FLOYD COUNTY CLEANUP WEEK, proclaimed well before last week's major flooding, for May 14-18, took on much greater significance in view of the tons of debris created by the high water alone. Monday morning found county officials and Floyd County Solid Waste personnel gathered at the county landfill at Garth to launch what is hoped to be a successful assault on the county's enormous litter and garbage problem. Pictured with drivers and workmen are, from left (front center), David Cooley, Solid Waste director, Bob McAninch, president and chairman of the board of Floyd County Solid Waste, and Floyd County Judge-Executive John M. Stumbo.

Isolated Lodge Now Accessible

Isolated eight days by a rising Dewey Lake which cut its lone access road, May Lodge at Jenny Wiley State Park was accessible to the public Tuesday for the first time since May 7.

The lake level rose to a crest of 674.82—24.82 feet above conservation pool—while the water was held behind Dewey Dam to protect downstream communities during the flood period. May Lodge was reached only by boat and, except for lodge personnel, was virtually deserted.

The Goble Branch camping area access road also was cut, and the campground operated by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers at German was completely flooded. German bridge remained under water Tuesday.

Dean Murray, reservoir manager, said a survey of the campground damage must await a lower lake stage.

As a result of the flooding, fishermen fear that this year's fish spawn at Dewey Lake is lost. Any early spawn has lain under 25 feet or more of muddy water, and spawn which followed the rise of the water will be left high and dry as the water subsides.

Relief Center Open

The disaster-assistance center operated by the American Red Cross out of Allen Central High School at Eastern is receiving applications for flood relief from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 1-6 p.m. Sunday.

State Supt. Praises Board of Education As Future Watched

Local school districts are responsible for identifying and correcting their own problems, members of the state Board of Education said at their May 8 meeting.

The state panel endorsed a statement to that effect by Superintendent of Public Instruction Alice McDonald. Her remarks came in the course of a report to the board on a Department of Education probe into complaints made by a citizens' group last year against the Floyd Board of Education and Superintendent E.P. Grigsby, Jr.

Superintendent McDonald praised Floyd schools for recent improvements but said she remains concerned about future progress. She will make specific recommendations to the state board at its July meeting, she added.

By that time, she will have results of Floyd's spring testing program, a report on corrections made as part of the school district's accreditation plan, and a report on other improvements ordered by the state board, Mrs. McDonald said.

The state superintendent noted that in many school districts, citizens and parents are trying to get involved in educational issues. "In the districts that are doing a good job, increased parental involvement will bring continued and greater academic successes," she said. "In districts where management practices are questionable, however, it will mean the light of public inquiry and the heat of public scorn."

Citing a statement of a Clinton county school board member, who was reported as saying it was the state's obligation to identify and cure local school problems, McDonald said accountability must begin at the bottom as well as at the top.

The state Department of Education is responsible for enforcing school laws and regulations and for providing leadership, "but it also seems to me that education is more than just enforcement from the top," the state official said. "After all, the need to enforce implies a failure of individual civic responsibility."

"What kind of society would we have if every citizen depended upon the enforcers to make every other citizen behave in a responsible manner?" she asked. "We have talked about local control in the school districts for years. Clearly, we have not talked enough about local responsibility."

City Council To Seek New Cable Operator

Prestonsburg City Council voted Monday to look for a new cable television operator and to test the feasibility of organizing a city rescue squad.

Following the breakdown of talks with Cablenetertainment, Inc., the city's franchised cable operator, council members instructed City Attorney Larry Brown to file suit against the firm, charging breach of contract.

Floyd Circuit Judge Hollie Conley will be asked to void the franchise agreement with Cablenetertainment and the city will advertise for a new operator, according to the council decision.

City officials say Cablenetertainment has been slow to pay licensing fees and some question whether the firm is paying Prestonsburg the full three percent of gross revenues the franchise agreement calls for. The cable firm has refused to turn over its books for an audit, said City Manager David Evans.

Council members said Cablenetertainment has been unresponsive to demands for better service and raised HBO rates without council approval. In fact, the firm's 1981 purchase of the system from Midwest Corporation itself lacked the required city approval, they said.

Cablenetertainment has reportedly been looking for buyers for systems the firm owns in Ohio and West Virginia as well as here. Paul Gearheart, operator of the Harold-based Tel-Com, Inc., is said to have been interested in buying the Prestonsburg system until Cablenetertainment insisted on selling all three systems as a single package.

The decision to explore the possibility of operating a city rescue squad followed sharp criticism of the Floyd County Rescue Squad by Prestonsburg Fire Chief Tom Blackburn. The rescue unit, which operates as an independent, volunteer agency out of a building adjacent to Prestonsburg grade school, refused to cooperate with city and county agencies during last week's flood emergency, Blackburn charged.

While city rescue workers had two boats furnished by the state Division of Water Enforcement, requests for more boats from the Floyd County Rescue Squad went unheeded, the fire chief said. Bud Alexander, rescue squad captain, said he was unaware of some of the calls itemized by Blackburn and that, in any event, his crews were busy during the flood in other sections of the county.

Blackburn explained later that he did

Sec. Baldwin Surveys Damage

Natural Resources Secretary Charlotte Baldwin, pictured here surveying damage to the Martin water plant with plant manager, Glenn Patton, arrived Tuesday afternoon along with officials of the Department for Environmental Protection on a tour of flooded areas in three Eastern Kentucky counties. Besides assessing damage to the Martin plant which was covered by some four feet of water during last week's flood, other stops will include Barbourville (Knox county), and Pippa Passes in Knott.

Job Corps Improves Image by Flood Help

After a spate of negative publicity, Prestonsburg Job Corps Center has moved recently to improve its public image and students there—some of them chafing under tighter rules imposed in the wake of recent criticism—saw in last week's flood a chance to prove their mettle.

"We're in charge of this clean-up," announced Scottie Ross, of Atlanta, who was part of a work detail moving damaged furniture out of the Archer Park Senior Citizens' Center Thursday. "We're glad to be able to help sometimes."

Helping out in the community was the theme of newspaper advertisements taken out last week by the Corps management and by Prestonsburg Mayor Harold Cooley, who proclaimed

May as Job Corps Community Appreciation Month.

In his proclamation, the mayor took note of the right of every citizen to "equal opportunity under the law." But the advertisements seemed designed not so much to promote community respect for the Job Corps as to express the Corps' appreciation to the community.

"We're hoping we can earn the respect of Prestonsburg," said Gary Kuykendall, a Corps member from Atlanta. Thomas Caldwell, of Florida agreed. "All we been hearing is people putting us down, like we're the bad part of the whole territory," he said. "We are not out to 'get' the community but to help."

