had his way—and if he had had more time—Paintsville might have been a major industrial and cultural center. Mayo pushed for a decent transportation system in this area, dreamed of a fine college, promoted the church, and early saw the value of modern amenities like electricity. He was a force to be reckoned with on the state and even national political scene—even being mentioned as a possible cabinet appointee under Woodrow Wilson—and a tireless advocate for eastern Kentucky.

donated—in cash or in kind—locally. Little progress was made until February, when Gerald G. Sublett, operations director for an organization called the Christian Appalachian Project (CAP), offered to let the group use for three months a house CAP would rent in Dwale.

The offer was snapped up, a director was recruited, furniture was donated and members of the Prestonsburg Kiwanis moved it in.

Then Sublett suddenly dropped from the picture and Father Ralph Beiting, Catholic pastor here and director of CAP, repudiated the deal Sublett had made.

Without a commitment of local funds—Sublett had said CAP would put up $600 a month to pay rent and utilities on the Dwale house through June—the state backed down. Once again, hopes for a refuge here for abused women and their children evaporated.

Collapse of the plans for a shelter have left some feeling bitter toward CAP—an organization founded by Beiting in Lancaster, where he was once pastor, to raise money for charitable causes—including some who recalled that a state-funded program to assist the elderly here collapsed under similar circumstances 15 months ago.

In late 1982, the Big Sandy Area Development District was awarded a $5500 grant to furnish an advocate for elderly nursing home patients under the Human Resources Cabinet's Long Term Care Ombudsman Program. A 55-year-old CAP worker, Elisa De Vos, was named to fill the position. A week after the grant was awarded and days before the program was due to begin, Beiting fired De Vos and funds for the elderly program were withdrawn.)

On March 9, the day before SAFE was to move into the Dwale house, CAP coordinator Mike Sanders warned the group that Sublett had acted without authority and had been fired as a result. CAP would not feel obligated by any commitments Sublett had made, Sanders said.

The shelter group moved into the house anyway, anticipating a resolution of the problem at a meeting with CAP officials on March 12. But Beiting, rejecting the group's argument that CAP had a moral obligation to stand by Sublett's promises, refused to back the project.

Beiting said this week he was sorry to see the project fail but that CAP funds had already been budgeted through the end of the fiscal year and that the agen-

Some of his dreams came to nothing—Paintsville never rose to become a hub of industry or culture; the church he built was allowed to decay; his Sandy Valley Seminary failed, after a brief resurrection as the John C.C. Mayo College. And some of his projects seemed somewhat frivolous to begin with. What was the construction of the Mayo Mansion—now the home of Our Lady of the Mountains school—but an exercise in vanity? But, as the book's sub-title suggests, Mayo will have to be judged finally on his record as a capitalist.

This book will not settle the argument between people like Harry Caudill—who paints a picture of Mayo as a con artist, sweet-talking illiterate farmers out of their birthright—and those, like the authors, who see Mayo as an essentially decent man, knowledgeable about the mineral wealth under the mountains and adventurous enough to exploit it—for his own gain, certainly, but also for the benefit of this underdeveloped area. But if Mayo is going to share the opprobrium of the robber barons, Turner and Traum would have him share the credit, too.

If he was eager to reap profits, they argue, he was also willing to take chances. If he fashioned a lease agreement that was highly favorable to the mineral buyer, that was what it took to interest moneyed people in the development of eastern Kentucky. If he paid only a dollar an acre for the property he bought, it was a lot more than a lot of other speculators paid and title to much of the land was in dispute. If the human cost of exploiting Appalachian coal turned out to be heavier than Mayo anticipated, he was not alone in failing to question the late-19th-century faith in the benefits of industrialization.

In any case, progress turned out to be a mixed bag. Not only eastern Kentucky but much of the world has been shaped by the industrial revolution and the uses to which capitalists have put it. There has to be a better way, no doubt, to create a fair and prosperous society. But it is at least questionable whether anyone has invented it and at least pardonable that Mayo did not.

The flavor of the whole book is suggested by its final paragraph. If John Caldwell Calhoun Mayo is remembered at all, Turner and Traum lament, "he is mainly associated with the abuse of the mountaineers by coal companies which took place many years after his death and which would have been unthinkable to a man who spent his life in the attempt to improve their lot."

One cannot deny, they argue—quoting from a publication put out in 1972 to mark the Pike county sesquicentennial—that "his dreams and visions and determination certainly brought prosperity to Pike and Letcher Counties and all Big Sandy."

(John C.C. Mayo retails at the Pikeville College bookstore for $13.95, according to the manager there. In this county, copies are available at the Bath and Linen Closet, C. and R. Office Supply, the Highlands Hospital Gift Shop, and Jenny Wiley State Park.)

cy board could not reasonably be held responsible for commitments Sublett made without its knowledge. He said he would welcome another proposal by SAFE in June, when CAP might be able to make a more substantial commitment to the shelter. "We think it is an absolutely good program and very needed," he said.

Although CAP operates a spouse abuse shelter in Somerset, Beiting denied suggestions that the agency was itself intent on operating a shelter here. "We have no problems with the (SAFE) group at all," he said. "We would be tickled to death to help them."

In an apparent reference to state education officials, board member James A. Duff said, "I think they're carrying it too far." Duff also suggested that the rules on extracurricular activities were being applied more rigorously in Floyd than in other school districts.

Following the recommendation of a panel which surveyed the school district last year, the board voted to recognize top academic achievers in the county. Superintendent E.P. Grigsby, Jr. proposed the selection each year of an "all-county academic team" comparable to the existing practice of selecting teams of top basketball and football players.

The board will notify all non-tenured teachers except math, science and special education teachers that they may not be rehired next year—an annual notice designed to protect the board's legal right to lay off teachers in case of funding cuts or other budgetary restraints.

By their being excepted, math, science and special education teachers are guaranteed employment here next year. Teachers in those categories are in demand and, without a guaranteed job here, might be recruited more easily by other school systems, various board members explained.

The week of April 9 was set aside by board proclamation to honor the Martin Junior Pro girls' basketball team, recent winners of a national championship.

Hired were: Marlene Little, hearing impaired teacher; Phillip Slone and Trena Hensley, emergency substitute teachers; Billie Jo Stegall and Devert Owens, substitute bus drivers; and Troy Jarrell, janitor.

Two Floyd Juniors Named For 1984 Scholars Program

Governor Martha Layne Collins has announced the names of outstanding Kentucky high school juniors chosen to attend the 1984 Governor's Scholars Program.

Floyd county will be represented in the Governor's Scholars Program by two Prestonsburg High School juniors, Randall Lawson, II, and Robert D. Williams.

The five-week special enrichment program will be held on two college campuses this summer—Eastern Kentucky University from June 30 to August 2, and at Centre College from July 1 to August 3. The program, held last year for the first time, offers a broad range of courses, speakers and activities for up to 600 students selected in competition from Kentucky's public and private high schools.

Students attend free of charge, with funds for the program provided through a partnership of government, business and education.

"I am very pleased by the quality of the students who will attend the greatly expanded Governor's Scholars Program this year," Governor Collins said. "We increased the number of students in the program from 250 in 1983 to 600 this year and we still had to turn away qualified students who applied to attend this exceptional program."

