WHEN THIS PHOTO was taken, Monday, noon, the railroad tracks in the middle of Garrett were submerged and most of the town's businesses and many homes had been invaded by swift-flowing flood waters.

Major Flood Hits County

Beaver Creeks Near Record High, Report

1957...1963...1977...1984...Chalk up another big one.

Floodwaters that hit the county's upper reaches early Monday morning and kept Prestonsburg in suspense until Tuesday afternoon appeared to be abating late Tuesday. The inundation drove scores of people from their homes, disrupted road and telephone traffic, did property damage that officials have not yet begun to calculate, and left many communities without water or electricity.

Left and Right Beaver Creeks as far down as their junction at Martin appeared to be the areas hit hardest by the flood, which followed a weekend of steady rain on ground already sodden from earlier rains. Many residents in Right Beaver communities reported it was the worst flooding in memory.

According to the hourly log at the Corps of Engineers' Trimble Branch pump station, the Big Sandy crested here at 43.8 feet around 4 p.m. Tuesday, making it the least of the four major floods recorded here over the past 27 years.

(On April 6, 1977, the river rose to 45.89 feet, within inches of topping the flood wall protecting Prestonsburg. In 1963, the high water mark was recorded at 46.6 feet. In the legendary flood of 1957—a year before the flood wall was built—the waters topped out at 48.7 feet.)

But in towns like Wayland and Garrett, where the waters covered the railroad tracks, some residents said this flood reached unprecedented levels. The Columbia Gas Transmission Corp. compressor plant at Warco took in water, reportedly for the first time ever. And the Left Beaver communities of Wheelwright and McDowell also reported near-record high water.

"It's possibly the worst in history on both Beavers," said Judge-Executive John M. Stumbo. "Right Beaver is destroyed."

In the 48 hours from 9 a.m. Saturday to 9 a.m. Monday, 4.28 inches of rain had fallen in Prestonsburg, with .78 of an inch recorded in the three hours from 5:30 to 8:30 a.m. Monday. Between 9 and 10 a.m. the river rose 1.28 feet.

Monday was a story of families routed from their homes at daybreak... of pickups laden with appliances and furniture as homes spared the initial torrent awaited the inevitable backup waters...of state, county and city rescue squads mobilized...of merchants scrambling to save their stock, some offering their perishables at bargain rates.

Water surged early across KY 122, serving Left Beaver Creek. Slides were reported on Spurlock Fork of Middle Creek and the Left Fork of Abbott. Water was several feet deep in downtown Martin and Our Lady of the Way Hospital was cut off.

In Prestonsburg, social workers at the child welfare offices on University Drive and accountants at Helton, Butler and Wells' office on the other end of town spent much of Monday moving their records from the threatening tide. Merchants who could cram their goods onto their highest shelves, O.R. "Pete" Howard trucked much of his furniture to drier ground. Paul Hunt Thompson was selling groceries at discount prices.

Mud Creek was isolated, its normally (See Story No. 1, Page 4)

MAYTOWN RESIDENTS are all too familiar with the pattern during times of high water—wait and see "what it's going to do," and then move if you have to. The Don Sword family, pictured here loading up, was among many in their community and elsewhere throughout the county forced to evacuate.

Floyd School Officials Join State Effort on Bus Insurance

Floyd school district administrators are cooperating with state officials in a statewide attempt to get a better deal on school bus insurance. Assistant Superintendent Ray Brackett confirmed this week.

County officials were urged at a recent workshop to compare their insurance contracts with those in neighboring school districts, following a state Department of Education survey which showed a wide disparity in the premiums different districts pay. Many school districts are paying too much and getting too little coverage, the survey revealed.

"We're concerned about seeing that the kids are protected as much as possible," said Don Fightmaster, director of the department's division of insurance services. "Some of the premiums being paid are pretty outlandish, but the main thing is the kids."

The survey indicates that 49 of the state's 180 school districts are deficient in at least one kind of insurance coverage, yet some are paying more than $800 per year for insurance on each of their buses.

The study is the result of a questionnaire returned by 170 districts. Six of the remaining ten districts do not bus pupils and the other four did not turn in complete responses.

The largest deficit is in the area of insurance for bodily injury per busload, in which 40 districts do not meet the state's recommended minimum coverage of $2 million. Most of those districts fall short by at least $1 million. The Floyd school district is covered up to $1.5 million per accident.

Twenty-three districts do not have the recommended $250,000 coverage for bodily injury per person. Fifteen districts are deficient in property damage coverage. The state suggests a minimum of $100,000 in that area. Floyd has bodily injury coverage of $200,000 per person and property damage coverage up to $50,000.

"There is no reason for the districts not to comply with our insurance standards because in most cases we reimburse them for the costs of their premiums," said Fightmaster, adding, "I can't understand why they don't go ahead and get adequate coverage."

The state reimburses districts for insurance on buses which transport at least 10 passengers to and from school, those which carry fewer than 10 pupils but serve areas which can't be reached by standard buses, and service vehicles directly related to the pupil transportation system.

While many districts are underinsured, the survey also indicates that a number of districts are paying too much for the coverage they do have.

In releasing the results of the survey, Superintendent of Public Instruction Alice McDonald said that its purpose was "to encourage local school districts to look for ways to lower their premiums while providing adequate insurance coverage to protect the children."

One suggestion for lowering costs, Fightmaster said, is to get bids from at least three companies before buying insurance. The study showed that schools which received two or more bids paid 19 percent lower premiums than those which got only one bid, and 13 percent lower premiums than those which negotiated directly with insurance companies.

Bidding is not mandatory on insurance contracts and the Floyd district has not customarily advertised for bids but has negotiated directly with local (See Story No. 3, Page 4)

School Board Acts To Lower Expenses

Parents from one school pleaded for classrooms and added services. Instead, the Board of Education announced a series of cuts and warned there may be more to come.

Following a lengthy closed session last Wednesday night, the board voted to reduce the work year of administrative and supervisory personnel in an effort to cut expenses by $89,000—the amount by which Floyd county this year exceeded its state allotment for what is known in teaching circles as "extended employment."

In addition, the county's three elementary music teachers and two non-tenured physical education teachers will not be rehired; and the fate of two workers in the Chapter I (remedial reading) program is also uncertain.

Notice of the cuts came shortly after a Clark Elementary School delegation begged for more classroom space, carpeting, and roof repairs. PTA President Jean Rosenberg complained to the board of remedial reading students being taught in the corner of a trailer classroom already occupied by another class...of a speech teacher forced to shout over the clatter of a duplicating machine...of a class for gifted and talented students relegated to a corner of the school library.

As inadequate as existing facilities are to provide special classes for children needing them, the needs of many students have not even been identified for want of testing, said Mrs. Rosenberg, who is a member of the Prichard committee for Academic Excellence—a panel set up several years ago by then-Gov. John Y. Brown, Jr. under the leadership of Lexington attorney Edward F. Prichard—which is studying the state's educational needs.

In response to a plea by Clark teacher Patricia Sturgill, who explained that children in her first-grade class spend three-quarters of the time on the floor, Board Chairman Dr. J.D. Adams offered personally to raise $600 in matching funds to help replace the carpet there. But no money is available for the other improvements the Clark parents and teachers are seeking, school officials said.

School psychologist Larry Jervis, noting that his workload has tripled since he was first hired, said he cannot keep up with the volume of students needing to be tested.

State accreditation officials have given the Floyd school district until 1985 to hire four more guidance counselors for seventh and eighth grades but it is not easy to find persons qualified to test students for learning and other disabilities, said Superintendent E.P. Grigsby, Jr. Nor does he expect any money to be available soon for the new construction (See Story No. 5, Page 4)

READY TO BAIL OUT

We're getting a paper to press this week with one foot in the bucket, you might say—a bit edgy at the plate and ready to take off (bail out would, I believe, be the more correct expression under the circumstances).

We're having our troubles, but they're trivial when you consider the plight of so many whose homes and businesses are flooded. For those driven from their premises by the water, their homes damaged, belongings lost—this is the worst flood of all, because it's the most recent.

Trial of this sort brings out the best in many, the worst in some. Many of those hardest hit will realize, perhaps for the first time, the downright goodness in a lot of people. Would you say it's only trial of this sort that will cause some of us to seek higher ground?

Asks what he'd do if he had his life to live over, the oldtimer tugged at his chin and surmised: "We-el, there's one thing certain—I'd have to make more money."