'SNOW ON THE HILLSIDE'

Every spring, when the white of dogwood bloom dots the green of the hillsides, I am reminded of the bit of doggerel which young swains of another day were wont to write in the books of their favorite girls at school. It ran to this effect:

Snow on the hillside,
Sun can't melt it.
I love you
And I can't help it.

A few more days and this "snow on the hillside" that sun can't melt will be only another bitter-sweet memory till another year and another spring.

Flood Invaded 1700 Premises In County, Officials Report

A legacy of mud awaited residents and merchants from one end of the county to the other last week as waters from east Kentucky's first major flood in six years began to recede.

Sticky as treacle on riverbank yards in Wayland... slick as ice on the Archer Park pavement... "up to your knees" at the McDowell school... rolling in sluggish waves before a hundred squeegees... the ooze made clean-up a daunting prospect in the 1703 Floyd premises county officials say were flooded.

Water shortages didn't help. Town water systems and volunteer fire departments struggled to keep up with the demand. But for the Beaver-Elkhorn system, serving the hard-hit arms of Beaver Creek, it was too much. McDowell Principal Gary Frazier, impatient to deploy the small army of workers he had assembled to reclaim that sprawling campus, waited until Thursday for the water to come on. By Friday it was off again.

"If we had the water, we could be open Monday," Frazier said last week. "But I don't see how we can do that now." They didn't. Most Floyd schools, with six days lost on account of the flooding, were not able to reopen until Tuesday. The McDowell schools were expected to reopen today (Wednesday).

Nor was it clear this week what federal help might be available for repairs and rebuilding. Floyd was one of 14 Kentucky counties declared disaster areas by Gov. Martha Layne Collins and survey teams from the Federal Emergency Management Agency were sent in to assess the damage. But there was still no word from President Ronald Reagan this week as to which, if any, counties might be declared eligible for federal aid.

After a shaky start—the volume of applicants at first swamped the few trained workers—American Red Cross volunteers began this weekend to distribute vouchers to flood victims for furniture, clothing and other urgent needs. Applications were being processed at a single center, Allen Central High School, but Judge-Executive John M. Stumbo asked that other centers be set up here.

A Red Cross tractor-trailer rolled into Prestonsburg earlier with a load of cleaning kits. Drinking water was trucked in from the Winchester Farm and Dairy Company. The state health department furnished tetanus vaccine. And, around the county, householders and storekeepers set about the tedious task of mopping up.

While a crew from the Southeast Floyd County Volunteer Fire Department hosed down the main street at Bypro, Job Corps students lugged a sodden pool table out of the Prestonsburg senior citizens' center. While first grade teachers Elta Scott and Lenice Manns worked to put their Garrett school classrooms back in order, Principal Ralph O'Quinn had truckloads of ruined books carted off.

The school had raised $5000 a year for the past five years to stock a library of which the Garrett school was justly proud, O'Quinn said. Now, books and supplies worth an estimated $35,000 lay heaped in a soggy pile by the fire station on Stone Coal. "When I drive by, I just

A VIOLENT SIDE to last week's flooding showed up in upper reaches of streams where large volumes of water at high velocity swept away bridges and even destroyed some small buildings such as Ernest C. Dorton's grocery at Weeksbury which collapsed into the headwaters of Left Beaver Creek.

Armyworm Next Pest Expected

Armyworm moth flight has begun over the western portion of Kentucky, and during May and June, this pest will show up in virtually all small grain fields in the state.

Although the armyworm is widespread, populations don't usually reach economically important levels, according to Dr. Doug Johnson, Extension entomologist with the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

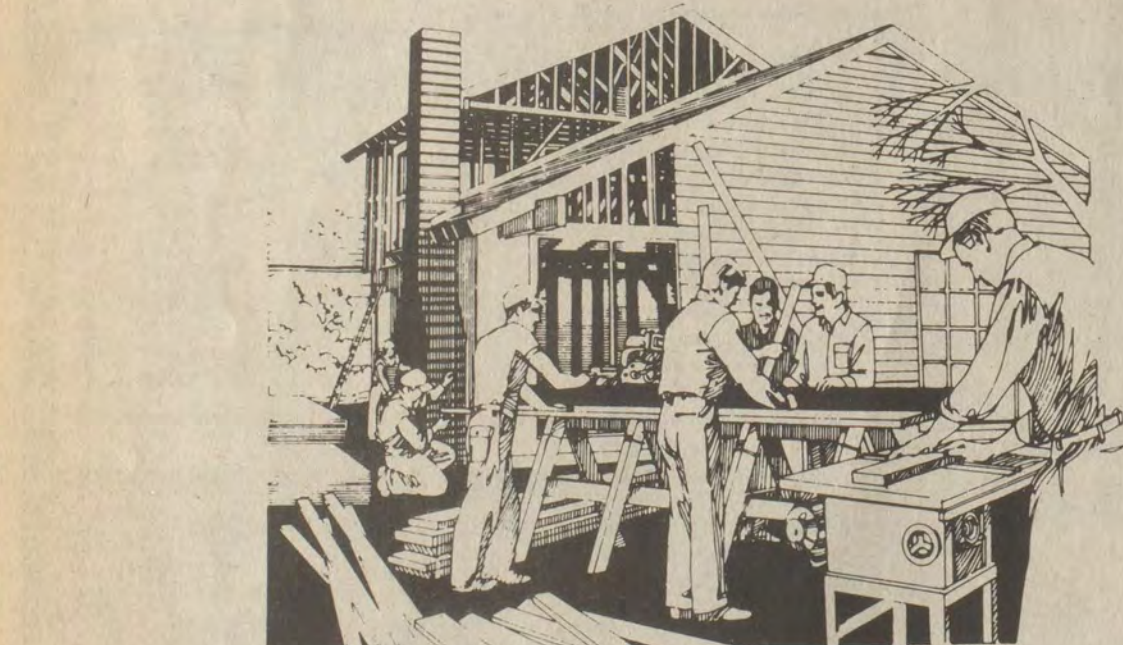

Johnson, who is headquartered at UK's Research and Education Center near Princeton, says the damaging stage of this pest is the larval or "worm" state. The worm has a light yellow body and a brown head and may reach a length of one and one-half inches.

"The armyworm is primarily a leaf feeding pest," said the entomologist. "Feeding normally occurs during low light periods, such as early morning, evenings and on cloudy days."

Johnson said it is not unusual to spot armyworm damage, but not see the pest. If field checking is done during the middle of the day, he suggests checking the ground and low on the plants for the pests.

Scouting is done by counting the number of worms found in four-square-foot plots. Several such plots should be examined in each field, and if an average of 16 one-half to three-fourths inch worms are found per plot, control measures should be applied, according to Johnson.

County Extension agents for agriculture can answer questions concerning the correct identification of the armyworm and proper control measures, should they be economically warranted.

A Humiliating Reminder

The American Red Cross reminded Floyd and surrounding counties last week of a matter that is rather humiliating to us all.