Students selected to be Scholars will come from 118 of Kentucky's 120 counties this year. To qualify for acceptance, each student must score in the top 10 percentiles of last year's statewide Comprehensive Test of Basic Skills (CTBS), be nominated by two teachers who rank them very high on academic and intellectual achievement, as well as such qualities as breadth of interest, originality, creativity, independence, leadership, motivation and attitudes towards other students. Each student is also evaluated on an original essay on the program's theme for 1984, "High Tech and People: Kentucky in the Information Age."

Auditions Slated This Week-End

"Last year, 40 of our company lived within 150 miles of the theatre," said Jenny Wiley Theatre Managing Director Keith Stevens. "We hope to increase that number through our expanded local auditions this weekend."

For the first time in its 20-year history, the Jenny Wiley Theatre will hold auditions in Louisville. On Saturday, April 14, auditions will begin at noon at the Youth Performing Arts School, 1517 S. Second Street, Louisville.

The annual Prestonsburg auditions will be held, beginning at 1 p.m. Sunday, April 15, in the Pike Auditorium on the campus of Prestonsburg Community College.

Actors and musicians are needed for the 1984 season, which includes Fiddler On The Roof, Joseph And The Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat, and the repeat of 1983's smash hit, Annie.

Auditionees should prepare a 30-second monologue and one song. An accompanist will be provided. Musicians should prepare one piece and expect to sight-read. All auditionees should bring a current resume and photo, if available.

In addition to "people auditions," there will be dog auditions for the roles of Sandy and "the small dog" in Annie. The dog auditions will be held from 12:30 to 1 p.m. on Sunday in the parking lot of Prestonsburg Community College. The dogs should be well-behaved and good with children. Dogs auditioning for Sandy should resemble the dog in the movie Annie.

Like last year, many young people are needed for the cast of Annie, specifically from the Prestonsburg auditions," said Stevens. "However, we encourage performers from all age groups."

For more information about the Jenny Wiley Theatre and the auditions this weekend in Louisville and Prestonsburg, call the Theatre at 886-9274.

Bike-a-Thon To Help Fight Cystic Fibrosis

Each year more people are finding that they can bike their way to a healthier life.

Here, in Prestonsburg, bikers also can bike their way to help support a healthier life for the children and young adults who suffer from the number one genetic killer of young people in the United States—Cystic Fibrosis.

Cystic Fibrosis is an incurable lung-damaging and digestive disease, according to the Kentucky/West Virginia Chapter of the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation, sponsor of the CF bike-a-thon set for May 19 at Jenny Wiley State Park.

"Only when people become parents of a CF child do they know that they are carriers of the CF gene," according to the Jaycee and Jaycee Women of Prestonsburg, chairpeople of the event. "The Foundation is funding research to find an effective carrier test and to find a control of Cystic Fibrosis," they explain.

Although there is yet no cure for Cystic Fibrosis, earlier diagnosis and more effective treatment now mean that about half of the children born today with CF can be expected to live past the age of 20. Once such children never lived to start school.

According to the Jaycee's, "Accurate early diagnosis is sometimes difficult because CF symptoms mimic other lung and digestive disorders such as chronic bronchitis, allergy and asthma."

The signs of CF include a salty taste of the skin, recurrent wheezing, persistent coughing with excessive mucus, pneumonia more than once, excessive appetite with poor weight gain, and enlargement of the fingertips. Additional signs include persistent, bulky diarrhea and nasal polyps.

"Every year of research added more than one year to the average life expectancy of a CF child during the past ten years," said the Jaycee's. "Funds from this event will help to insure continued research."

The Treaty of Paris—Britain recognized the independence of the United States. New boundaries were established. The United States was given the right to fish off Newfoundland and Nova Scotia. The Daughters of the American Revolution invite you to join them in the study of the history of the United States of America—our country, native born and naturalized citizens—we all are part of the making of this great nation.

April 15 Deadline For Crop Insurance

April 15 is the last day to apply for crop insurance for corn and grain sorghum in Floyd county, according to John Soper, district director for the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation (FCIC).

Crop insurance covers unavoidable loss of production resulting from adverse weather conditions, wildlife, earthquake, or fire.

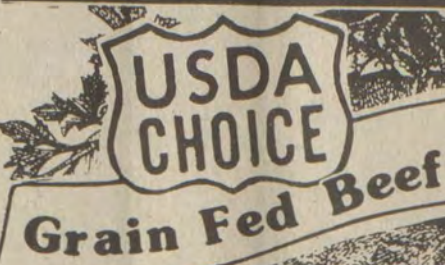

"Three coverage levels (50, 65, or 75 percent) are available for insurance protection. Additionally, FCIC offers three optional price elections for valuing production lost or damaged," says Soper. "To assist producers, the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation will cost-share up to 30 percent of the cost of carrying insurance. For more information about the program, producers should contact an authorized crop insurance agent."

To select an agent, producers should check the list of agents available at their county ASCS office. Applications should be submitted to the sales agent no later than April 15.

Pharmacy Footnotes

By HAROLD COOLEY

The digitalis group of drugs is probably the most effective and impressive set of cardiovascular agents in existence. It is the drug group most often used to strengthen the heart in failure, that is, when either one or both sides are not pumping hard enough. It is historically interesting to note that an ancient Chinese remedy, consisting of dried toad skin, was probably an effective ancient treatment for a failing heart because it contained a digitalis like chemical. In Western medicine, digitalis was used by ancient Welsh physicians in an extract of foxglove, a common flower. The "digit" part of digitalis means "finger" in Latin.

All prescription items, over the counter remedies, and a wide array of convalescent aids are available at COOLEY APOTHECARY. Join your many friends and neighbors who already are familiar with us. We are located at No. 2 Town Center Bldg., 886-8106. Open: Mon.-Fri. 9-5:30, Sat. 9-4.

HANDY HINT:

The primary action of digitalis is to increase the strength of each heartbeat.

A Tribute

I would like to take this opportunity to pay tribute to two very special people in my life who have given their lives through their careers in music: Mrs. Kathryn Frazier and Mrs. Carlos Haywood.

They have taught young children and young adults throughout their education.

Being a student of theirs, I have seen the high standards and values that they have set for their ensembles, choruses, and the organization of their programs.

I have found that in fulfilling my career in piano I have encountered great satisfaction in phrasing interpretation and practical performance as these two ladies have demonstrated throughout the years.

Now that they have temporarily been unable to participate in the First United Methodist Church services, we have all learned the preparation and responsibility that is a necessity.

Thank you, "Miss Kathryn" and "Miss Carlos" for the loving encouragement that you two have given to all.

Seventh District Meet Scheduled At Armory Here

Local Democrats will be busy with meetings the next three weekends, selecting delegates this Saturday for the party's national convention and choosing county officers on the two weekends following.

Six delegates for the national convention will be selected to represent the Seventh Congressional District in a meeting to be held in the National Guard Armory on Saturday, beginning at 2 p.m. (The venue was changed this week from Prestonsburg High School, which was earlier announced as the meeting site.)

Although all registered Democrats can attend this meeting, which will be chaired by Pike Judge-Executive Paul Patton, those voting will be delegates selected two weeks ago at caucuses held in the Seventh District's 23 counties. They will select six delegates, who will either be pledged to one of the three Democratic presidential candidates or will go to the national convention uncommitted.

In all, Kentucky will send 63 delegates to San Francisco, 36 selected by the seven congressional district conventions Saturday and the remaining 27 to be chosen by the Democratic State Central Executive Committee on June 11.