Despite Gloomy Outlook...

There's Yet Time for Farmers To Plant Corn, Says Farm Agent

Farmers who looked out on fields and gardens deep under water this week are, naturally, discouraged, but the situation isn't as gloomy as many think, County Agricultural Agent Gene Ball said Tuesday while the Big Sandy river was still rising here.

Hybrid seed provides the hope for corn growers. Ball said corn may be planted as late as June 10 and still reach full maturity.

"A planting date around May 15 would have been much better," the farm agent admitted, explaining that for every week planting is delayed after that date the farmer loses 10 bushels per acre in production.

That explains, he said, the concern previously expressed by farmers in Ohio and other corn states about the late planting season that is a result of continued rainfall. "For a man who depends on growing corn for a living, the loss of 10 bushels or more an acre spells the difference between profit and loss," he said.

Because of an April that may have been the area's rainiest, comparatively little plowing and other soil preparation has been done in this county for corn crops. Gardens, likewise, are far behind schedule, and some vegetables, notably peas, may be lost for the year, Ball said.

Besides the plastic jugs and other debris which this week's flooding will leave on Floyd fields, sediment left behind by receding waters will be particularly damaging to hay crops, he added.

Those looking to the brighter side found consolation in the fact that few crops and gardens were washed away this week—simply because they had not yet been planted.

Perkins Asks Help For Flood-Stricken In 13 Area Counties

Congressman Carl Perkins called Tuesday on Governor Collins and President Reagan to declare 13 Eastern Kentucky counties a disaster area.

Perkins said that 13 counties, Breathitt, Floyd, Johnson, Knott, Lawrence, Letcher, Magoffin, Martin, Morgan, Perry, Pike, Powell, and Wolfe "were devastated in the last 36 hours by flood waters which in many areas are still rising."

Thousands of homes have been destroyed with damage to property amounting to several hundred million dollars. Roads and bridges destroyed amounting to many millions more, the Congressman said. Perkins urged federal and state agencies to move into the area with DES teams, and that temporary housing, including trailers be made available immediately to the homeless. He also urged that emergency food, medical supplies and drinking water be supplied.

Perkins said it is essential to begin immediately on restoration and repair of bridges and roads to afford access to affected areas and facilitate recovery.

He contacted by telephone Monday state offices, the National Guard, the White House, the U.S. Corps of Engineers, the American Red Cross and Federal Emergency Services Agency, urging assistance.

Committee Named To Study Failure of Some Schools To Teach Full 175 Days

The Kentucky Department of Education has expressed concern that not all school districts are providing 175 full days of instruction, so Superintendent of Public Instruction Alice McDonald has appointed an advisory committee to study the problem.

"The committee's task is simply to make recommendations on how we can reasonably get back to 175 six-hour days each year," McDonald said. "That is, after all, the law and we feel it is the minimum amount of time needed to provide a good education for the students."

The Advisory Committee on Pupil Attendance, which is being chaired by Paducah Independent School Superintendent Dr. Lawrence Allen, held its first meeting on April 26 in Frankfort. At that meeting, members received specific information on the kinds of problems they are being asked to investigate.

"One of the problems we've had has been this business of snow banking," said Robert Spillman, the department's Associate Superintendent for Local Services. "Fortunately, the General Assembly got rid of it this year."

Snow banking is the practice of adding several minutes to each school day, thereby building up a surplus of time in case schools have to close because of bad weather. The result was that many schools routinely provided only 170 days of instruction.

"That practice was instituted by the legislature several years ago when we had two really bad winters in a row," said Spillman. "It was always controversial. The equivalent of adding about 2½ minutes to each class period isn't really the same thing as giving another five full days of school."

Saying that snow banking is "just one little piece of the overall problem," Spillman also cited the practice of dismissing school early for non-weather related reasons.

Many schools which have been in session for any portion of a half day have counted it as an entire half day. Spillman believes that has led to some abuses.

"Some of them go only until 1 o'clock the first day of school, or the day before Christmas, Thanksgiving, or spring break," said Spillman. "It really adds up."

Snow days have caused complications in several systems which find themselves making up days after commencement exercises are over. Once the date for graduation has been set, administrators are often reluctant to change it even after it becomes obvious that classes will have to continue after that date.

The result, according to Spillman, is that seniors do not return to classes after graduation, but in some cases have been counted present by the school system. "It increases the daily attendance numbers so the schools get more money, but it isn't the same as providing an education," Spillman said.

School districts are usually anxious to increase daily attendance because it means more operating funds for the next year. Through a complex system based on average daily attendance, the state provides approximately 70% of the money for salaries, equipment, and other expenses.

Many districts have periodically mounted campaigns to increase the attendance rates of their students. At one time, the Jefferson County system estimated that a 1% increase in attendance could bring in an additional $1 million in state funds.

Spillman said that the Department of Education was glad to see districts attempting to boost daily attendance figures, but would also like to see them strengthen their commitment to 175 full days of instruction each year.

The Advisory Committee on Pupil Attendance has formed a subcommittee to recommend acceptable methods for making up missed days. The entire committee expects to meet again during May, and hopes that its task can be completed in just a few months.

"It's all part of a societal problem," said Spillman. "We as a society have lost our commitment to productivity. The schools are just a small part of that, but it would be a start. We want the committee to advise us on how to make that start."

Virginia Osborne Jamerson, principal of W.D. Osborne Elementary School, Bypro, is a member of the committee. Others are:

Dr. Lawrence Allen, superintendent, Paducah Independent Schools, chairman; Robert L. Arvin, superintendent, Oldham county schools; Richard P. Bowling, superintendent, Leslie county schools; Dr. C. Tony Collins, superintendent, Wolfe county schools; Dr. Faurest Coogle, superintendent, Franklin county schools; Howard R. Crittenden, principal, Henderson County Senior High School; Ronald Doyle, director of pupil personnel, Barren county schools; Bill A. Grimes, principal, Woodford County Middle School; John A. Haney, principal, Sheldon Clark High School, Martin county; Willie Jackson, director of pupil personnel, Murray Independent Schools; Martha Ledford, director of pupil personnel, Christian county schools; Ralph Stallion, director of pupil personnel, Crittenden county schools; Harold Wood, principal, Hopkinsville High School; Glenn Wooters, director of pupil personnel, Shelby county schools.

Columbia Gas Asks Rate Hike

Columbia Gas of Kentucky is seeking approval from the state Public Service Commission for rate and revenue adjustments that would increase the company's revenues $13.3 million, or 11.4 percent.

Of the total request, $10.2 million would be generated by increasing customer rates. The remaining $3.1 million would come from downward adjustments made internally to Columbia's revenue requirements.

Under its present rate structure, Columbia projects it will face a negative net income slightly over $1 million in 1984. The company plans to make the new rates effective May 20.

Columbia's last rate request was in 1983. After a series of hearings, the Commission granted $4 million of a total $9.6 million request.

Criticism Should Not Cow Juries

The Times hopes that future grand juries will not become over-sensitive to the criticism voiced recently by a defense attorney who alleged that past juries have exercised "zero discretion" in voting indictments.

It is true that grand jury indictments against six defendants have been dismissed here recently and that a petit jury quickly cleared two other defendants named in another indictment. But the procedure prescribed by law may be as much to blame as the jury for the apparent failure to protect innocent individuals against damaging accusation.

For the law leaves a grand jury operating to some degree in the dark, because the jury is given only prosecution testimony on which to base its decision to indict or not to indict. No defense is offered in the grand jury room, and if the evidence produced by complaining witnesses indicates that the accused should, in the judgment of the jury, stand trial, the jury votes an indictment, as instructed.

Then the trial of the case. The defense—which the grand jury did not hear when the indictment was made—has its inning. The full picture may be far different now from what the grand jury saw at its session, and the trial jury may be convinced of the defendant's innocence. Or, in some instances, the trial jury itself may fail of its duty to convict.

The way between indictment and conviction or acquittal is not an uncluttered thoroughfare.

The grand jury undeniably bears a weighty responsibility. It should be aware of the distress and humiliation an indictment can inflict on an innocent person, but it cannot be cowed into doing nothing submission by criticism.