The reminder came not in so many words, but in kindly deeds, and so was all the more eloquent, if not downright galling.

For 50 years Floyd Chapter, American Red Cross, served the people of this county alone. As time passed and the county continued to fail of reaching its small annual quota of funds to support the chapter, it ended its work and was merged with three adjacent counties in the Big Sandy Area Chapter. Then the day finally came, early this year, when this four-county chapter closed its doors because the four counties had failed to reach a quota of only $6000. We had been warned that this would happen but the warning failed to spur us to any real effort toward fund-raising.

Then last week's disastrous floodwaters came, and who was back, lending a hand, providing food, helping families restore lost belongings, joining other agencies in a giant mission of mercy? The American Red Cross. Not Floyd Chapter nor the Big Sandy Area Chapter—neither exists—but the national Red Cross.

That was the reminder that, though we may be undeserving, our failure to support the Red Cross, which has never failed these counties in their long history of emergencies, was not held against us... that the Red Cross stood ready to give of its national resources the thousands or the millions that might be needed to meet our need.

And that is our humiliation.

PRECISELY SPEAKING

The youngest grandson may have a bent to the literary. He hasn't got around to the nuances of expression and the delicate shades of meaning in words, but he shows promise. For example:

A few days ago he came a cropper from a height of a few feet which resulted in a cut chin, a trip to the doctor and a few stitches. Later, a young friend expressed some curiosity.

"Hurt a little bit, didn't it?" he asked, for a starter.

"No."

"Didn't it hurt a little bit when the doctor put the stitches in?"

"It did not hurt a little bit," was the slow, deliberate answer. "It hurt a bigger bit!"

ON PINS AND NEEDLES

For one whose purchases of new raiment are few and, as they say, far between, the business of getting inside a brand-new shirt and suit can be a trial, especially so if you get a late start on the job, as I did, and have only a short time to complete it.

I thought I was doing all right, for a spell. Take the shirt, first. Out comes the pin that holds one sleeve. Then the other. Then the celluloid do-hickey in the collar is removed, the buttons are unbuttoned, and it's ready to go on. But there's still something wrong with the collar, and it's not a button. There it is—another pin. Why? The collar was buttoned—why a pin?

Anyway, that chore was completed. The shirt and trousers are on, and now the coat. Little problem here—just put the thing on, grab a handkerchief and sally forth in all your store-bought glory. But, so help me, just as I was ready to announce that I was ready to travel and couldn't understand why everybody else wasn't ready, too, I attempted to put something in an outside coat pocket. And discovered that it and the companion pocket on the other side were both firmly stitched inside the top.

A collar pinned that was already buttoned, and two pockets that were made, presumably, to contain things, stitched so tightly nothing could get inside. Wonder what the manufacturers charged for those little extras?

If it isn't so long before I buy new clothes again that I have forgotten all this, think I'll delay my next outfitting till a Father's Day when I'm granted special roarin' privileges.

One of the reasons Corps students are anxious to patch up relations with the community, Calwell explained, is that recent allegations of lax discipline have caused Center officials to tighten the rules, especially regarding student excursions off campus. "Now we can't get off center any time without supervision. We feel like we're in jail," the student said.

In their advertisement, Corps officials listed community projects undertaken by Center students at the Allen pool, Archer Park and a Goble Roberts playground. Flood prevention, rescue and salvage work last week should give them many more examples to cite.

If students from the Job Corps appeared eager to be seen at work last week, they had a reason. As Greg Skinner, of Louisville, put it: "We hope the Center and the community can get along better."

not intend to criticize the Floyd County squad but only to point out that Prestonsburg needed its own rescue squad. One proposal would purchase additional equipment, such as boats and a four-wheel-drive vehicle, for the city's existing Squad 6.

The council voted to commend Paul Chaffins—the city codes enforcement officer who coordinated disaster and emergency services—and city fire and police departments for their response during the flood. A letter of appreciation will be sent also to the Job Corps for its assistance.

A request by Prestonsburg attorney Cassie Allen for city support for reorganizing a regional chapter of the American Red Cross—the local chapter closed here last year after 55 years—won initial council approval and was scheduled for fuller discussion at the council's May 28 meeting.

At that meeting, a proposal for tightening Prestonsburg parking regulations and appointing a one-person commission to enforce them will also be discussed.

Following a recent meeting between city and Chessie System officials, neither an underpass nor an alternative railroad crossing at the Goble Roberts Addition appears feasible, the council was told. The city will now explore with the state Transportation Cabinet the possibility of building a new bridge to serve that community.

Students Study in Washington

McDowell High School "Close-Up" students have returned from Washington, D.C., where they completed a week of government study. While in Washington they met with Congressman Carl D. Perkins and Senator Wendell Ford. They toured Washington and Georgetown, stopping for a close look at various monuments and places of interest. On Thursday night they attended the Harlequin Dinner Theatre where "Kiss Me Kate" was playing.

Those attending Close-Up '84 were first row, Patricia Howell, Kelli Stumbo, Shelly Dye, Linda Hall, Kimberly Lawson, Gail Lafferty; second row, Mike Potter, Mark Hicks, Julian Slone, Matthew Dye, Mrs. Slone, and Keith Gayheart. Not pictured: Chris Croot, Tim Maggard, Marion Krumm, Randy turn my head," the principal said. Maudie Luxmore, 86, of Price, back home Thursday after spending two nights with her son, was pacing herself. "I'm going to work a day and rest a day," she said. But she didn't have the heart to start over on her garden. "I had an awful pretty garden—potatoes, onions, mustards, tomatoes," she said. "I ain't got nothing now."

In front of the Lackey home she lives in with her husband, Fred, and the two homes they rent to others nearby, Daily Robinson had muddy furniture stacked high enough to melt an insurance adjuster's heart. She had to threaten to call the law to stop one tenant family from moving back in, she said. "They called me everything. But I couldn't let them go back in the way it is, the two kids and all, getting disease."

Maintenance worker Clyde DeRossett eased mud off the Archer Park tennis courts with a squeegee while Patsy Evans, director of the senior citizens' center nearby, tried to find another place—St. Martha's Church at Water Gap offered to help—to operate the program for the two months she thinks it will take to restore the center.

Raymond Griffith, mayor of Martin, sat on a borrowed couch in his home on aptly-named River Street and waited for the phone company. He said that, as soon as they got his phone back on, he would be calling U.S. Congressman Carl D. Perkins to find out why it was taking so long to get federal help. "I've got an 84-year-old man completely destroyed," he said. "What am I going to do?"

"Trouble is, they sent complete strangers in," said the mayor, referring to the federal officials who fanned out through eastern Kentucky to estimate flood damage last week. "We are local people. We know our local needs."