On April 21, the attention of Democrats will be focussed on the selection of local party officials. Meetings will be held in all Floyd precincts that day to elect precinct committee members. A week later, on April 28, precinct committee members will gather at the courthouse here for the county convention.

The county convention, which is held every four years, elects delegates to the party's state convention, scheduled for June, and also chooses a county executive committee. The executive committee chooses its chairman, a position expected to be warmly contested this year.

IN APPRECIATION

We would like to take this opportunity to thank everyone who showed their sympathy and concern during the loss of our loved one, Danny Ray Cecil. Special thanks to the staff of the Paul B. Hall Medical Center, Floyd Funeral Home, and Elders Paul Joseph, Herman Joseph and Bobby Baldrige. Our prayers are with you.

"The Strength of a Nation Lies in the Homes of Its People."

These words, attributed to Abraham Lincoln, still confirm a basic American freedom — the right to own, use and transfer property.

REALTORS®, real estate professionals who are members of the NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS®, invite you to observe Private Property Week, April 8-14. This weeklong observance reaffirms the rights that come with owning property. For most of us this means a home of our own.

Home ownership ensures a stronger democracy because it disperses decision-making to the individual household. Homeowners tend to put down roots, to become involved in local government processes and to care about what takes place in their community and neighborhood.

The rights that attend home ownership are precious and must never be taken for granted. Rather, they must be protected and preserved for future generations.

Please join us in this year's observance of Private Property Week.

Birthplace of Life?

It's "plausible" the Arctic may have been the birthplace of life, says National Wildlife magazine. New fossil evidence indicating a high abundance of carbon dioxide in the Arctic atmosphere 50 to 100 million years ago means the region was probably much warmer then than today. The Arctic's long summer daylight hours and the area's large land mass would also have made the Arctic suitable to evolve horses, redwoods, even alligators.

Living up to its name, the "pack rat," the white-throated wood rat has been known to cart off an array of objects to adorn his desert home—including eyeglasses, false teeth, even mousetraps—says the National Wildlife Federation's Ranger Rick magazine.

JUDGE'S PROCLAMATION

Because Americans enjoy more political and economic freedom than any other people on earth, this great nation is known the world over as the land of liberty.

Of all the rights we have, one of the most precious is the right of each citizen to own, use or transfer real property as he or she sees fit, so long as the rights of others are not infringed upon.

Above all, we must guard against taking for granted the rights that come with home ownership. Owning one's home and preserving these rights fosters democracy because it disperses individual decision making that collectively affects the well-being of our community. This ownership requires that people save not only for their own homes; it encourages savings in other sectors of the economy, creating growth and contributing to a higher quality of life.

Realtors in Floyd County, as members of the BIG SANDY BOARD OF REALTORS and the NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS, are setting aside a week to celebrate our constitutional freedom to own real property. Further, the National Association of Realtors asks all citizens in our community to join in reaffirming this basic freedom. Therefore, I, John M. Stumbo, Judge of Floyd County do hereby proclaim April 8-14 to be Private Property Week. I ask all residents of Floyd County to join with the BIG SANDY BOARD OF REALTORS and its members in setting aside this period to remind ourselves that we are a free people endowed with the right to own real property, and given the responsibility to protect that right.

Pike, Ashland Banking Firms Study Merger

A letter of intent to combine two Eastern Kentucky banking corporations with assets totalling $475,000,000 has been signed, it was announced at Pikeville Tuesday by presidents of the two institutions.

Involved in the proposed merger are the Pikeville National Corp., parent firm of the Pikeville National Bank & Trust Co., and First Ashland Corp., which has the same relationship to the First Bank and Trust Co., of Ashland.

Burlin Coleman, president of the Pikeville National Corp. and of Pikeville National Bank & Trust, announced at the same time that Pikeville National Corp. also plans the acquisition of the First Guaranty Bank at Martin which has above $75 million. Addition of First Guaranty to the single holding corporation resulting from the merger would bring the assets of the combine to more than $550 million.

(First Guaranty was purchased some months ago by a group of individuals headed by Mr. Coleman.)

No plans for Pikeville National Bank & Trust's property acquired a few months ago on Lake Drive here were disclosed. The property was recently cleared of buildings but further development plans have not been announced.

No terms for the Pikeville-Ashland merger were announced other than the combination would be accomplished by a payment in cash and Pikeville National Corporation stock based on the book value of both corporations at the time of closing. The offer is subject to negotiation by the management of both corporations of a more definitive merger agreement, which must be approved by directors and stockholders of both corporations. Pikeville National Corporation will be the surviving corporation. The agreement will also be subject to approval of Kentucky and federal bank regulatory agencies.

Mr. Coleman and G.B. Johnson, chairman of the board of First Ashland Corp., said this is the first step in a strategic plan to establish a strong regional bank holding corporation that would be large enough and have sufficient capital to serve the growing needs of business and industry as well as the people in Eastern Kentucky. Coleman also said that management expects to change the identity of the parent corporation to one (Pikeville National) that will be more reflective of the area that the corporation will serve.

Both Coleman and Johnson expressed confidence in the future of Eastern Kentucky and the success of the combined corporation. The combination would allow, they pointed out, Pikeville National Corp. to diversify its heavy reliance on the coal industry by participation in a more industrialized economy and would also allow First Ashland Corp. to participate in the fast-growing energy field.

Coleman said the merger, if it becomes final, will double the leading limit now existing and would enable the institution to meet the financial needs of the coal industry.

The first graduation class of a new pilot demonstration program, entitled "Preventacare," held graduation ceremonies at Mayo State Vocational Technical School recently.

The training program began December 12, stressing homemaking skills, shopping and meal preparation, personal care, basic first aid, dealing with terminally ill, cardiopulmonary resuscitation, child care, etc.

Coordinating the training program from the state level was Sara Hellard. The local coordinator was Margarett Tackett, head of the Nursing Department, Mayo State Vocational Technical School. The instructor was Clara Alice Tackett.

Two Preventacare homemaker-home health aides were given special awards at graduation. Nancy Jude received the highest academic performance award and Joyce Brown received the perfect attendance award.

Thirteen aides successfully completed the training program representing the Big Sandy five-county area (Johnson, Martin, Magoffin, Floyd and Pike counties). Eleven aides are presently employed by Sandy Valley Senior Citizens, Inc.

The emphasis of the program is to help elderly and disabled individuals of all ages who are at the risk of being institutionalized. The goal is to maintain these individuals in their own homes as long as possible.

Special guests at the graduation included: Marge Brock, director, Division for Aging Services; Richard M. Fry, Preventacare Project director, both of Frankfort; and from the Big Sandy Area Development District, Joseph L. McCauley, executive director, and Phyllis Stanley, director of the Area Agency on Aging.

Informed Parents Can Limit Abuse

The problem of drug abuse in the United States is a national crisis, and the problem is growing. There are many parents, however, who do not educate themselves about drug abuse and deny it could ever be a problem for themselves or for their children. Young people often know more about drugs than their parents and teachers, and the teenager who does not know where he or she can find illegal drugs, especially marijuana, is a rarity.

Millions of young people experiment with drugs and most will not become dependent upon them. Even with stronger drugs, after their curiosity is satisfied or after a frightening experience, most will stop. The danger of experimenting is that the user can lose control and the drug becomes a way of life.

One of the first steps for parents who want to help their children avoid drug abuse is to stop denying that there could be a problem. Parents need to begin communicating openly with their children and be interested and involved in their activities. This includes talking frankly and listening to children when they speak.