Justice recognizes the tenet that it is better that a hundred guilty go free than one innocent suffer. But who is to speak for the innocents who suffer at the hands of the guilty who are turned free to prey upon them?

busy clinic an island in the stream. Dozens of riverbank gardens were lost on Little Mud. Communities on the Levisa Fork from Harold to Allen prepared for backwaters which rose rapidly Monday afternoon, as the swollen river turned back the offerings of its tributaries.

Children were out of school but in some cases the water was in. Allen, Martin, Maytown, Garrett, Drift, McDowell, Harold and Betsy Layne schools were all flooded and water entered the Prestonsburg High School gym. The Floyd Health Department issued a "boil water" notice for Beaver Creek residents, urged those on private wells to sterilize them with chlorine bleach before drinking from them, and offered flood victims free tetanus shots.

Homeowners living below stripmines had special cause for concern—a silt dam on Rough and Tough was the subject of a "red alert" for a time—and state Rep. Greg Stumbo complained that Natural Resources inspectors were not on hand to monitor potentially unstable dams and ponds.

Many helpers were on hand. Schools, churches and neighbors opened their doors to provide shelter and storage for those driven out of their homes. The Red Cross, which closed its local office here recently for lack of support, was distributing food at emergency shelters. The county judge and sheriff's offices had lines open for those in need of aid. Evacuations and rescue operations were coordinated by the state Division of Disaster and Emergency Services (DES). The Civil Air Patrol established a headquarters in the fiscal court meeting room and worked on setting up a high frequency radio system. The National Guard sent in crews and four water tankers. Maloney's and Heck's donated waterproof ponchos to rescue workers.

Under the direction of DES Director Paul Chaffin, Job Corps students helped evacuate families in the Goble Roberts addition, at Allen and on Mud Creek, worked on projects at Emma, Middle Creek, Cliff, Brandy Keg and Lancer, and sandbagged an area on the lower end of Prestonsburg. "We must have had a hundred boys working from there," said Judge-Executive Stumbo. "I don't know what we'd have done without them."

Phones rang steadily and calls crackled over radios in the judge-executive's office, where Chaffins had set up a command center. From the Fitzpatrick Baptist Church, which was being used as an emergency shelter, a call for an ambulance...a boat dispatched to pick up a Miner's Branch woman in labor...an elderly Branham's Creek resident calling with chest pains...how long might a diabetic go without his insulin...where could a Bucks Branch family spend the night...

U.S. 23 was cut late Monday night at Stanville, Ivel and Banner. Old U.S. 23 was under water at Lancer and University Drive was awash too. North Lake Drive was flooded in front of Prestonsburg High School.

On Tuesday morning, as waters began receding in other sections, residents in the county's lower end waited anxiously for a predicted 46-foot crest, estimated to come around 7 p.m. By noon, however, the river was rising by only a few inches an hour and it seemed likely that the earlier estimate would not be reached.

Nobody was hoping for any record.

agencies, Brackett said. Two companies, Big Sandy Insurance, of Martin, and Hall and Clark, of Prestonsburg, jointly insure Floyd's bus fleet. In view of the state's recommendations, school officials here will consider advertising for bids when the contract comes up for renewal in August, Brackett said.

"We really consider anything under three bids to be the same as direct negotiation," said Fightmaster. "We think it's pretty clear that a serious attempt to bid coverage will save your district money."

The average yearly premium paid by districts which got at least two bids is $160. The highest premium is being paid by the Augusta Independent school district, which has two buses insured at an average premium of $855 each. The lowest premium is $58 per bus paid by Dayton Independent and Livingston county. The overall statewide average is $166. Floyd pays $285.

Average premiums in neighboring school districts range from $399 for Paintsville Independent to $130 in Johnson county. Pikeville Independent pays $143, Pike county $157.

In order to encourage districts to seek lower insurance premiums, the Department of Education has provided all districts with a manual containing its survey results. The document includes a listing of the names, addresses, and phone numbers of the insurance companies used by each school district, and a table indicating the average premium per bus being paid by each district.

In a further effort to lower insurance costs, Fightmaster's department is considering self-insurance for the state's public school buses.

"We're doing a study now," he said. "We need to get a lot of information back from all 180 school districts on the number of accidents and so forth. But if we could take all those districts and self-insure them, we could get these $160 and $180 premiums down to something more reasonable." He hopes to finish the study by early August.

The 170 districts which participated in the most recent survey pay a combined annual premium of $1.2 million for 7,329 buses, down from $1.7 million four years ago. Fightmaster attributes the drop to a conscious effort to lower costs and the practice of obtaining insurance on a year-to-year basis rather than in three-year increments.

needed at Clark and other schools, he said.

Under the cuts announced by the board, all certified employees with extended employment—that is, those who work a longer year than the 9½ months of the regular school session—will work two weeks fewer. The reduction will affect a variety of administrators and supervisors—including assistant superintendents, principals, coaches, librarians, and guidance counselors—but will not touch most classroom teachers or non-professional central office staff.

The cut in music teachers will affect a teacher at Prestonsburg Elementary and two itinerant teachers serving Left Beaver, Mud Creek and Prater Creek schools. It will not affect high school band teachers. Physical education teachers will be lost at Clark and Betsy Layne grade schools.

Unless the state board agrees to fund the positions, two workers on the Chapter I central office staff may be returned to the regular classroom. June Stephens is a reading consultant and Brent Allen a social worker for the remedial reading program, which has a teaching staff of 33 and a central office staff of seven—two more than the state would normally fund.

Grigsby said Floyd officials will not know until May 24 how much state money will be available for the 1984-'85 school year. While decisions of the recent legislature promise more support for testing students, more teacher aides, and smaller classes in the lower grades, more staff and program cuts may be necessary and no funds appear likely for urgently needed construction and maintenance work, the superintendent said.

Resolution of the kind of problems raised by the Clark parents will require increased local as well as state funding, Grigsby said. "We have to find what kind of tax the people can live with. Obviously they cannot live with a utilities tax," he said, referring to the public outcry that prompted the board to withdraw its recent proposal to levy a three percent tax on utilities.

Grigsby said he was confident Floyd citizens would increase their support for the schools. "Next time, we need to be better organized at the local level and to give ourselves enough time," he said. "People will come around."

THIS MOTHER'S DAY

In loving memory of my mother, Pearl Martin, who went to be with the Lord, January 7, 1984:

Mother—how sweet the name to me; Each day I heard her read the Bible and pray.

And the example of her life Helped me to see the upward way. Thank God for a Christian mother; Thank God for the power of prayer; Thank God for His wonderful promise; We will see her again—up there.

horse race last Saturday. The trouble with my pick was, no such horse was in the race. Biloxi Indian finished 12th in the 20-horse field. But what happened to Blood Indian—or was he or she merely a misprint?

At that, I didn't do any worse than those who are supposed to know more about the matter than when and where the race was to be held. Name me one expert who gave a horse named Coax Me Chad a chance of winding up No. 2, or another yclept At the Threshold to run third.

The boys in the know were interviewed, ad nauseam, by TV, and they pondered the blood lines of the horses, their racing records, their condition, the condition of the track, the state of their nerves, and so on and on, one even using a computer, and they came up with names such as Althea, a filly who wound up next to last; Vanlandingham (16th), and Silent King (No. 8), occasionally referring to Swale as a contender.

But don't get discouraged, fellows Even I have been wrong. Sometimes my system of closing the eyes and jabbing a pin into the list and declaring the nearest name the favorite unaccountably fails to work.

This may be a bit technical, but a friend of mine insists that I explain to the uninitiated that the difference between a dry fly fisherman and a wet fly fisherman does not lie in their drinking habits.

LETTERS To the Editor

The views expressed here are those of the writer, and not necessarily those of this newspaper. No unsigned contributions will be published.

"Mental Child Abuse"

According to what I've read and been told by several, Floyd county has the second worst school system in a state that has the second worst school system in the entire country. Despite their isolation, the Alaska Eskimos have a better school system than Floyd county. Yet Floyd county is the third richest county in the entire country (Pike and Knott counties are first and second) in natural resources.

Why, why, why are the children not being educated?

Nine years I attended school on Spurlock, Floyd county. Not once did I receive a grade or a grade card on anything. On our first day of school, my friends and I decided what grade we would be in for that year. Our teachers were always there for the first time, many times. I am not a product of the Floyd county school system—I am a victim of it. I know we've improved a little but have we kept pace?

What we are doing to our children is the equivalent of throwing a drowning man an anchor in the middle of a shark-filled ocean and yelling, "Hang on!" We have laws to cover other kinds of child abuse—why not this? We should ask our lawmakers, "Why not this?"