But Griffith was one of many who wanted to record their thanks for those who helped. Martin water system employees, under Superintendent Glenn Patton, "worked round the clock" to get the city's water back on, he noted. Katie Newsome, editor of Wheelwright's Hometown News, listed county solid waste workers among the heroes. And Garrett Principal O'Quinn couldn't speak highly enough of the "volunteer fire department, PTO, teachers and neighbors" who pitched in there.

A caller wanted to see that Magistrate Lowell Samons got credit for many long days on Prater Creek, hit by floodwaters three weekends in a row. Among the "bunch of dedicated people" he had working with him, McDowell Principal Frazier singled out Edward Ray Moore and Randy Martin, who operated an endloader two days moving mud. And Patsy Evans named the Job Corps. "They've been a great help. They really have," she said.

Considering the fears of flooding expressed by Right Beaver residents when new KY 80 was built, few seemed ready to blame the highway for last week's high water. Martin Mayor Griffith thought it made the flooding worse in Maytown and on Stephens Branch but may even have improved things in Martin.

Katie Newsome was convinced the flooding around Wheelwright would have been much reduced except for the trash in Left Beaver Creek. "We can't help the rain, but the garbage we can help," she said, adding, "We're going to have to start talking to our neighbors about throwing it in the creek."

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers took the opportunity to promote the dams they are trained to build, estimating the eastern Kentucky flood damage at a surprisingly high $234 million and arguing that it would have been a lot worse—the Fishtrap Dam in Pike county helped reduce the flood level by more than six feet in Prestonsburg, a Corps spokesman claimed—without the dams already constructed.

But most attributed the flood to more elemental causes. "It's rained off and on for two months. The ground was full of water. It had to go somewhere," was Estill resident Larry Blair's reasoning.

"When you live next to a creek bank you know how it is," said Bruce Salisbury, of Martin. "You can't get away from nature," was Allen Mayor Obie Crisp's succinct analysis. Or, as Daily Robinson saw it, "It's the Lord's work. He sent this for a purpose."

Whatever the cause, it was the last straw for Dot Marshall, who said she won't be reopening her Lad 'n' Lassie clothing store in Martin. "It's more than I can take," she said this week.

But Paul Hunt Thompson, who operates the IGA grocery nearby and estimated he suffered around $60,000 in losses, vowed he would be open this Friday. "A lot thought we'd be getting out," he said. "But I'd stay in just to be stubborn."

Judge Sentences Four Floyd Men On Guilty Pleas

Sentences were imposed recently on four who entered guilty pleas and testified for the prosecution in the trial earlier this year of Prestonsburg coal operator Edgar Jones and 17 others on federal conspiracy charges.

Jake Moore, 43, and Philman Caudill, 36, both of McDowell, were each sentenced by U.S. District Judge G. Wix Unthank to 16 months in prison for conspiracy to violate the Hobbs Act, a federal anti-racketeering statute, in connection with a violent demonstration in February, 1982 at the Ray-Mac strip-mine near East McDowell.

Van B. Patton, 37, formerly of McDowell, was sentenced to 16 months for carrying a gun during the disturbance and Phillip Gene Booth, 34, of McDowell, received an identical term for conspiring to violate federal firearm laws "during the course of the Ray-Mac investigation."

Booth and his former wife, Pearl, pleaded guilty to a charge of selling dynamite and weapons to an undercover agent in exchange for money and cocaine in August, 1982.

Patton will begin serving his time May 29 at the federal penitentiary in Houston, where he now lives. The others were ordered to report to the Federal Correctional Institute in Lexington on May 18.

Sentencing has been scheduled May 25 for Jones, German Stumbo, Teddy Kinney, Kenneth Rowland and Mose Mead, who were convicted in April of conspiracy to violate the Hobbs Act and other federal violations resulting from the Ray-Mac violence.

Witness Clears Metals Dealer

Charges against a West Prestonsburg scrap metal dealer accused of receiving stolen copper coolers have been dismissed after a witness on whose testimony prosecutors were relying reportedly changed his story.

Assistant Commonwealth's Attorney Albert A. Burchett agreed to drop charges against Gary McCoy, owner of the Mountain Metal Company, after it appeared that a statement given to police by a Catlettsburg man tended to exonerate the metal dealer.

Joseph Lee Stanley, 27, originally told police he sold McCoy copper coolers stolen from the Ashland plant of Armco Steel. He received $13,265 for 27,000 pounds of copper between December, 1982 and April, 1983, he said.

In return for his anticipated testimony against McCoy, prosecutors made a deal with Stanley, who himself faced six charges of receiving stolen property, carrying a possible penalty of 40 years in prison. Under the agreement, he received a five-year sentence on one count and received probated five-year terms on the other five counts.

In a statement to Armco security officers last October, however, Stanley said McCoy did not know where the copper coolers had come from. He told the dealer they had been found in an Ohio junkyard, Stanley said.

Stanley recently escaped from the penitentiary where he was serving his five-year term. If he is recaptured, the Commonwealth may seek to revoke his 25 years' probation, Burchett said this week.

As part of the agreement dismissing charges, McCoy agreed not to press any claim against Armco arising from last September's indictment.

Gray, McNally Draw 10 Years; Appeal Lodged

Prestonsburg businessman Charles J. McNally, 54, and former Cabinet Secretary James E. Gray, 56, were each given maximum sentences—10 years in prison and an $11,000 fine—in U.S. District Court last week. But the two men will remain free on bond pending appeals lodged by their attorneys.

They were convicted by a federal jury in Lexington March 6 of conspiracy and mail fraud stemming from the distribution of state insurance commissions from 1975 to 1979.

U.S. District Judge Bernard T. Moynahan ordered McNally and Gray to undergo a three-month evaluation at a federal prison—to see whether they are able to "sustain the hardship of incarceration," according to Gray's attorney.

Federal law requires a judge to impose the maximum sentence before ordering such an evaluation; after the evaluation, the judge could order a lesser sentence. In any event, neither the sentence nor the evaluation order will take effect pending the outcome of the appeal.

McNally operates East Kentucky Auto Parts here and is chairman of the Prestonsburg Utilities board of directors.

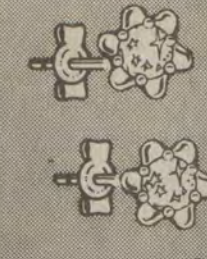

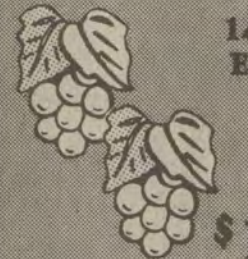

CF Bike-a-Thon Cancelled

The bike-a-thon to raise funds for the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation, which was scheduled for Saturday, has been cancelled due to complications caused by the recent flood, according to a representative of the Prestonsburg Area Jaycees and Jaycee Women, chairmen of the event.