Trying to learn what children are doing and who their friends are is an important step in getting to know the problems and helping to find healthy solutions. With his, parents should teach their children that stress of daily life normally can be handled without drugs.

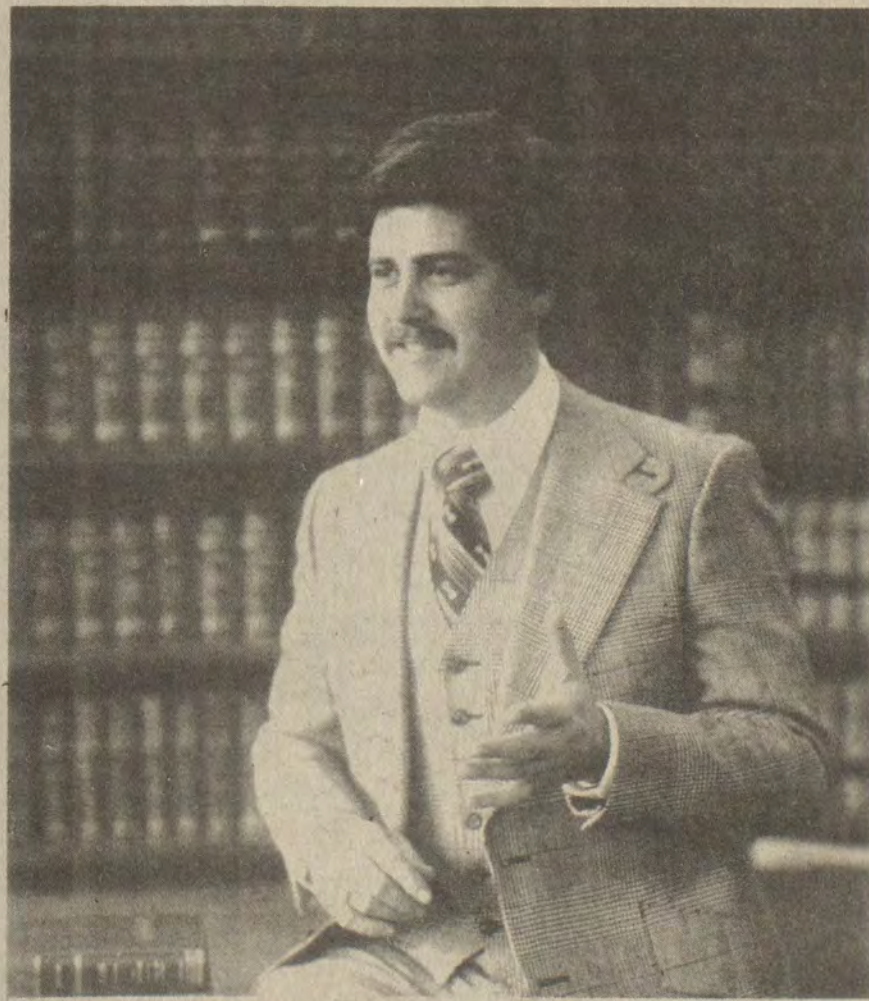

Parents can set an example for their children by not abusing alcohol or drugs themselves. Children can not be expected to listen to drug warnings if they see their parents abusing alcohol, medications, and other drugs. Parents should keep track of medicinal drugs in their home and after taking the prescription as directed, destroy all the leftovers.

One of the most important things parents can do to help their children avoid drug abuse is to educate themselves and know the facts about drugs. Scare tactics based on half-truths will be ignored and challenged by youth who know from experience about drugs.

The next in this series of articles will begin covering the mental and physical aspects of specific commonly misused drugs: cocaine, marijuana, amphetamines, barbiturates, methaqualone, tranquilizers, heroin, LSD, PCP, and alcohol. Additional information available through these community resources: Mountain Comprehensive Care Center, 886-8572; Kentucky War on Drugs Community group, which is open to anyone concerned about drug abuse among youth and meets the first and third Mondays at 7:30 p.m. at the Floyd county library, 886-2374; and local Alcoholics Anonymous and Al-Anon programs, 886-2893.

To Speak Sunday At Maytown Church

Dickie Allen will speak in the Maytown First Baptist Church Sunday, April 15, during the morning worship service, which begins at 11 o'clock. The public is invited to hear him and Pastor Bob Varney.

With his wife, the former Yvonne Little, and two daughters, Amy and Beckie, Mr. Allen resides in Wheelwright. He is the son of Mrs. Ora Mae Allen, of Martin, and Bill Allen, of Allen.

Floyd countians recall that Mr. Allen was in a complete coma many weeks following a fall Jan. 18, 1981, when performing a community service. He was removing lights and decorations on the Wheelwright community Christmas tree, perched atop a high ladder from which he fell, his head hitting the concrete walk below. At that time he was manager of the Wheelwright Branch of the Bank Josephine. Churches of various faiths and hundreds of people throughout this section were praying for his recovery, which remains incomplete but continues to improve. Mr. Allen attributes his progress and recovery to the Lord. He now has invitations to speak in several churches.

FLOYD COUNTY HEALTH NEWS

By JANE BOND
Health Educator

Cervical cancer kills approximately 11,000 women each year. Yet this is one of the most curable of all cancers if the disease is detected and treatment begun in the early stages.

There is a simple painless test to determine if cervical cancer is present. This is the pap test. It takes only a few moments of a woman's time and it could save her life.

The Floyd County Health Department is having pap clinics today (Wednesday) and Wednesday, April 18, from 8:30 a.m. till 2 p.m. The clinics are free services of the health department and are open to women of all ages. Women age 45 and over are especially urged to take advantage of these clinics, since this is the high-risk age for cervical cancer.

A glaucoma screening clinic will be held at the health department Monday, April 16. This also is a free service and is open to persons of all ages, persons age 40 and over are especially urged to be screened regularly, since this is the high-risk age for glaucoma.

Pike Newspaperwoman Publishes 4th Book

Mrs. Alice J. Kinder, the "Mountain Roots" columnist of the Appalachian News-Express in Pikeville, has written a fourth book on life in the Kentucky hills during the Depression of the 1930s. Tynedale House Publishers of Wheaton, Ill. published the book recently.

Mrs. Kinder's earlier books are "Mama's Kitchen Window," "Papa's Neighbors" and "Old-Fashioned Mountain Mothers."

The new book, "Mama's Pathway to Heaven," gives nostalgic glimpses of homelife in the Kentucky hills and the mother whose love and faith guided her family. Like those about her, Mama possessed feet of clay; they were the only feet she owned to step toward heaven. With such feet she failed God at times. Yet, the book makes clear, the communication line between her Maker and her inner self was always clear.

"Mama's Pathway to Heaven" ($3.50 postpaid) may be obtained from Mrs. Alice J. Kinder, Route 6, Box 666, Pikeville, Ky. 41501. Two copies are $6 (postage included).

THE MATTER OF BENEFITS

In a recent editorial the Maysville Independent disagrees with the opinion of The Times as expressed several weeks ago to the effect that the May flood in this county carried with it certain benefits.

The editorial appearing in The Independent follows:

BENEFITS OF A FLOOD

A newspaper exchange says that the spring flood was a benefit to the Mountains, based on the argument that financial losses were mitigated by the experience which has been gained in fighting disease. Nothing is said about the scores of lives that were lost, as if these could be mitigated in sums of money. We cannot see where the mountain section was in any way benefitted by the flood other than a warning was given that disaster may occur there as elsewhere and that the citizens there should know they are not immune from the effects of the maddened elements any more than citizens of other communities.