If unmined minerals were taxed equal to other real estate as required by the state constitution, Floyd county would receive more than three billion dollars per year. In but a few years, people from Maine to California would be sending their children to Floyd county for higher education because Floyd county would have the finest schools in the country.

Ninety eight percent of our minerals are owned by people or companies outside Kentucky. Some of these people are the same people who call us, "dumb hillbillies."

The finest schools in the country will come to Floyd county when the people love their children enough to stand up for their children's right to be educated equally to the rest of the country. Going to Frankfort or sitting on a school board is not the same thing as joining a country club. Seems to me some people don't know that.

Because roads are a necessary part of any school system, I believe our state representative owes the people an explanation as to why he sponsored a bill in the house at Frankfort to abolish the coal truck miles-tonnage tax. In speaking against the unmined mineral tax at the courthouse in Prestonsburg on Feb. 8, he urged more realistic assessments on Floyd properties, noting that the county boasts real property taxes off that, we ought to quit." Some people might say that was representing special interest. I don't think it was. But I will say, if that's the best we can do, we should consider abolishing the job.

If the millionaires and billionaires of New York City and Los Angeles want to own ninety eight percent of the vast wealth of Floyd county, Kentucky, I believe they should pay their fair share of the taxes—at least the amount required by the state constitution.

When confronted with the fair tax law, they would, of course, yell foul and say it will drive them into bankruptcy. This is automatic, especially since Reagan became president. Well, it seems to be the people of Floyd county have lived in bankruptcy for at least two hundred years. Maybe it's time the rich had a chance at it. Equality is fairness. That's what our country was built on.

Waveland Closed By Fire Damage

Waveland State Shrine in Lexington will be closed the rest of the year, Parks Commissioner Fran Curci announced.

The centerpiece of the 10-acre shrine, a mansion built in 1847, was damaged by fire April 27. The mansion housed many 19th century furnishings and artifacts.

"The Parks Department staff is carefully removing the mansion's contents to start the laborious task of assessing any damage to each piece," Curci said. The Kentucky Historical Society and the state Office of Historic Properties will assist in the effort.

"Insurance adjusters are still inspecting the mansion to determine the financial loss," Curci said. "It appears a significant portion of the collection sustained smoke damage," he added.

National Hospital Week

With the announcement, "We're the Caring Kind," the Kentucky Hospital Association joins hospitals throughout the nation in celebrating National Hospital Week 1984, May 6-12.

"The 1984 National Hospital Week theme pays tribute to the special kind of people we have in hospitals throughout Kentucky," said William S. Conn, Jr., president of the Kentucky Hospital Association. "Whether they be employees, volunteers, visitors, or trustees, they are all people who are the Caring Kind. They are people who care about one another and about the community. It is their commitment to caring that we celebrate this week."

Hospitals in Kentucky have planned a number of activities to observe National Hospital Week and to honor and encourage employees and volunteers.

National hospital Week is sponsored each year by the American Hospital Association and its 6,300 member hospitals to foster better communication and understanding between hospitals and their patients, employees, and the communities they serve.

Still a State of Small Farms

A national trend towards the consolidation of small part-time and family farms has seemed to elude Kentucky which is still known as a smallfarm state.

A 1982 study of Kentucky farmers by rural sociologists at the University of Kentucky revealed that within this state, most small farms do not stay in operation for the purpose of making money, but rather for the sheer enjoyment of farming.

"Despite economic difficulties, farmers continue to maintain a national high in job and home satisfaction," said Dr. Louis Swanson, Extension sociologist in the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture. "Even though small farms are in trouble, attitudes still remain high."

In 1982, Kentucky had 101,000 farms and three out of every four were individually or family operated. Of these, two out of every three farms had annual sales below $20,000—Congress' definition of a small farm. And in 1981, one-third of Kentucky's small farms reported no net income or a loss.

So why do these farmers stick with it? "Farmers farm because they want to," Swanson said. "They stick with farming because they have a strong attachment to the commodity they produce which is probably due to their farm background and any 4-H training they may have had."

But, because so many farms are not making profits, the majority of the farm family income comes from off-farm jobs. "Most Kentuckians take over the family farm or inherit it in their mid-30s," said Swanson. The study showed that fewer than four out of 10 farm families are working full-time on the farm and that one-half of the Kentucky farm men and one-third of the women had off-farm jobs.

Swanson speculates that despite the physical labor advantages that men have over women, more men hold off-farm jobs than women because traditionally the man is supposed to be the bread winner of the family.

"He may feel uncomfortable having the wife work off the farm," Swanson said. "Also, most of the farmers with off-farm jobs are employed fulltime."

The study found that most men who are employed off the farm hold primarily blue-collar jobs, such as precision production and repair operations. Most women working off the farm have white-collar jobs, the majority of these being clerical and educational positions.

Even though these small farm operators hold off-farm jobs they usually do not hire farm hands or extra help. "The farmers who have off-farm jobs work nights and weekends and try to mechanize their farm operations as much as possible in order to be able to keep up with the workload," Swanson said.

The study revealed that farmers are turning to off-farm jobs to increase their buying power and in many cases to enable them to keep the farm. Nine out of 10 farmers indicated that their reason for getting an off-farm job was because they needed money for living expenses and personal use, and eight of 10 were working off the farm so they could acquire farm machinery and tools.

"The off-farm income is often used to purchase farm equipment or additional land," Swanson said. "Farmers continue to invest money into their farm operations, even if they are faltering, because of social rather than economic reasons. They have a strong attachment to the land. It adds texture to their relationship with their work."

In an attitude survey, three quarters of the farmers preferred farming to their off-farm jobs and half are disappointed that they cannot farm full-time.

"The land itself and the satisfaction of being your own boss are reasons why they stay in farming," Swanson said. "But while most part-time farmers prefer farming, they do not see it as a good source of income." This may be accounted for by the results of a report done in the late 1970s which showed that 80 percent of the agricultural commodities are produced by only 20 percent of the farms, the specialist said.

"Even though their farms may not be profitable, small farmers stick with it because the off-farm work place is usually not any more secure than their farming operations," Swanson said. "Most farmers have low wage positions and their kind of jobs are the first to go in a recession and the last to return in a recovery."

Kentucky's persistence in remaining a small-farm state also may be a direct result of the state's major commodity—tobacco, said Swanson. Seventy-five percent of the farmers in Kentucky raise tobacco.

Because of government restrictions on tobacco, Swanson said Kentucky farms are still small when compared with those of other states, and no drastic changes are expected within the next decade.

The study showed that farmers perceive supply-oriented cooperatives as one of the few agribusinesses that help in battling the cost-price squeeze.

Offbeat Music Event Set at Carter Caves

The most unlikely musical instruments—washtubs, tin cans, bottles and the like—will be featured as Carter Caves State Resort Park hosts the "fifth First International Strange Music Weekend" May 11-12.

If using ordinary household items as musical instruments isn't strange enough, the event has also seen African thumb pianos, Indian snake charmer flutes and other exotic instruments. The offbeat event was founded five years ago, and has outgrown its original location at the Carter Caves lodge. It is now conducted in the park amphitheatre. Musicians Dick and Anne Albin, co-founders of the weekend, along with Park Naturalist John Tierney, are scheduled to perform.

New this year is a contest for the best homemade musical instrument. The entries will be judged Saturday afternoon. For further information on the weekend, contact the park at (606) 286-4411.

MEDIA RELEASE FOR CAMP SPONSORS

Christian Appalachian Project will be participating in the federally funded Summer Food Service Program for Children. The program operates under guidelines similar to those of public school food service programs. Taking part in this program enables the sponsor to hold down costs so that most families can afford to send their children to camp.

The program is available to all children 7-15 years of age and younger. All children will be served the same meal at no separate charge regardless of race, color, national origin, age, sex, or handicap and there is no discrimination in the food service. If you feel you or any individual has been discriminated against in the Summer Food Service Program, write to the Secretary of Agriculture, Washington, D.C. 20250.

For more information on the camping program, contact Michael Sanders, Camp Director, at 285-9888.

State Rulings Cut End-of-Year Student Outings

When is a picnic not a picnic? When the Board of Education says it's a field trip.

That was apparently the conclusion to be drawn from a discussion prompted at last Wednesday's board meeting by a request from a Clark Elementary School group.