An Appeal for Sports

Floyd countians, I come to you once again with a sad heart; sad, because another Spring has rolled around and the baseball season is upon us. Why then am I sad, you ask. I'm sad because your sons and daughters are once again asked to take a back seat to our neighboring counties; asked to use athletic facilities that are the laughing stock of Eastern Kentucky. Allen Central parents, ask your kids why they play so many away games and never ask any of the better teams in the state to come, play on their "home" field at Wayland. McDowell parents, ask why so few games are played at home on the Drift field; Betsy Layne parents, ask why your team has no field to call their own, and plays so many away games; Prestonsburg parents ask why your kids are asked to play on a dangerous softball field at Archer Park and why they don't schedule outside teams to come play on their "home" field.

I'll answer all these questions for you. The coaches in the county are ashamed to let the rest of the state know what we think of our young people; as people in authority say: "It was good enough in my day, it should be good enough now." Should be, but its not. All around us, neighboring counties are progressing at an enormous rate of growth, and I say that they are progressing because they are all concerned with recreational facilities and complexes in their cities and the physical well-being as well as the emotional well-being of their people. This next statement will surprise some people, but we need to examine it closely:

The upgrading of sports and sports programs in Floyd county is important to everyone in Floyd county, regardless if they have kids or not. Why? you ask:

Parents are concerned with sports in young people's lives, so why would some one want to move to Floyd county, where there are not even halfway decent fields for kids to play on; why would an executive choose to live or perhaps relocate his business in Floyd county when he can live in Johnson or Pike county and have his son or daughter participate and play on the best facilities in the state. And, if you're fortunate enough to have an athletically gifted 16 to 18-year-old baseball player, forget it; he will play maybe 10 to 15 games a year in high school, and then he'll do nothing in the summer, because they don't have summer baseball in Floyd county for them.

Why would businesses be concerned with decent athletic facilities in Floyd county? you ask. Well, they might be asked to support a team, perhaps buy equipment, maybe buy uniforms, maybe pay for umpires, maybe buy a billboard sign for advertisement; they might be asked to spend some money, but they're investing in Floyd county, then when the parents of the 15 or so kids go to shop, they think of them when they want to eat after a game, they think of them when their friends and relatives seek services.

Floyd county businessmen, listen to this as you cry over lack of business, and hold cash give-aways to entice people to shop your towns:

This week, Johnson Central High School will host their district championship consisting of teams from Magoffin county, Morgan county, Sheldon Clark, Paintsville and themselves: the next week-end, they will host the regional tournament with eight high schools from Eastern Kentucky coming to Paintsville from Wednesday thru Saturday; the following weekend, they will host the high school sectionals from Wednesday thru Saturday; and then the following week they will host the state tournament of the Kentucky High School Athletic Association.

What a shot in the arm for their businesses, restaurants, hotels, and Johnson county in particular as these teams bring hoards of fans with them to back their teams.

Oh, the townspeople will have to put up with over-crowded restaurants, over-crowded hotels, the bowling alley will be packed at night, the local night clubs will be filled, but they won't have to have a cash give-away to accomplish this.

Why, they're so crazy down there in Paintsville and Pikeville that later on in the Summer they'll try to entice state officials of Babe Ruth baseball, and Little League baseball that they want their tournaments also, and they'll have to go thru all this over-crowding and hoards of people coming down on their counties again.

Seriously, Floyd county, I think its time we set up a Sports Committee to evaluate and improve our programs and facilities for young people, some way to apply for grants and monies to upgrade Floyd county sports. I hate to keep bringing this up, but the Allen Park would make as good an athletic complex as there is in Kentucky, but you have to commit yourself to action now. Why should a handful of golfers benefit from the use of that park when your kids play in mud, play on snake-infested overgrown fields, and yes, some 16-18-year-olds don't even get a chance to play summer sports. Why should we keep the grass trimmed for that handful when our kids deserve better? Aren't they as deserving as the kids in Johnson county and Pike county.

As a coach, you learn to get by, you accept what you trying to get these muddy, wet fields ready to play on, and our young people look to you eagerly to learn and receive instruction, you do so enthusiastically and energetically, but when you see a kid injured on these dangerous fields, you silently curse inside and maybe even shed a tear for what you know you could have.

Asks Cop-Killer Ban

President Reagan has declared May 13-19 National Police Week. During this time, we honor those men and women who daily risk their lives to protect us from violent crime.

The Congress should show its gratitude to these officers by passing the Law Enforcement Officers Protection Act. This legislation, sponsored by Senator Daniel Patrick Moynihan and Congressman Mario Biaggi (a 23-year veteran of the New York City Police Department who was wounded 10 times in the line of duty), would ban the manufacture and sale of cop-killer bullets—ammunition designed to penetrate the bulletproof vests worn by police. The bill would also require a mandatory jail sentence for using cop-killer bullets in a crime.

Handgun Control has joined the nation's police in urging Congress to pass this common-sense measure. Already 200 Senators and Representatives have endorsed the bill. But the National Rifle Association has launched a multi-million dollar campaign to defeat the measure.

We urge citizens across America to contact their legislators during Police Week and ask them to support the cop-killer bullet ban. It's time the Congress stood up to the misguided NRA.

The Alben Barkley Home

I want the people of Kentucky to know how grateful I am for the hard work and support the "Angles" project received. From Growth, Inc., of Paducah, to the contributors in Pikeville, and the many others across the Commonwealth that worked hard to support this project with their time, influence and money, I am eternally grateful.

Over the past year my sister and I have worked diligently and held high hopes that "Angles" would be preserved as a public museum commemorating the life of our grandfather, the late Vice President Alben W. Barkley.

My sister, Dorothy Barkley Holloway, has made it possible to tour "Angles" free of charge, and we were excited and pleased with the response. Dottie, in particular, has opened up her home to the public for the past year. This has involved a tremendous amount of work. Anyone who called, large groups or small, all have been welcomed.

During the last few weeks we have been trying hard to come to a financial agreement with Growth, Inc., which has made offers to purchase "Angles," using funds that would primarily be raised in the future. At times I was very hopeful. It seemed a solution was possible. Unfortunately, we and Growth, Inc. were unable to settle on the terms of purchase.

If we were wealthy, we would like to give "Angles" to any agency that would keep it open to the public, but we have five children between us to raise. Our responsibility is now to them and it would be unfair to us and to them to accept less from our inheritance than it is reasonably worth. Anyone in our position would feel the same way.

Our alternative is already laid out, since we had previously entered into an auction contract with C.W. Shelton, of Mayfield which became effective May 1, 1984 when we could make no purchase agreement with Growth, Inc.

We do hope, however, that Growth, Inc. will be a bidder on some of the historical items.

As sad as this is, I think there is another way of looking at it. If this great place cannot be held together, perhaps it is fitting that it be scattered among the hundreds of thousands of people who loved and were loved by the "Veep".