That an epidemic was prevented after the waters had gone down is nothing new. We had the same experience in this valley, on a far greater scale, as the floods were followed by fevers and other diseases. These floods did not benefit us for we suffered great loss, not irreparable because we, just as the mountain people are now doing, rebuilt our homes and restored the losses as best we could. And we know that floods will come and we expect them to come and will meet them with all the courage that we have. We think the greatest benefit to the mountain people is the awakening of them to the fact that although they occupy highlands, they, too, may be visited by raging winds and waters. The storm of last spring was the first experience, a terrible one indeed, but out of which they will come with their magnificent courage and energy better fitted to cope with the ones in the future.

However, in the passing of bouquets, some credit for combatting disease should be given to the country doctor. There is too much effort being displayed to place all the halo around the heads of organizations which brought temporary relief. This is selfish. The country doctor is he who remained and combatted the diseases following the misfortune and he is still on the job. The temporary aid was fine and was appreciated.

It would appear that the Independent has misunderstood the meaning of The Times editorial. It was not our contention that loss of human life could be mitigated by dollars. It was at that time, and is now, our belief that the disaster brought to Floyd county farmers, in particular, an awakening from what may be called a lethargic condition in that way they were asleep on their arms, following in the same ruts worn deep by their ancestors, with no variety of crops and little study of methods for meeting such dire contingencies.

As for the services rendered by the health workers, whether native or imported, they were great, and we are of the belief that the teachings which they have imparted citizens of this county will save in future years hundreds of lives which, under the conditions of other years, would have been lost.

FRIDAY

How many millions of Americans remember what Saturday of this week means to them, their country and the world? How many would forget?

Friday is Armistice Day. On that day official commemoration at least is made of the date upon which the doors of the greatest charnel house of all time were closed. This Saturday marks the tenth anniversary of a peace which was the blessed silver lining revealed when the storm clouds of years of the world's greatest war rolled away.

This day is an annual reminder to us of all those thousands who made the supreme sacrifice before they were granted the reward of peace and life among their own people.

Its celebration should be that springing from the joy of seeing the boys who survived come marching home.

The true significance of this day is lost to millions. It cannot supplant time-honored Thanksgiving with its spirit of gratitude to a bounteous Giver of all good gifts or Christmas with its deep origin in the Christ-child, the symbol of Peace and Goodwill. But it should be, with us, a modified composite of these twain—a day of thanksgiving for peace and a day of peace growing out of the thankfulness of the heart.

AN INQUIRY

Whither passed the Kentucky Chamber of Commerce? Not to the limbo of forgotten things, we sincerely trust.

Its purpose, as claimed by those originating it, was a worthy one—to advertise all Kentucky. Its program was a wide one; its work, if not colossal, certainly no sinecure. Kentucky needs its advantages presented to other sections of the country.

The Times entertained the notion that the organization would drop Eastern Kentucky from this advertising program, we should not confess our ignorance of the present status of the Kentucky Chamber of Commerce and inquire about it. But we are hoping that something of this sort may be done for Kentucky—the Mountains, the Blue Grass, the Pennyryle, and the Purchase; wherefore, we rise to inquire after the organization's welfare.

BIG SANDY VALLEY FOR SAMPSON, REPORTS SHOW

Sampson carried Johnson county by approximately 2,500 votes, unofficial and incomplete returns show. Twenty precincts of 27 have officially reported and Sampson has a lead of 2,067.

Circuit Judge J. F. Bailey carried Johnson by a good majority, but the exact vote in this race was not ascertained. Martin county also gave Bailey a big majority.

Andy Baldridge for Representative has carried both counties, but by small majorities.

Winfrey Meek, Democratic candidate for Circuit Court Clerk, is a winner in the election by a small majority.

MAGOFFIN

Sampson carried Magoffin county by a majority exceeding 1,500, it is reported. The Republican Circuit Court Clerk, Bert Allen, was elected by about 400 majority. It is reported that the county gave Chester A. Bach for Circuit Judge a small majority and that he was elected in the district by about 700 majority over J. Brack Howard.

PIKE COUNTY

Pike county will give Sampson and the entire Republican ticket a majority of 3,000. Returns received Wednesday morning indicated a majority of not less than 3,000 for the Republicans. Circuit Judge Monroe Fields is elected by a big majority in both Pike and Letcher counties which compose his district. Commonwealth Attorney Stump was re-elected for six years and his majority is large.

MARTIN COUNTY

Reports indicate that Martin county has voted almost solid for Sampson. Judge J. F. Bailey and Andy Baldridge carried the county, it is reported, by substantial majorities.

DATE SET FOR STATE DINNER

Mammoth Cave Park Association Drive Under Way

Friday, November 18, is the date set for the state dinner of the Mammoth Cave National Park Association. This event, which will be held in the auditorium of the Seelbach Hotel, Louisville, will bring together approximately 500 of the outstanding leaders of Kentucky who will plan the drive for $2,500,000 needed to purchase the Mammoth Cave area and present it to the Federal Government as a National Park. The dinner is expected to prove one of the most interesting gatherings ever held in Kentucky. It will assemble an enthusiastic group of Kentuckians who are all awake to the tremendous advantages of this movement.

Speakers will include men of national prominence. All of the governors of the states adjoining Kentucky are being invited to attend, and there will be other notables present who recognize the value of the proposed Mammoth Cave National Park, not only to Kentucky, but to the entire Eastern and Middle Western portions of the United States. Every section of the state will be represented in attendants. Activities of organization for the drive, which is to raise the funds through public contribution, are going forward rapidly under the supervision of National Chairman Maurice H. Thacher and State Chairman Tom Wallace. The state has been divided into ten regions, and additional regional chairmen and county chairmen have been named. Attorney Jesse Morgan of Hazard has been selected chairman of the Hazard region, and Marc Stuart, president of the National Deposit Bank of Owensboro has accepted the post of chairman of the Owensboro Region.

In the Elizabethtown Region, Judge Lucian Durham of Greensburg has been made chairman of Green county, and J. H. Pickett, of Campbellsville chairman of Taylor county, with R. Walker Wilson as vice chairman. In the Owensboro region, Edwin W. Smith secretary of the Owensboro Chamber of Commerce, has been made chairman of the regional speakers and publicity committee. Dr. M. G. Buckner of Owensboro has been named chairman of Daviess county. W. A. Steele is city chairman at Owensboro. In the Bowling Green region the following chairmen have been named: Allen county, R. R. Pitchford, of Scottsville; Barren county, Paul Holman, of Glasgow; Simpson county, W. L. Matthews, Franklin; Warren county, J. Murray Hill, Bowling Green. In the Hazard region, T. L. Gabbard of Stanton has been named chairman of Powell county. Support for the national park cause is growing rapidly in all parts of Kentucky. Endorsements in its favor are numerous and fervid. The Mammoth Cave National Park Association is developing its campaign organization with the idea of leading in to a great concerted state-wide drive that will enlist the assistance of every man and woman in the state.

LAWRENCE TAKEN BY REPUBLICANS

Race For Commonwealth's Attorney Reported Tight

A sweeping Republican victory is seen in Lawrence county, with every Republican candidate leading his opponent, according to advices received by the Times Wednesday evening.