Causetta Bryant told the board it was unfair to cancel a half-day picnic promised earlier to students who missed only three days or less of school during the year. But Superintendent E.P. Grigsby, Jr. said state rules forbid letting children out of school for reasons not related to schoolwork.

Board member James A. Duff said he thought the Clark youngsters should have their picnic, "no matter what the state says." But his colleagues were more cautious, voting to approve the picnic only as long as it was called a "field trip."

Some 204 students—about a third of the total school enrollment—are eligible for the picnic, said Mrs. Bryant, who added, "I don't care what it's called."

It was not immediately clear what effect the board decision would have on other schools which have traditionally planned end-of-year outings—often unrelated to attendance records—but expected to scrap them this year in view of the closer state scrutiny of Floyd schools. Superintendent Grigsby indicated later that any school would be permitted an end-of-year outing if it were justified as a field trip or other educational activity. Schooltime excursions approved by the board without dissent Wednesday included a McDowell High School visit to the Museum of Natural History in Cincinnati and an Allen Central High School band trip to a music festival in Gatlinburg, Tennessee.

Board Chairman Dr. J.D. Adams ran into opposition with his proposal that the minutes of the April board meeting be changed to indicate that board members had asked to see replies prepared by school officials and the board attorney to charges raised last year by a citizens' group.

The replies—to deficiencies and possible violations of the law alleged by the Floyd County Citizens' Education Council—had to be submitted to the state board of education by April 24. Adams claimed that the Floyd board had agreed to review them first but other board members said they could not remember any such agreement. "They just had to satisfy the state board," Duff said of the school officials.

"They also have to satisfy this board," the chairman shot back. "If we are to run things, we need to know what these people are saying."

According to a calendar approved for the 1984-'85 school year, students will begin classes on August 13; holidays are scheduled on Sept. 3 (Labor Day), Nov. 6 (Election Day), Nov. 22 (Thanksgiving), and Dec. 25 (Christmas); the Christmas vacation will run from Dec. 24 through Jan. 2; school will be out, and the days made up, on October 12 (East Kentucky Education Association meeting), October 19 (teachers' in-service), Mar. 15 and 22 (boys' and girls' state tournament), March 29 (in-service), April 5 (Floyd County Education Association), and April 11 and 12 (Kentucky Education Association).

Board member Ray "Shag" Campbell opposed the early school opening, claiming "it's too hot to start in August." But others said it was a choice between starting earlier in August or finishing later in June.

The board approved a plan, submitted by Asst. Supt. Ron Hager and required by state accreditation officials, which is designed to insure that, in three years, all 7th and 8th grade teachers are teaching in fields for which they are trained.

Hired were: Jerri Ward Turner, Headstart social worker; Teddy R. Tackett and James Bowling, substitute bus drivers; Don R. Spears, Yvette Martin and Sheila Duff, emergency substitute teachers; and Sharon Elliott, substitute cook and janitor.

The Maytown & Wayland United Methodist Churches

present the film seminar

"THE FAMILY: God's Pattern for Living"

a six-part 16mm film seminar with John MacArthur, Jr.

Produced by the Moody Institute of Science, a ministry of Moody Bible Institute in Chicago, these films present the Biblical mandate for the Christian family. Dr. John MacArthur, Jr., well-known pastor, author, radio and conference speaker, offers Biblical solutions to the issues that are breaking today's homes apart. Each 50-minute film is introduced by Assistant Chief of Police of Los Angeles, Robert L. Vernon, who prepares the audience for Dr. MacArthur's message. Each film addresses a different topic. "God's Pattern For Relationships" presents an overview of the specific roles of individual family members, and the necessity for submission to God's authority. "God's Pattern For Wives," and "God's Pattern For Husbands," focus on the Biblical roles of the man and woman in the marriage relationship. "God's Pattern For Children," and "God's Pattern For Parents," examines the inter-relationships between children and parents in the Christian home. The final title, "God's Pattern Broken—Divorce and Remarriage," faces a difficult subject with sensitivity and Biblical perspective.

Encourage your friends to come with you to see each film.

Tackett Feared Dead In Mishap

A 16-year-old Hi Hat boy is presumed dead following a Friday night mishap in which a car carrying five youths ran off the road into Left Beaver Creek, a short distance above McDowell.

Willy Tackett was lost when the car in which he was a passenger left the road on a sharp curve and plunged into the swollen stream. The other four managed to scramble out of the wreck. Tackett's body has not been recovered.

The youths were reportedly returning from a McDowell High School prom party when the accident occurred.

While no deaths in this county were attributed directly to the week's flooding, some observers said Tackett might have survived if Left Beaver Creek was not running so high. Because of disrupted communications resulting from the flood, no details of the boy's obituary were available.

Flood Area Residents Advised To Boil Water

There is a boil water notice in effect for the residents of both Left and Right Beaver creeks. This notice is in effect until notification by the health department that it has been lifted.

Also those persons with private wells whose wells were in the flood waters are advised that the water may be used to wash down homes, but a gallon of liquid chlorine bleach should be poured into the well and left overnight before drinking the well water.

Those persons who have not had a tetanus shot in the past five years and who are working where the flood waters have been are advised to have a tetanus shot. These shots are available at the health department on Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday of this week. There is no charge for these shots.

A nurse from the health department will be in Wayland, Monday, May 14, from 9 until 2 at the Methodist Church. Those persons living in the Wayland, Garrett, Maytown, and Lackey areas can come to this clinic for tetanus shots if they were in the flood.

Magoffin Man Nabbed In Eagle Shooting

Doyle Harvey, of Elsie, Magoffin county, was arrested May 2 and charged with the January 13, 1984 shooting of an immature American bald eagle in Magoffin county. Harvey also is charged with the December 27, 1983 killing of a redtail hawk which also occurred in Magoffin. He has pleaded innocent to both charges.

The eagle was discovered, injured along a highway near Salyersville and was recovered by Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife officials who turned the bird over to the Louisville zoo, where it died two days later. The case has been under investigation by officials of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Division of Law Enforcement.

Shooting an American bald eagle carries the maximum penalty of a $5,000 fine, or one year imprisonment, or both. The penalty for shooting the redtail hawk is a maximum $500 fine, or six months imprisonment, or both. Federal law also provides for a reward of up to half the fines levied in an eagle shooting case of information which leads to conviction.

Pharmacy Footnotes

By HAROLD COOLEY

The status of a drug can change. Sometimes a drug originally classified as prescription-only is redefined after experience has determined that it satisfies the over-the-counter requirements. Among the drugs that have been switched to over-the-counter (OTC) status in the last decade is topical hydrocortisone, a skin medication. Topical hydrocortisone, available in creams, lotions and sprays, used to be prescribed, before attaining OTC status, for irritation, itching and rashes due to eczema, poison ivy and other minor skin ailments. It is now available to an estimated 24 million Americans afflicted with skin ailments, who can now treat themselves at lower cost and greater convenience with this OTC remedy.

When you rely on COOLEY APOTHECARY as your family drugstore you can feel confident we can meet your total prescription needs as well as providing you with a wide variety of over the counter remedies. We look forward to serving every member of your family. All our customer records are readily available to you and to your physician. We are located at No. 2 Town Center Bldg., 886-8106. Master Charge and Visa honored plus we welcome all third party payments. Open: Mon.-Fri. 9-5:30, Sat. 9-4.

HANDY HINT:

Take cold medicines that are strong enough only to remedy your particular symptoms, no more.

In Memoriam

In loving memory of our mother Alice Rudder, who passed away May 6 1978: Mom, its been six years ago today since God called you home.
As I took flowers and put on your grave, tears began to fill our eyes. Then I remember we will meet again in that beautiful city in the sky where God's little children will have no need to cry, and we never have to say goodbye.

Celebrate 62 Years

Mr. and Mrs. Bud Blanton, of McDowell, will have been married 62 years on May 11. They were married in 1922. Friends and relatives are invited to an open house, between 2 and 4 p.m. on Saturday, May 12, to celebrate the occasion.

Work To Do But Time Is Needed, Says McDonald

"There is a great deal of work to do," Superintendent of Public Instruction Alice McDonald said last week. She was speaking of the educational reforms enacted by the Kentucky General Assembly and the May and July meetings of the State Board of Education.