Definition of 'Perfect'

How long are we going to reinforce less than excellent standards in our school children? I am aiming this reply to Clark Elementary School PTA members Causetta Bryant, Pat Sturgill, Maggie Hicks and Grace Clark, who had a letter in this column on May 2.

Picnics are a wonderful way to end a school year and these ladies are well meaning but a bit misguided. Back in my day (I graduated from high school in 1971) "perfect" attendance did not mean "3 days or less missed." According to Webster's Dictionary, the word "perfect" means "flawless," "exact," or "precise." Three days or fewer missed is good attendance, but it is definitely not perfect attendance. Children need to be rewarded for performing well. But they also need to be made aware of the difference between "good" and "perfect."

This is one minor but sad example of what Kentucky schools are doing to make the students feel good about themselves without preparing them for the realities of life. Children must come out of their fairy land some day and grow up into what we hope will be solid citizens. If they have grown up with mediocre standards, how can they be anything but mediocre?

"The Road Home"

Millions of dollars are spent yearly on Corrections in and throughout America: "New prisons, federally funded programs, rehabilitation centers have all failed and crime continues to flourish and thrive. Those individuals sentenced to prison enter feeling that they somehow will be rehabilitated upon their eventual release back into society. Such rehabilitation does not develop and these same individuals find themselves soon to be "returnees."

I wonder, could it be that we need more of God's teaching to those incarcerated within our prison system, not only here in Kentucky, but in and throughout all the nationwide prison systems? Let us not forget those individuals incarcerated in the many local jails, large and small cities throughout America as well.

It is my belief that we need more ministers and church lay persons volunteering their religious services and talents within our penal system. We need more church-oriented programs, also. I feel that all else has failed, and when considering all the many tax dollars wasted, tax dollars spent in an attempt to bring moral and positive thinking back to the lives of those gone astray, may well be money spent wisely.

Myself, I was most fortunate when initially confined to the Bourbon county jail upon my arrest, where I found love, kindness, understanding and foremost, a willingness to help a person by the jail officials there by allowing church groups and ministers to enter the Bourbon county jail and to minister to those inmates needing God. I only realize now how lucky I was, because such kindness is lacking average confinement elsewhere. Through their help they taught me the need for God and living his daily word. Granted such teachings may not be for everyone, but with the high rate of crime and with every prison full to their rim, my proposal may well be the answer to our present-day problems and the crime epidemic that affects each and everyone of us. I believe if we make our motto, "Help change an inmate inwardly, then it will show outwardly," might be the proper direction to the Road Home, not just for the inmate population, but for everyone alike.

Certainly, the thought is worth pondering. After all, all else has failed.

Help for Veterans

Are you on the record? If you were injured or disabled by illness during military service—under World War One through today—be sure that you have it on Veterans Administration records. The longer the time lapse, the more difficult it becomes to prove your case. And, as the years go by, substantiation of claims becomes more difficult. Don't make the same mistake thousands of other veterans have made. Get yourself on the record.

Your D.A.V. State Service Officer, Earl D. Francies, will be at the National Guard Armory the third Tuesday and Thursday of each month. He will be there from 9:00 a.m. till 4:00 p.m. in Prestonsburg.

If you, as a veteran or a veteran's dependent, need assistance, I want to help.

EARL D. FRANCIES
State Service Officer

Bailey, LeMaster Named

State Sen. Benny Ray Bailey, D-Hindman, has been appointed to the Federal Preemption Committee of the Southern Legislative Conference, and Sen. David LeMaster, D-Paintsville, has been named to serve as liaison to the Seventh Congressional district for the conference.

The SLC, composed of senators and representatives from 15 southern states and Puerto Rico, provides a forum for state lawmakers to meet and exchange ideas on issues common to their area, to set policy, and to recommend courses of action to Congress. It is based in Atlanta.

Mother's Day has gone once more, but the hand that rocks the cradle still rules the world, in many respects, for mothers—more than anyone—rear the men who become gospel ministers, the children who some day are public officials—statemen or politicians, as each case may be—those who will teach science, math, engineering, medicine, nutrition, home economics, et cetera, to future generations.

No nation surpasses its womanhood. The highest calling God give women is wifehood and motherhood. Proverbs 31 describes her role in the home, which is her castle, she its queen. No tribute, song, poem or story can do justice to godly mothers. Their labor, lives, character, influence do more to create and maintain the home and to rear the children there than those of anyone else, for God made man the head and the breadwinner, generally thereby limiting the time he can give his home and family.

Some mothers are compelled to work, though others who do so often do it for love of luxuries, frequently not earning enough to pay for taxes, lunches, additional clothing, transportation expenses, and incidentals, abdicating homes and families, more or less. Only God can judge each one. But when Mother does work outside the home, regardless of reason or wisdom for her decision, Dad should assist more in household tasks, especially in the job of "parenting." Today, mothers are not only housekeepers and homemakers but teachers, counselors, psychologists, nurses, chauffeurs, planners, interior decorators, laundrymen, gardeners, jacks-of-all trades, so to speak. Mother, we salute you. You have the greatest job of all. It is doubly complex if yours is a one-parent family, as thousands are. Don't give up the ship.

Perhaps the greatness of East Kentuckians is most evident in times of ravaging floods. Such trials accomplish one good thing; they bring people together in a superb spirit of helpfulness and neighborliness like nothing else seems to do. As in old days, folks have time for each other, a rarity now. It is wonderful how those who are well and strong pitch in to assist in the cleaning-up process of homes, schools, churches, public buildings, etc. This ability and faith to rebound, rebuild, refurnish astounds many who never experienced a high tide. But, from its earliest history, our area has had stalwart men and women who overcame obstacles of many kinds in their steady march toward greater progress. Hats off to every one of them.

When one reads or hears on TV what many cities and states are doing to promote better education, often with no additional funds, we know our beloved state can do it, too. There are many excellent substitutes for money. Few things are more inspiring than people determined to advance, for where there is a will there is a way. In his last letter to the Times Robie Skeans, native of Floyd, said this county is not poor. In the big depression of the '30's, when I was administrator of the county KERA and WPA offices for a while, we received regular reports on taxes paid the state. Jefferson ranked highest, Fayette second, with Floyd and Harlan rotating in third place. If poorer counties and locales can achieve more progress we can, too.

Like it or not, there is strong evidence that over-devotion to sports of all kinds is partially responsible for the decline in education throughout the nation. Sports has a place on the agenda, but who considers it more important than education? What percentage of students will earn their livelihood thereby? Will we ever reward youngsters who star in the classroom, in conduct and character the way we now honor and recognize sports stars and beauty queens? Will there ever be an Olympics for the essentials? Why not?