With 21 out of 25 precincts in the county reported, Flem D. Sampson held a majority of 792 votes over J. C. W. Beckham. The gubernatorial race there had a disastrous effect, also, upon local Democratic aspirants to office, it is said.

Tom Burchette, Democrat, of Ashland, was trailing in the Boyd-Lawrence judicial district his Republican opponent, E. Poe Harris, of Catlettsburg, by a scant 16 votes. W. S. Böge, present circuit court clerk in Lawrence, was re-elected over Bill Sparks, Democrat, by more than 500 votes.

M. E. Sparks, Democratic, was elected Representative from the Lawrence-Elliott district, having no opposition.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

THANATOPSIS PERPETUAL

There are many homes of sorrow in this city today. And because tragedy has been abroad. The demon of self-destruction has struck in numerous places, while unrestrained accident has played a grim role in causing heads to bow in grief.

Let no man think it cannot happen to his own family. We can only pray, and praying hope that we may be spared. Nobody expects a suicide close home or that the next automobile accident will strike his own heart with a chill.

But the sources of woe are multiplying in spite of all the warning and all the preaching that can be done.

It would be helpful to the bereaved if they could know that the more fortunate, for the time being at least, paused long enough to give a sympathetic thought to the tragedy-stricken members of the community.

And we dare say there is much more of this unspoken sympathy than most of us realize. There are, indeed, good people who actually pray for comfort for bereaved families with whom they have little personal acquaintance or none at all.

More of the same thing would help.

Death is literally passing by in sardonic review. The thanatopsis is perpetual. Modern ways are exacting a penalty.

So, when you read of a home that has trouble in it, yield a moment to sympathetic thought. And if you are of the prayer-worthy kind, lend a little prayer to the situation. It will help you, surely, and who knows it will not help the subjects of your sympathy and supplication.

NIGH-FORGOTTEN STORY OF CIVIL WAR DAYS RECOUNTED BY AGED FLOYD COUNTY MAN

the hammer was knocked by the hand at each shot.

The bodies of the three remained in the schoolhouse for three days, as their relatives were afraid to come after them. Wives of the three men, however, came soon as the news reached them and stayed, day and night, in the lonely little log building with no other living person present except William Huff, the narrator of this story, then a lad of sixteen years. After three days, some relatives of the deceased men came and buried them in a nearby hollow, all in one big grave.

Quillen, who lived on the head of Beaver Creek, must have had some idea of losing his life when he left home for the last time, for he asked a nearby neighbor named Little, who was a fiddler, to come to his grave and play a certain tune, in the event he was killed. Little came, and, after the three bodies were lowered into the grave, played that sad and beautiful tune, swaying his body to the rhythm of the music. Huff says now after all these years, "It was the sweetest music I have ever heard."

An hour or so before Halck killed him, John Layden Hall is said to have tried to bribe Halck to spare his life. "Halck," he said, "I'll give you a thousand dollars and two kegs of brandy hidden on the head of Beaver, if you will not kill me."

"I'll treat you right," was the cold reply.

Probably no one place has caused so much fear of "hants" to be instilled into the very fiber of our people, as the little schoolhouse where this tragedy was enacted. Kelly Franklin, who was considered a very truthful man, claimed that he saw the three men standing in front of the schoolhouse one evening as he passed by. Others claimed to have seen the men at different times, dressed as they were at the time of the killing.

The little schoolhouse has long since been demolished, but the fear of the ghostly figures of the three guerillas passes from generation to generation and bears no symptoms of early death.

Adus Yates Dies Here Saturday of Typhoid

Adus Yates, 18 years old, died Saturday evening here at the home of Mrs. Minerva Clifton after an illness of several weeks from typhoid. Death came after Mr. Yates had suffered a relapse from the disease.

The deceased moved to Prestonsburg about two years ago with his father, Will Yates, and has been employed by the ice company here for some time. He was well-known in Prestonsburg, and had many friends here.

He is survived by his widow, who is a daughter of James Hunt; his father, three sisters and five brothers: Mrs. Fanny Preston, of Paintsville; Mrs.

Rosa Hunt, Wheelwright; Miss Ora Yates, of Prestonsburg; Eliza Yates, of Wheelwright; Grady Yates, Prestonsburg; and Willie, Ivy and Rollie Yates, at home.

Funeral services were conducted Sunday afternoon by Rev. George Rose at the Pilgrim Holiness Church, and the body was taken to Abbott for burial Monday morning at 11 o'clock in the Hackworth cemetery. Rev. Rose and Rev. Malcolm Hubbard conducted the services at the grave.

E. P. Arnold directed the funeral and burial.

Dr. John Barbour attended the installation in Ashland Sunday of the Rev. S. S. Currey as pastor of the Presbyterian Church there.

New Budget Leaves Funds For Road Upkeep Lacking

Major maintenance of toll roads and resurfacing of other state highways appear to be the most critically underfunded programs in the transportation budget recently adopted by the Kentucky General Assembly, according to an analysis by Kentuckians for Better Transportation.

The new state budget provides no funds for major maintenance of the state's toll roads. State officials have testified that $50 million is needed over the next two years for major maintenance of the state's nine toll roads. Federal funds cannot be used for maintenance of these roads.

With only $29 million earmarked by the legislature for the state resurfacing program during the next two years, nearly 60 percent of resurfacing needs cited by the Transportation Cabinet will go unmet, the Louisville, based KBT claims. To put the system on a 15-year repaving cycle would require $70 million for the biennium.

"It was extremely unfortunate for Kentucky motorists that the Senate version of the budget was not adopted by the General Assembly," said KBT President Jack Fish. The Senate budget included the transfer to the Road Fund of nearly $47 million annually in severance tax revenue to retire resource recovery road bonds, as required by law.

"Failure to make the transfer," Fish said, "simply means that the Road Fund will be unable to meet essential services and the state's highway investment is in serious jeopardy."

Fish said the severe winter will make the problem of deteriorating roads more obvious to the public.

"Much has been said about what Kentucky needs to do to foster business and industrial expansion. One thing is sure," Fish observed, "we are not going to attract new industry if roads are crumbling. Having adequate roads has an immediate effect on the state's ability to attract industry. And every Kentuckian is directly affected every day by the conditions of the roads."

"Deteriorating roads will result in increased costs to the state's motorists through more wear on tires, suspension systems, and brakes and increased fuel consumption," Fish noted.

The recently approved budget provides $10 million annually for state construction projects (211 Account). This account is used for emergencies, non-federal aid projects, and for unanticipated expenditures such as industrial access roads to attract new industry. The account was funded at $28 million in FY '82 and $30 million in FY '83.

Fish said that the $10-million-annual funding level for the 211 Account is hardly an adequate set-aside for emergencies.

The new budget also cuts back the state's maintenance program by $5 million annually and reduces equipment replacement by two-thirds.

The budget allocates $5 million annually from the Road Fund to operate the state's new automated central vehicle registration system (AVIS). "The use of $5 million annually in highway user revenues for AVIS is unconstitutional," Fish said, "in that user revenues may not be used for non-highway or non-traffic enforcement purposes."

It seems only reasonable," Fish continued, "that AVIS should be funded from general revenues rather than highway user revenues since it will be used to tighten the collection of personal property taxes on vehicles, resulting in increased revenue for local school districts and the General Fund."

Under the new budget some 31 cents of every dollar going into the Road Fund will be required to meet debt service, says KBT. One-third of debt service is for resource recovery road bonds.