"Very few of the reforms can be implemented simply by a letter from my office," she said. "Most require action on the part of the State Board and many require long-range planning before subsequent board action can make the measures fully effective."

At its May 7-8 meeting, the state board will review legislation, discuss strategies and timelines for implementation and take action on several regulations. The high school textbook rental program, allocation of Minimum Foundation funds, essential skills testing in all grades in reading and math, the teacher testing and internship program, revisions in the program of studies and in the accreditation guidelines are among the items that will be discussed, McDonald said.

Other legislative mandates, such as the call for development of the "career ladder" for teachers and the newly required training programs for school board members and instructional leaders, will be considered at this meeting with actions pending at the July meeting.

The General Assembly passed 43 bills requiring action by the State Board and the Department of Education, McDonald said.

"So many measures, of such far-reaching importance were enacted that we as a staff had to sit down together and review each bill in order to assign the personnel and the duties necessary to carry out the legislative mandates," McDonald said.

The assignments were made at a two-day department workshop held in mid-April at the Kentucky State University Conference Center.

"We were impressed all over again with how much the General Assembly accomplished to better education in Kentucky," McDonald said. "The scope and significance of the legislature's actions cannot completely be appreciated on the spur-of-the-moment. It takes a little time to see how the measures fit together and how they will work to upgrade the quality of instruction."

"The legislators focused on accountability, on the quality of the educational services now being offered and on the provision and use of six hours of instruction every day five days a week," she continued. "New funds were scarce but the funds that were allocated go for those purposes. The bigger, more costly programs, such as the career ladder, will be developed over the next two years for legislative consideration in 1986."

Surcharge Extended For Gas Customers In Part of County

Customers of B&H Gas Co. will continue to pay a 58-cent surcharge based on usage through most of May, according to the state Public Service Commission.

Earlier this year, the Commission authorized B&H to make emergency gas purchases from Kentucky West Virginia Gas Company. To recover the additional cost of the emergency purchases, the Commission approved a 58-cent surcharge on customer bills from Jan. 1 through March 31. On April 9, B&H asked the Commission to extend the surcharge time through May because the surcharge revenues were $6,524 less than the cost of gas purchased from Kentucky West.

The Commission will allow B&H to add the surcharge to customer bills for April and May. Should B&H balance its account with Kentucky West before May 31, the company will cease billing the surcharge.

B&H Gas Co. serves about 355 customers in Stanville, Tram, Mare Creek, Toms Creek and part of the Betsy Layne community.

Place a small Christmas candle in a tiny liqueur glass as an accent to a plate of holiday cookies. Add some evergreens for color.

Christened April 1

Little Miss Betty Megan Barber, daughter of David and Margo Barber, was christened Sunday morning, April 1, at the Community United Methodist Church.

The Rev. Taylor Biggs conducted the ceremony and standing at the altar with her and her parents were Ron and Connie Cooley, grandparents, Buster and Delphia Patton, Loris and Thed May, and Molly Banks, great-grandparents, Mary Wright, godmother, and John Dotson, godfather.

Testing Date Changed

Prof. Walter Frasure, counselor at Prestonsburg Community College, has announced that, due to the fact that May 28 is a holiday, the GED testing schedule for that date has been cancelled. The test will be given on Monday, May 21. Questions concerning the test may be directed to Mr. Frasure at 886-3863.

Scenes Too Familiar in Floyd County

PRESTONSBURG WAS SPARED the extensive damage suffered by a number of other Floyd county towns although there were tense moments as residents watched the muddy water rise in the vicinity of the high school, shown here, and other lowlying sections.

VANCE AKERS and wife, Lana (at far right with daughter), are veterans of other floods, and this week they found themselves in the unpleasant but familiar situation of watching the approaching water and waiting to move household possessions.

JOB CORPSMEN turned out in force Monday evening to help local volunteers and city workers fill sandbags for protection against potential flood damage in Prestonsburg.

A FERRY SERVICE was provided by John and David Conn (manning the oars) at the mouth of Rice Branch of Prater Creek during the morning hours, Tuesday.

YOUNGSTERS CAN OFTEN make the best of a bad situation. At least this was the case Monday as Willie Watson, Dean Hall and Mike Kidd (pictured left to right), all of Honaker, splashed their way through the swollen waters which covered the road near the head of Little Mud Creek.

SOME MAYTOWN RESIDENTS in their elevated homes, simply sat on their porches and waited out the week's flooding.

FLOODWATERS, Monday, filled the bottom floor of Garrett Elementary and covered the bridge leading to it.

Mrs. Frazier Receives Award

The $500 Granville Presbyterian Church Award was presented by Jewell Cline, associate professor of education at Pikeville College, to the outstanding and most creative student-teacher. The award was presented at commencement, April 29, for the third time, and is sponsored by the First United Presbyterian Church, Granville, Ohio. It will be awarded to students through 1986.

Kitty Holbrook Frazier, the recipient of the prestigious award, graduated with a B.S. degree in elementary education. She is the wife of Gary Keith Frazier, principal of McDowell High School, and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Loren Holbrook, of Morehead.

"I was truly pleased and honored to receive the award," Mrs. Frazier said. "All the work, dedication and preparation that goes into student-teaching is worth it when you receive an award such as this. I plan to use the money toward supplies for the classroom and the students if I receive a teaching position."

She will attend graduate school at Morehead State University this summer to begin work on her master's degree.

How Safe Is Ultrasound?

By LUELLA KLEIN, M.D., President The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists

Recently, there has been a lot of attention focused on the use of ultrasound during pregnancy. A few months ago, a group of leading experts on ultrasound decided that after 25 years of use in this country, there was no scientific evidence that ultrasound harms either the mother or the fetus.

Before ultrasound was invented, doctors were forced to use x-rays if they needed to see what was happening with the developing fetus. Now, physicians can use high frequency sound waves to take a moving picture of the fetus in the womb to help them and you learn a tremendous amount about the health of your unborn child. Since medical procedures are not done routinely unless there is some benefit, the panel of experts found no reason to screen all pregnant women routinely with ultrasound.

We use ultrasound to determine the age and size of the fetus, if it is growing and developing on schedule, and to see if there is more than one. Ultrasound can be used from early in pregnancy to diagnose problems in the mother or fetus into labor to check the baby's well-being and position. It is used during and after childbirth to monitor the placenta.

If you have some medical condition that may or may not be related to pregnancy, such as diabetes or high blood pressure, your doctor may use ultrasound to make sure that your baby's development is not being affected. Certain tests during pregnancy, such as amniocentesis for birth defects, are made safer by the use of ultrasound.

However, if you are under 35, healthy with no continuing medical problems, and having a normal pregnancy, your doctor may not feel that an ultrasound is necessary. Ultrasound should not be performed just to get a "picture" of the baby nor to determine the baby's sex.

The ultrasound examination is simple and painless. You will be asked to drink fluids before the examination because a full bladder helps the operator locate the other organs. Pressure from your full bladder should be the only discomfort you feel.

As your abdomen will be exposed during the procedure, you might want to wear a two-piece outfit. You will lie down on an examining table, and the operator will put some oil or lubricating jelly on your skin to let the scanner move more smoothly across your stomach. As the scanner is moved up and down and back and forth across your abdomen, images will show up on a television-like screen. Although the black and white images may seem quite fuzzy to you, the operator can point out such details as outline of a head or a limb.

If you have any concerns about the safety of ultrasound, you should discuss them with your physician. Be reassured, however, that in almost 25 years of use, ultrasound has not been known to harm any mothers or children.

With the theme, "We're the Caring Kind," Our Lady of the Way Hospital joins hospitals throughout the nation to celebrate National Hospital Week 1984, May 6-12.

"This year's theme pays tribute to the special kind of people we have at our hospital," said Sr. James Edward, administrator. "Whether they be employees, volunteers, visitors, or board members, they are all people who are the caring kind. It is this commitment to caring that we celebrate this week."

Our Lady of the Way has planned a number of activities to observe National Hospital Week and to honor and encourage employees and volunteers. Included are:

- Presentation of awards to volunteers at a special tea;
- Reception and presentation of service awards to employees by our Board of Directors;
- Special prayer service for employees and patients in our chapel;
- Grand opening of "The Cherry Tree" gift shop in our main lobby (under the direction of Sr. Jeannette Tenborge, director of volunteers);
- For the community, free blood pressure clinic at the First Guaranty Bank.

A grain of musk will scent millions of cubic feet of air. Musk is the most penetrating and persistent scent.