RETURN FROM VISIT

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hereford have returned to their home here after a visit with their son, Dr. John Hereford. Mr. and Mrs. Hereford joined their son in Aurora, Colo., during the latter part of March, where he was completing his internship, and, after visiting with him there, accompanied him to Houston, Texas, where he entered private medical practice. They spent several weeks with Dr. Hereford there before returning home.

State Senator Allen Honored

State Sen. Nelson Allen, D-Ashland, was honored May 7 in Frankfort for his work on behalf of education during the 1984 session of the Kentucky General Assembly.

The Kentucky Department of Education and state Board of Education held a reception and dinner for Allen, a Floyd county native, who chairs the Senate Education Committee.

Kentucky Superintendent of Public Instruction Alice McDonald called the 1984 legislative session one of the best ever for education.

"Although we would like to have had more dollars for education, there is no doubt that the accountability legislation which was passed will definitely be a good beginning toward educational reform," McDonald said.

She specifically referred to teacher competency testing and internship, testing students in grades K-12 on essential skills, and the authority for the department and the state board to intervene in a school district which is found to be academically deficient.

Seeking Audit Bids On So. Central Bell

Kentucky's Public Service Commission is seeking bids and proposals from 43 consulting firms to conduct a management audit of South Central Bell.

The South Central Bell audit is the second management audit authorized by the Commission, and the first under the audit program approved by the 1984 General Assembly. Kentucky Utilities, the state's largest electric utility, is currently under audit. South Central Bell requested that it be the subject of the second audit.

The Commission will use the audit to help determine how South Central Bell has contained costs, developed reasonable long and short range plans for continuing operations and provided proper management and organizational structure. The goal of the audit is to explore all economically feasible opportunities to give ratepayers lower rates and better service.

In addition to the broad issues, the Commission has pinpointed six areas requiring detailed analysis for specific recommendations. These include appropriateness and reasonableness of employee compensation; number and level of management and non-management employees; management of centralized joint and affiliated services; management of construction planning; level of rates compared with other similar companies and reasons for any disparity that may exist; and appropriateness of the company's planning related to competition in the local network and potential impact of this competition on ratepayers.

The Commission will hold a bidders' conference May 18 for those firms interested in submitting the proposals and bids to conduct the South Central Bell audit. In addition to members of the Commission staff, representatives from Bell will be available to answer questions from conference participants. Bids for the audit will be received no later than June 1 and the vendor should be selected by mid-July. The audit is scheduled to begin August 1, continuing for six months.

Dept. of Defense Begins Dog Recruitment Effort

The Department of Defense Dog Center at Lackland Air Force Base in San Antonio, Texas, is offering a rewarding career in the military for your dog. You can either donate your pet or receive up to $400.00 if the dog is accepted into the program.

Recruiters at the center are looking for German Shepherds, Rottweillers, and Bovier des Flanders that possess the right qualifications for the military working dog program. They must show predominant characteristics of their breed, be between one and three years old, be at least 22 inches tall at the shoulders, and weigh at least 55 pounds. The dogs must pass certain psychological and physical tests, including a response to gunfire, a test for aggression, and a physical examination.

Headquarters Air Training Command trains the dogs in a variety of duties including protection of the President, detection of explosives and narcotics, and patrolling military installations.

For more information on how to enlist your pet in the military, call toll free 1-800-531-1066.

Children can make creative, inexpensive Christmas cards with assorted cookie cutters used as stencils.

McDonald said that she is convinced that Kentucky's legislators want to make a difference for the school children of Kentucky. She said she is pleased that legislators worked cooperatively during the session with her and the Department of Education staff.

"While I commend the 1984 General Assembly as a whole, reform measures would not have taken place without the leadership of the House and Senate Education Committees. Sen. Allen and Rep. Jody Richards deserve much of the credit for assuring that this session kept its commitment to improve the status of education," McDonald said.

State Board chairman Robert Ruberg said that Allen has demonstrated his love of education and shown responsibility to the people of Kentucky by all he has done in his 10 years of service as a state legislator.

Senator Allen is a son of the late Wayne and Mallie Allen, who lived in the Hueysville-Northern area of the county.

Manton—Clara Jean Ousley, bachelor of science in pharmacy; Judy Salmons, bachelor of arts in education.

Garrett—Jennie Lynn Cox, bachelor of business administration; Tammy Francis, bachelor of arts in education.

Depressants Lead Poisoning Deaths

Some of the most commonly used prescription and over-the-counter drugs today are called depressant drugs. These are synthetic drugs which have a depressant and relaxing action on the central nervous system.

The most common depressant drugs are: sedatives such as methaqualone (quaalude, soaper, parest), barbiturates called pentobarbital (yellow jacket), secobarbital (red devil), phenobarbital (pennie), and amobarbital (blue heaven), and tranquilizers called benzodiazepines (librium, valium), and phenylcyclidine (P.C.P., angel dust).

Depressants are used medically, under prescription, for treatment of high blood pressure, epilepsy, and insomnia. They are also often used as a relaxant before and during surgery, as well as a sedative for use in both mental and physical illnesses. Most depressant drugs are swallowed, injected into the veins or smoked, depending on the drug.

In normal medical usage, depressants slow down the heart beat and respiratory rate, have a mild depressant action on the nerves, skeletal muscles and heart muscles and lower the blood pressure.

Overdoses are common. The drugs are abused to escape boredom, self-consciousness, sexual inhibitions and to avoid tensions and anxieties of daily living. Abuse can cause slurred speech, extreme drowsiness, drunken appearance, staggering, and a quick temper and quarrelsome disposition. When a depressant drug is taken with alcohol (also a depressant), the depressant action of one multiplies the other, sometimes with fatal results. The use of barbiturates and other sedative-hypnotics with other drugs that slow down the body functions, such as alcohol, increases the risk of death. Overdose deaths can occur when barbiturates and alcohol are used together, either deliberately or accidentally.

The danger in abusing depressant drugs is serious as the drugs are both physically and psychologically addicting and they can cause organic damage. Withdrawal from the drugs causes extremely severe discomfort, with possible convulsions, and abrupt withdrawal can cause death.

Depressants distort reality and overdoses are common as users lose count of how much of the drug they have taken. Most depressant abusers use the drug to avoid tensions and anxieties of daily living and discover after use that they still have them, plus a "hang-over" from the drug itself. Depressants are the leading cause of accidental deaths by poisoning in the U.S. today.

For more information on depressants or other drugs, contact Mountain Comprehensive Care Center, 886-8572.

Mrs. Marie Salisbury had with her at her home here on Mother's Day members of her family: her daughter and son-in-law, Dr. and Mrs. Melvin Stewart, and son Todd, and her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. James David Salisbury, all of Catlettsburg. While here, Dr. and Mrs. Stewart also visited his mother, Mrs. Walter Stewart, at Allen, and Mr. and Mrs. Salisbury, who were enroute to the wedding of their youngest daughter, Miss Jami Lynn Salisbury and Mr. Stephen Hocken-smith, in Georgetown, Ky., spent some time with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Mont Hall, at Banner.