TV Nostalgia

By Marie landiorio

"60 Minutes" is considered the definitive version of a TV news magazine. Each telecast deals with three or more stories about any of a variety of issues, including documentaries on politics, government, personalities, sports and light features. "Point-Counterpoint," a debate between a liberal and a conservative on a current news issue, was another of the program's most popular features, but it has since been replaced with a commentator who delivers random amusing observations.

The show's trademark is a stopwatch seen periodically at the opening, between stories and at the end of the show as it ticks off the minutes left in the program.

"60 Minutes" began on an alternate-week schedule with "CBS News Hour" in 1968. It went prime time in 1975 when it became a hit, an unusual feat for any documentary program. By the 1979-1980 season, it had become the highest rated prime-time series on the air.

Question: Name the original pair who did "Point
Counterpoint."

Answer: James J. Kilpatrick and Nicholas Von Hoffman. (Von Hoffman was replaced by Shana Alexander in 1975.)

Michael Beck

UNDERCOVER CABBIE — Michael Beck, who was critically acclaimed in "Celebrity," plays a young New York policeman who goes undercover as a taxicab driver in "Street Heat," a one-hour NBC program now in production. Beck is up against a group of criminals who are selling handguns that backfire and kill whoever uses them. The show also stars Jerry Orbach and is being shot on some of New York City's meanest streets — from the meatpacking district to the waterfront.

THREE GENERATIONS — Maureen Stapleton, Stefanie Powers, and Melissa Gilbert play a recently widowed grandmother, a successful advertising executive daughter and a teenage granddaughter, respectively, on NBC's "Family Secrets," airing May 13 at 9:00 p.m. The movie deals with the relationship between the three women when Maggie Calloway (Miss Stapleton) sells the family home out-

This Is Library Week

In a proclamation signed by Governor Martha Layne Collins, Kentucky is joining other states in the celebration of National Library Week, April 8-11.

Many public, special and school libraries will be sponsoring local activities as a part of this celebration. The Kentucky Department for Libraries and Archives has planned a "proclamation ceremony" to be held in Frankfort at the Capitol. Also a number of Kentuckians interested in libraries will be traveling to Washington, April 10, for Legislative Day, which is sponsored by the American Library Association. They will meet with the Kentucky Congressional Delegation in an effort to gain support for favorable library legislation.

Private Property Week, April 8-14

Floyd County Judge-Executive John M. Stumbo signs a proclamation designating April 8-14 as Private Property week in Floyd county. Ron Lawson, president of the Big Sandy Board of Realtors, asks that all local citizens join with the Big Sandy Board in observing the rights of Americans to own real property.

Resources Officials Respond To Permitting Problems

Representatives of the Eastern Kentucky coal mines shut down for operating without required reclamation permits brought their concerns to Frankfort at a meeting in the Capitol recently. Representatives of the affected mines met with Gov. Martha Layne Collins, Natural Resources Secretary Charlotte Baldwin, Cabinet Secretary Larry Hayes and state Natural Resources enforcement officials.

Following the meeting, Gov. Collins pointed out that "communication is the key to solving problems like these. We in state government are charged with the responsibility of enforcing the laws of the Commonwealth, but we must also recognize our responsibility to communicate with the citizens who are affected by these laws who may well be trying to comply with existing regulations."

Secretary Baldwin sent a letter to the representatives of the Eastern Kentucky coal mines outlining steps which the Cabinet for Natural Resources will take to expedite the process by which the reclamation permits are issued. Upon application, the Office of Surface Mining will make available hydrologic technical data related to the location of each mine under consideration. With regard to mandatory water testing at the mine site, Baldwin held that the final portion of the water data could be collected while the mine was in operation.

Miss Scalf Is Winner In Essay Contest

The Big Sandy Board of Realtors announced this week the 1984 winners of its annual essay contest. Open to high school seniors only, this year's winner from Floyd county was Jennier Scalf, from Betsy Layne High School.

Winner from Pike county was Bonnie Mullins, Mullins High School, and from Johnson county, Raymond Float, of Johnson Central.

The grand prize-winning essay chosen from among the three county winners will be announced on May 1 at the board's monthly meeting.

The three county winners will each receive a $100 savings bond with the grand prize winner receiving an additional $100 savings bond and a plaque. Prizes will be awarded at the May 1 meeting to be held at May Lodge, Jenny Wiley State Park.

The grand prize winning essay will be sent to the Kentucky Association of Realtors for judging on the state level. State winners are to be announced at the July meeting of the Kentucky Association at Lake Barkley.

... about your Social Security

TIME LIMITS ON SOCIAL SECURITY APPEALS

A person who wishes to appeal a decision on a Social Security or Supplemental Security Income (SSI) claim should make certain that the request is submitted within the specified time, Jim Kelly, Social Security district director for the Big Sandy area, said recently.

"If a request for a review is not submitted before the end of the time limit, the person may lose his or her right to that review and may not be eligible for the next step in the review process."

The administrative review process includes reconsideration, hearing, and appeals council reviews. After the administrative reviews, the case can be appealed to U.S. District Court, Kelly said. However all appeals must be filed timely. Each has a 60-day time limit from the date of the previous decision.

When the last day of a time limit falls on a Saturday, Sunday, or national holiday, the time limit is extended to the next workday.

"A person may not want to take advantage of all the review steps," Kelly said. "But anyone who wants to do so must follow them in order."

Additional information about the appeals process for either Social Security or SSI can be obtained from the Big Sandy Area Social Security Office, located on U.S. 23 between Prestonsburg and Paintsville.

A stylized illustration of a shopping cart filled with various items, including a large box labeled 'M'. The cart is depicted in a simple, graphic style with bold lines. The items inside the cart are represented by various shapes and patterns, suggesting a variety of goods. The large box with the letter 'M' is prominent on the right side of the cart. The overall style is reminiscent of mid-20th-century graphic design.

Career Day At Osborne School

Wheelwright Volunteer Firemen Darrell Hill and Larry Ray help future firefighter, Marlin Johnson with the water hose. Marlin is the son of Roscoe and Exer Johnson, of Buckingham.

Students at the W.D. Osborne Elementary School, Bevinsville, learned about the fire and police departments as part of Career Day.

Career education is a part of the regular school curriculum to build a stronger tie between the school and the community it serves.

The classes of Head Start, kindergarten and first grade got a first hand look at these two community services when both organizations visited the school in November.

Foods & Beverages Series

PCC is offering the third in its foods and beverages series on April 17, in room 216 of the Pike building. German wines and foods will be featured. Linda Francis will be teaching the foods section and the menu includes sauerbraten. Miss Francis is a well-known area cook and hostess and is a graduate of the Greenbrier Cooking School. The wines section will be taught by Ron Hayden, of Crane Distributing in Lexington. Call PCC to register.

THANK YOU

I would like to thank all who were so kind to the family of Everett Maggard during our days of grief. I thank all who sent flowers, food, and those that came to show their respect; for the nice sympathy cards; the Regular Baptist ministers and other ministers, too, for their comforting words; the Merion Funeral Chapel for its services and for being so kind.