'Quiet Place' Wins Silver Certificate

The KET-produced television adaptation of the play, "The Quiet Place," is a finalist in the Health and Physical Education category of the Birmingham International Educational Film Festival this year. The program has won a Silver Certificate of Recognition from the festival for the honor.

"The Quiet Place," written by Berea teacher and playwright Eddie Kennedy and performed by Kentucky high school students, was one of KET's contributions to the national "The Chemical People" campaign. "The Chemical People" project was a drug and alcohol abuse information and prevention campaign. "The Quiet Place" depicts the tragic consequences of abuse.

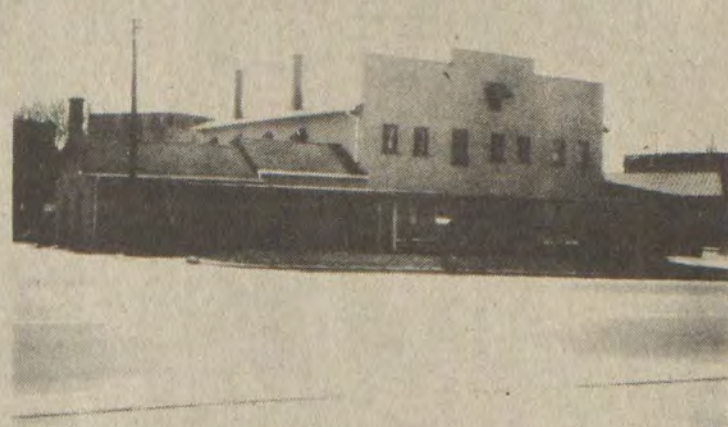

Now in its 12th year, the Birmingham International Educational Film Festival is dedicated to the premise that educational programs can be instructional and entertaining. Entries are submitted from all over the world. Last year, the KET-produced series, "The Business of Better Writing," received a Certificate of Recognition from the Festival.

Hay Fever

It has been more than a week that tree pollen has been in the air. Many people are having "cold" like symptoms. Some of the commonly known hay fever symptoms are as follows:

- 1. Watery eyes.
- 2. Runny nose.
- 3. Sinus congestion.
- 4. Cough and smothering.

Since the symptoms of a flu and hay fever may be so much alike, many times it is hard to distinguish between the two. Distinguishing from a "cold", suspect allergy problems such as hay fever if:

- 1. Symptoms reoccur about a certain time every year.
- 2. Symptoms last more than a week.
- 3. Almost no temperature.
- 4. No muscle aches and pains—commonly associated with viral infection.

Timing for different pollens:

- 1. Tree pollen—April thru May.
- 2. Grass pollen—May thru July.
- 3. Weed pollen—July thru September.

- Other hay fever symptoms:
- 1. Rashes.
- 2. Dizziness.
- 3. Tiredness.
- 4. Lack of appetite.
- 5. Colitis, possible.

- Things to do:
- 1. Avoid pollen exposure.
- 2. Investigation of the allergy problem and desensitization.

In 1714 Daniel-Gabriel Fahrenheit, comparing the boiling points of a number of liquids, introduced the familiar scale still known by his name.

State Agency Here Involved In Protecting Abused Adults

When a baby or a small child in this county is beaten or seriously neglected, authorities move to enforce child abuse laws and to protect the young victims who are unable to protect themselves. But what about abused adults who can't fend for themselves—elderly people, the adults with disabilities, the abused spouses? These citizens also have a law and agencies to protect them. According to Cabinet for Human Resources Secretary Al Austin, the Department for Social Services office in Floyd county can provide help through its Adult Protective Services workers.

"Simply put, that's their mandate," said Austin, "to investigate alleged abuse or neglect, to assist adults in Kentucky who need protection and to help those citizens find the support necessary to avoid the same kind of abuse in the future."

Harrietta Ranier, Social Services field office supervisor for Floyd county, agrees. "Our adult protection workers are dedicated beyond resolving a single incident in the life of a person referred to our office," she said. "In every case, we attempt to link the individual with available services that can help that person remain independent. It is not our intent to protect people by imposing some highly restrictive service. Instead, we look for options such as the in-home and home health services available across Kentucky. We want to avoid a continuation of the abusive situation and at the same time maintain the client's independence."

Last year 4,939 cases of suspected adult abuse or neglect were referred to the Department for Social Services for investigation and assistance. At least 28 of those cases involved citizens of Floyd county.

Richard Newman, manager of the Adult Protective Services branch in Frankfort, said most of Kentucky's adult abuse or neglect cases fall into four categories: self-neglect, mental or physical abuse, caretaker neglect and exploitation.

"Self-neglect is probably the most frustrating situation of all," said Newman. "Most of these cases involve adults who are old or disabled and have difficulty functioning on their own. Often they don't realize they can benefit from some outside assistance—assistance that won't deprive them of their independence or dignity. Many elderly people have never needed government help and look upon our social workers as though we're trying to interfere with their right to live as they choose. It's almost always a very sensitive situation until we can show that all we want to do is help them help themselves."

Almost as challenging to deal with, according to Newman, are the cases of physical and mental abuse. "Approximately half of these cases involve spouse abuse. However, we also see numerous incidents of family members who take out their frustrations on older relatives. And, some cases involve harassment of older family members for financial assets," he said.

IN APPRECIATION

We take this opportunity to thank every customer we have had in the past. Due to the fire that destroyed our business on April 12, we are no longer serving the public. We have been in business many long years at this location and enjoyed and are thankful for our customers. We will certainly miss being there. We also want to thank all the fire departments, firemen, friends and neighbors that came to help that night. We will never forget. Thank God our homes were spared. May God bless each and everyone.

Thanks again,

The failure of an institution or individual to provide the proper assistance to a dependent adult constitutes caretaker neglect. The institution could be a nursing home, a family care home, a provider of in-home services or any other agency responsible for providing specific services.

Exploitation is the misuse of an individual's government benefit funds by another person or agency. This category includes misappropriation of unemployment benefits, social security checks or other government assistance funds.

Newman said the first step in all cases referred to Adult Protective Services is to set up direct contact between the staff and the affected individual. "When appropriate, we attempt to put the victim in touch with community services that can help prevent future abuse, neglect or exploitation," he said.

Floyd countians can help adults who need assistance by contacting the Department for Social Services and its Adult Protective Services workers. "In cases of child abuse, the problems may come to the attention of a teacher or a physician, who sees that help is obtained," said Ms. Ranier. "That's not as common with adults. We need the assistance of anyone—friends, neighbors, medical professionals—who suspect an individual's health or welfare may be in jeopardy."

"Many abused adults," she added, "don't know they can get help and still live their own lives. Our job is to protect people, sometimes from themselves, but most often from others who would take advantage of them."

Third Lecture Slated

Mountain Comprehensive Care Center announces the third in a series of lectures on the elderly and related subjects. Barry Keith Hamilton of Prestera Mental Health Center, Huntington, W. All those involved in providing services to the elderly as well as all other interested people are encouraged to attend.

You can't see a natural gas leak, but you can look for some common signs.

Unfortunately, natural gas is invisible. And by itself, natural gas is odorless. That's why we add a distinctive smell before it enters your home. For your protection. Although natural gas leaks are uncommon, we add that smell so you'll be able to recognize them should one ever occur. There are other recognizable signs, too. And it's important that you know them, and know what to do should you spot one.

Common signs include: A smell of gas inside or outside. ☐ A hissing noise. ☐ Blowing dirt. ☐ Bubbling water over a submerged pipe. ☐ Or dying vegetation around service lines.

If you smell gas in or around your home: First check to see if a pilot light or burner may be out. ☐ If not, and you still sense a leak, call your gas company. Be aware the source of a gas odor could be external — gas from service lines or street mains that could migrate into your premises through walls or drain lines.

If you are inside and detect the odor of gas: Open doors and windows. ☐ Shut off gas appliance valves or meter valve. ☐ Don't use matches, electric switches or appliances. ☐ If the odor is strong, leave the house, call your gas company from nearby and stay there until a representative arrives.

If you are outside in an open area: Eliminate, if possible, potential sources for ignition and leave the area. ☐ Call your gas company from another location.

Columbia Gas is concerned about your safety, and we're proud to say calls reporting leaks are few. If you or someone in your family isn't familiar with the smell of gas, call your Columbia Gas offices and ask for a scented folder. Together we can keep your natural gas service safe and efficient.

Jane Fonda's new stretch

By Katy Koontz

You swear it isn't her at first, this woman you see tramping on horseback through the woods, carrying a sick child. When she flags down a car and starts pleading for help, her voice is even farther from what you know it to be. And when the boy stops breathing and she, without thinking, takes out a penknife and cuts a hole in his trachea to save him (calmly saying, "There's no time for doctors now"), you can't believe it's Jane Fonda, but it is.

The actress who we've seen as a prostitute, a reporter, a sex object and a secretary is now portraying Gertie Nevels, the Kentucky farm woman who moves to Detroit with her husband and five children on "The Dollmaker," airing May 13 on ABC. In this film, Miss Fonda shows us more of the stuff that won her two Oscars (for "Klute" and "Coming Home").

In a role that took 12 years to complete, she says, "I was frightened all the time that the day would come when we would have the script and we would have the money and the crew would be hired and everyone would be ready to go, and I wouldn't be able to perform Gertie. When it came to actually doing it, it was the easiest thing I ever did. I was so ready — I was like ripe fruit."

To prepare for the role, she spent three weeks living with people she'd met when Dolly Parton, her co-star in "Nine-to-Five" who was born in the same hills, took her through Missouri, Tennessee, Kentucky and Arkansas.

But even harder than learning the accent and the lifestyle was filming the scene where Gertie's daughter Cassie is killed by a train. "I didn't have anything running through my head except the reality for Gertie," Miss Fonda says, choking back tears. "I mean, it was my daughter, and it was my daughter who was my most beloved, and I still can't even talk about it."

Jane Fonda in "The Dollmaker," airing May 13 on ABC.

KOVACS' STORY

Jeff Goldblum (l.) stars as Ernie Kovacs, and Melody Anderson plays Edie Adams, who stood by the comic genius during his personal tragedy in "Ernie Kovacs: Between the Laughter," airing MONDAY, MAY 14 on ABC.

Peter O'Toole

INDIAN INTRIGUE

Peter O'Toole, Bryan Brown and John Rhys-Davies star in "Kim," a Rudyard Kipling story about a half-British, half-Indian boy raised in the streets and alley-ways of India. The boy (played by half-American half-Indian Ravi Sheth) befriends a Buddhist monk (O'Toole) and becomes his pupil. When the pair leaves the city on a holy quest, their adventures just begin. The show airs May 16 on CBS.

BEAUTY QUEEN — Bob Barker will host this year's Miss USA pageant, airing live May 17 on CBS. For the first time, Miss Teen USA will be represented as a delegate-at-large, joining her 51 fellow competitors (one from each state and the District of Columbia), each of whom try to convince the judges that she deserves the crown. Pedal Power Vs. Cystic Fibrosis

Each year more people are finding that they can bike their way to a healthier life.

Here, in Prestonsburg, bikers also can bike their way to help support a healthier life for the children and young adults who suffer from the number one genetic killer of young people in the United States—Cystic Fibrosis.

Cystic Fibrosis is an incurable, lung-damaging and digestive disease, according to the Kentucky-West Virginia Chapter of the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation, sponsor of the CF bike-a-thon on May 19 at Jenny Wiley State Park.

"Only when people become parents of a CF child do they know that they are carriers of the CF gene," according to the Jaycees, and Jaycee Women, chairpeople of the event. "The Foundation is funding research to find an effective carrier test and to find a control for Cystic Fibrosis," they said. Although there is yet no cure for Cystic Fibrosis, earlier diagnosis and more effective treatment now mean that about half of the children born today with CF can be expected to live past the age of 20—once such children never lived to start school.

According to the Jaycee's, "Accurate early diagnosis is sometimes difficult because CF symptoms mimic other lung and digestive disorders such as chronic bronchitis, allergy and asthma."

The signs of CF include a salty taste of the skin, recurrent wheezing, persistent coughing with excessive mucus, pneumonia more than once, excessive appetite with poor weight gain, and enlargement of the fingertips. Additional signs include persistent, bulky diarrhea and nasal polyps.

"Every year of research added more than one year to the average life expectancy of a CF child during the past 10 years," a CF Foundation spokesman said. "Funds from this event will help to insure continued research."

Benefit Dinner Slated At McDowell High School

The Left Beaver Rescue Squad will hold a chicken and dumpling dinner at the McDowell High School cafeteria from 11:30 until 3 p.m., Saturday, May 12. Tickets may be obtained from any squad member or at the door. All proceeds will be used to further work of the organization.

Members will also man roadblocks at Martin and at various places on Left Beaver, Memorial Day. The public's support of these efforts will be greatly appreciated.

The Kentucky Garden Journal

By Bonnie Lee Appleton
State Urban Garden & Home Horticulture Specialist
COOPERATIVE EXTENSION PROGRAM
KENTUCKY STATE UNIVERSITY

As the weather warms up this spring, those of us who like colorful flowers in our gardens will begin making trips to garden centers, nurseries, discount stores, grocery stores, hardware stores and other likely and unlikely places that plants are now sold to purchase our 1984 display. Two flats of petunias, a dozen potted geraniums, three six packs of marigolds—and look at the bill! How could those few little flowers cost so many big dollars?

Are there ways to cut some costs and avoid these annual buying trips, planting hours and yet still have pretty posies? You bet. It may require a bit more hunting for plants initially and a little more precise garden design, but one reward can be an almost effortless year-round floral display. (And please, I'm not suggesting using plastic flowers that keep blooming through the snow!)

What I'm advocating is the use of more perennial flowers and not just the "usuals"—iris, peonies, daylilies, hollyhocks—or the spring bulbs—daffodils, tulips, etc. Little forget-me-nots and anemones can be tucked in four blues and purples in the spring. A wide range of daisy relatives can provide cut flower bouquets in summer. And there's even the Christmas rose (not a true rose—a hellebore) that grows up and blooms right through a snow cover.

Because people are looking for alternatives to buying and planting annuals (plants living only one growing season), perennials are increasing in popularity. Wider varieties are offered each year at local markets and through mail order sources.

With careful selection of species, a perennial garden in Kentucky can be in bloom from February through November. Once planted, most perennials require relatively few expenditures or maintenance. But because they will live for many years in one location, a good planting design should be developed that blends size, color and bloom time for the different plants selected.

While it is true that annuals generally bloom continuously for a longer period of time than perennials (most perennials bloom for two weeks to two months per year), and generally have large numbers of flowers, there are more plant and flower sizes and shapes, and more flower colors available with perennials.

The initial purchase of perennial plants can be moderately expensive although you can save money by starting many species from seed. Many species naturally propagate new plants each year as their roots and/or stems branch and divide, so if generous friends have plants you can often get a "start" free.

Many people who like cut flowers worry that they won't be able to use perennials for cutting, but most perennials work well as cut flowers. Try coropsis in place of cosmos or mixed perennial gaillardias in place of zinnias.

Not only is the use of perennial flowers increasing but so is the blending of annuals and perennials. Mixing the two types of plants can decrease costs, increase the bloom season, give more cut flowers, and in the perennial garden, summer annuals can fill spots where spring perennials have already bloomed.

Many of the perennials that are grown mainly for their foliage can serve as outstanding background plants for annuals. In the shade, try brightly colored impatiens or begonias in front of dark green hostas, or in full sun, petunias in front of silver-leaved lamb's ear or silvermound (artemisia).

Some annuals can actually become "perennial" in nature if they are allowed to go to seed in our gardens. Annuals such as alyssum, ageratum and portulaca (moss rose) will reseed themselves year after year—just get to know what their seedlings look like so you don't "weed" them out of your garden when their seeds germinate in the spring.

It just goes to show there are ways to save money and yet have quality and variety in the flower garden.

Timely Tip: As cool season transplants go into the spring vegetable garden and we plan for summer tomatoes, we worry about the little worms that like to snip off young plant tops—the cutworms. New lawn areas turned over for garden space can be sterilized with Vapam or put under plastic by the sun to kill these pests. Insecticides can be watered in around seedlings and transplants (diazinon) or sprayed on young plants (Sevin, malathion, Dipel). Mechanical barriers such as paper cups and aluminum foil collars can be fitted around juicy young stems. With a little extra effort before or at planting time, a whole lot of future grief can be avoided.

The annual per capita consumption of soap in the United States is about forty pounds.