MARY TURNER MAGGARD

We're glad you asked! John C. Hall Founder Hall Funeral Home HOW CAN ONE FACE THEM? Having failed to attend a friend's funeral service, one may experience great difficulty in facing members of the bereaved family without embarrassment. So, too, may members of the deceased's family find it hard to face some one who did not pay their respects at the funeral service, the wake or other form of visitation. To avoid such embarrassment, a person who could not attend the service ought to make a personal condolence call afterwards. He should also explain to the family why he could not attend. Although one must make these decisions individually, as the situation requires, it must be pointed out that funeral attendance and condolence calls are social responsibilities. We occasionally observe this "loss of friendship" when a simple phone call might have prevented the hurt feelings. If you are not clear about visitation etiquette or duties, feel free to call on us for assistance. We will be pleased to help you at any time. To Receive KSD Diplomas

Deborah Bevins

Timothy Stewart

The largest class of seniors in the history of the Kentucky School for the Deaf will receive diplomas on June 1. Sixty-eight members of the 161st graduating class will take part in commencement exercises at 2 p.m. in Danville at Thomas Hall on the campus.

The graduates are from across the state, representing 41 counties. They include Deborah Lynn Bevins and Timothy Dewayne Stewart, of Floyd county.

Deborah Lynn Bevins, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Bevins, of Stanville. She is a member of the Junior National Association of the Deaf, cheerleader (drummer), and swim team. She has attended KSD 10 years. Her brother, Gary, graduated in 1983, another brother, Richard, is a junior at KSD.

Timothy Dewayne Stewart is a son of Mrs. Sylvia Wade, R. 1, Prestonsburg. He is a member of the Drama Club, Student Council, was yearbook photographer this year and played football three years. He received Drivers Education Award for 1983. He attended KSD from 1970 to 1984.

February Idle Rate Drop Not Reflected in Floyd

The unemployment rate went down in 101 Kentucky counties in February as the state's preliminary rate dropped nine-tenths of a percent from January, according to Cabinet for Human Resources. The rate increased in 17 counties and remained the same in two.

There are 83 counties reporting a rate of 10.0 percent or higher, compared to 91 in January. The state rate for February was 10.6 percent, down from January's revised rate of 11.5 percent. Nationally, the rate dropped from 8.8 percent in January to 8.4 percent in February.

The unemployment rate in the Big Sandy district decreased from 17.6 percent in January to 15.9 percent in February. Rates ranged from a low of 8.2 percent in Martin county, the only one with single-digit unemployment, to a high of 18.4 percent in Floyd county.

The monthly sample of unemployment insurance benefits recipients showed 42.3 percent had worked in mining, 20.8 percent in trade and 12.12 percent in construction.

Jobless rates in Kentucky's 120 counties ranged from a low of 4.0 in Bourbon county to a high of 33.2 percent in Russell.

"Employment was up, while the size of the labor force and the estimated number of unemployed people decreased," said state labor market analyst Ed Blackwell in explaining the drop in the state rate.

"We showed employment gains in agriculture; manufacturing; state and local education; transportation, communications and public utilities; and the category we label 'all other non-agricultural employment,' which includes people who are self-employed, unpaid family workers, and domestic workers in private households," he said.

"Total employment grew from 1,525,000 in January to 1,527,300 in February and was 85,300 higher than the 1,442,000 who were working in February 1983. Meanwhile, 181,000 Kentuckians were unemployed in February, compared to 198,400 in January and 244,000 in February 1983, when the unemployment rate was 14.5 percent," Blackwell said.

"Kentucky's civilian labor force estimate decreased 15,000 from 1,723,400 in January to 1,708,400 in February, but included 22,400 more people than last February's 1,686,000," Blackwell said.

The civilian labor force includes only non-military persons who are employed and unemployed people actively seeking work. "A number of people who have exhausted their unemployment insurance benefits and other people who have become discouraged in their efforts to find work may have temporarily given up the job search, which would cause the size of the labor force to decrease," he said. He noted that February's labor force estimate is the same as last October's. "It dropped for two months, then was up in January, largely because of seasonal factors."

In the Lexington metropolitan area, which is made up of Fayette, Clark, Bourbon, Jessamine, Scott and Woodford counties, the number of employed increased from 178,652 in January to 180,201 in February, while the number of unemployed dropped from 10,644 to 8,934. The area's unemployment rate decreased from 5.6 percent in January to 4.7 percent in February.

In the Louisville metropolitan area, comprised of Jefferson, Bullitt and Oldham counties in Kentucky and Floyd and Clark counties in Indiana, employment increased from 385,812 in January to 387,819 in February, while the number of jobless people dropped from 45,394 to 41,924. The unemployment rate dropped from 10.5 percent in January to 9.8 percent in February.

In the Purchase district the unemployment rate decreased from 13.1 percent in January to 12.6 percent in February. Calloway County's 9.7 percent unemployment rate was the district's lowest and only single-digit rate. Marshall County's 23.5 percent was the highest. Six other counties in the district reported unemployment rates above 10.0 percent.

The monthly sample of the district's unemployment insurance benefits recipients showed 27.7 percent had worked in construction, 23.0 percent in trade, 22.4 percent in manufacturing and 12.6 percent in services.

Unemployment in the Pennyrile district decreased from 12.2 percent in January to 11.8 in February.

In the Kentucky River district unemployment decreased from 18.7 percent in January to 17.5 percent in February. Rates ranged from a low of 11.0 percent in Breathitt county to a high of 27.4 percent in Letcher, as all eight counties reported double-digit rates.

The monthly sample of people receiving unemployment insurance benefits indicated 36.8 percent had worked in mining, 19.5 percent in services, 13.8 percent in trade, 13.2 percent in manufacturing and 10.7 percent in construction.

Jehovah's Witnesses Official To Visit

Kirk V. Wells, presiding overseer of the Allen Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, announces the visit of Leroy J. Langan, circuit supervisor, the week of April 10 to 15.

"The congregation anticipates a week of increased activity and spiritual benefit from Mr. Langan's visit," Wells stated. The visit is described as a part of an advanced training program for Jehovah's Witnesses. The activity scheduled is also designed to encourage more Bible discussion by people of all faiths in the community.

The program begins Tuesday evening with a ministry school and service meeting, followed by a discourse by Langan.

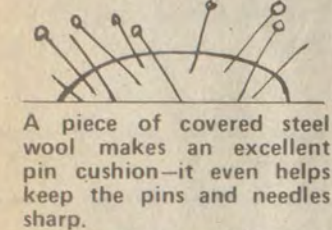

Thursday evening's session includes an audience participation portion, "Continue in the Things You Have Learned."

Wednesday through Sunday, Mr. Langan will join ministers from the local congregation in their house-to-house visitation ministry.

Highlight of the week will be Sunday morning at 10 a.m. when Langan gives the public talk, "God's Purpose for Earth and Man."

All meetings will be at the Kingdom Hall and the public is welcome. No collection will be taken.

Job Training Program Designed To Help Vets

Employers can receive up to $10,000 for training and hiring eligible veterans under a program administered through the state Department for Employment Services. "The Emergency Veterans' Job Training Program is designed to help veterans and employers," said Ron Keal, Director of the Division of Veterans Employment Services.

"To qualify, an employer must offer training in an occupation in a growth industry, for a skill which the veteran does not have already, or for a job for which there are not enough skilled workers to meet the demand," Keal said. "Generally, training programs should last at least six months. The maximum time allowed for training depends on the veteran and whether he or she has a disability."

An employer will be reimbursed for half of the veteran's starting wage, up to $10,000, Keal said. "The employer must agree to hire the veteran when the training is completed," he said.

More information about the program may be obtained by calling the local office of the Department for Employment Services.