Local Craftsman To Exhibit At Berea

Terry Ratliff, furniture-maker and craftsman, above, whose work will be exhibited at the 17th annual Spring Fair of the Kentucky Guild of Artists and Craftsmen to be held in Berea, May 18 through May 20. He begins with a rough piece of good wood, and with skill and patience such as that involved in the finishing work with a shaving horse at top right, produces completely hand-made pieces of furniture, or as shown here, an old-fashioned hobby horse with gleaming hand-rubbed finish. Ratliff, whose wood-working shop is near his home on Stephens Branch, also displayed his work at the Governor's breakfast held prior to the Derby.

(The aftermath of flooding in the mountains represents a stage of the disaster cycle quite distinct from the frightening spectacle of active flooding. With the recession of the high, muddy water comes the realization of loss and the overwhelming drudgery of cleanup and recovery. Floyd countians know the pattern all too well and thousands over the past week faced the grim prospect with acceptance and determination. Included here are a few scenes from various sections of the county.)

Southeast Floyd County Volunteer Fire Department members Darryl Bates, Haskell Hall, Gary Little and Kenneth Little were in Bypro last week hosing off the streets in that community's cleanup.

Prestonsburg Job Corpsmen were on hand to help out at Archer Park as they did at numerous other locations in the Prestonsburg area and elsewhere. Here they carry a pool table from the Archer Senior Citizens Center.

Maudie Luxmore, who has seen more than her share of floods in 86 years of living in the mountains, pauses for a moment while sweeping the dried mud from the porch of her home at Price.

James Tackett filled jugs with spring water alongside the Mud Creek road near the mouth of Branham's Creek, Thursday, while waiting for resumption of service from the Mud Creek Water System.

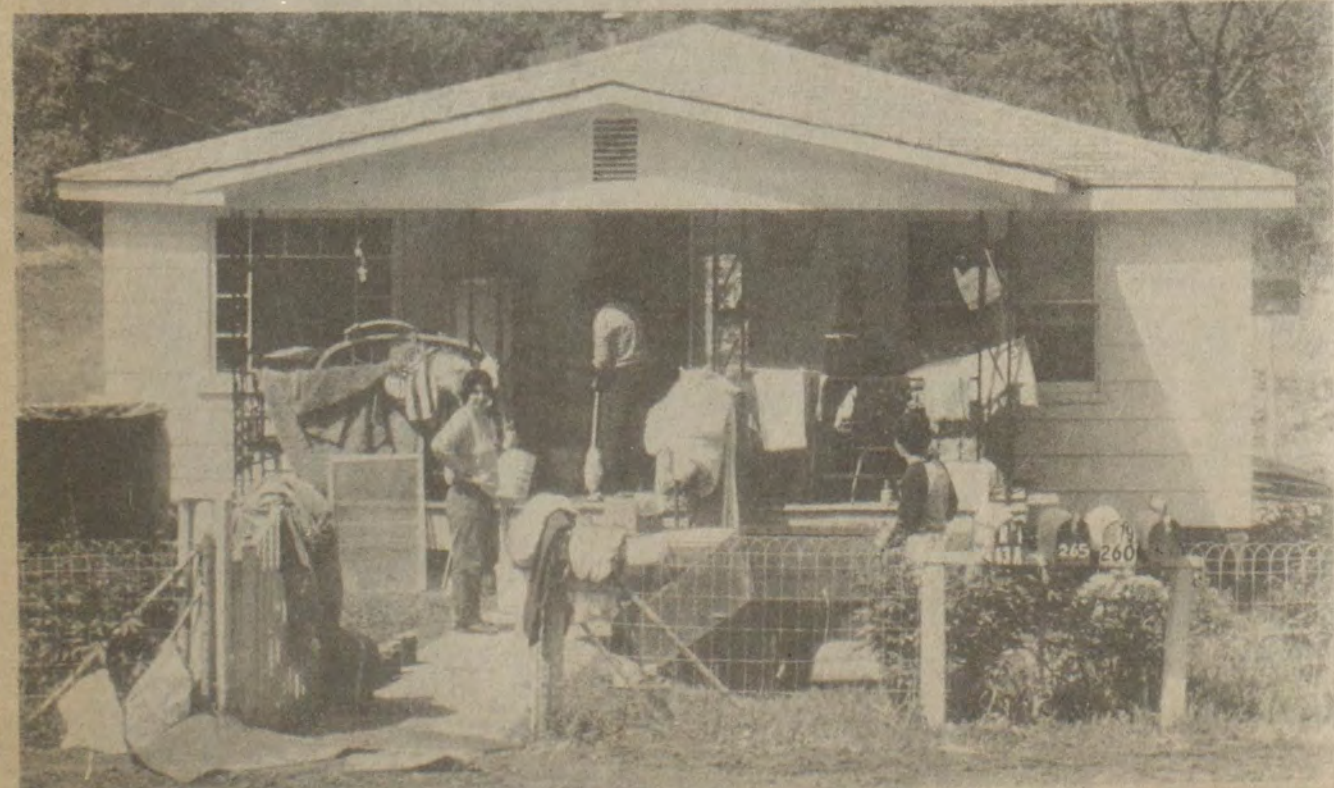

Cleaning kits, sent here by the American Red Cross from Cincinnati, were unloaded Thursday and transferred to smaller vans and trucks for distribution throughout the county.

Desks at McDowell School were set out to dry after being steam cleaned and sterilized.

Martin Mayor Raymond Griffith whose home was flooded sits on a borrowed couch in his living room.

State Suggests Board Meetings Be 'More Open'

The Floyd school board should make its meetings more open to the public, the State Board of Education said last week, apparently on the recommendation of a state official who has monitored the local board's last two meetings.

The official, Don Fichtmaster, told the state panel he had problems obtaining a meeting agenda and hearing the discussions of local board members, complaints voiced last year by members of the Floyd County Citizens' Education Council.

The state board told the Floyd board to provide agendas on request by the public but apparently did not otherwise specify how the local board meetings might be made more open.

While copies of the meeting agenda were distributed with some display to news reporters on the first of Fichtmaster's visits here, the practice was not repeated. Conversations among Floyd board members are frequently carried on in a low tone, out of the hearing of the meeting audience.

In an earlier response to complaints by the citizens' group about inadequate public seating at board meetings here, more chairs were provided. They were so rearranged, however, that most of the audience is even further removed than previously from the board.

Proclaims Nursing Home Week

Prestonsburg's Mayor Harold Cooley this week proclaimed the week of May 13 through 20 Nursing Home Week in Prestonsburg in conjunction with National Nursing Home Week which is being observed by member homes of the American Health Care Association and the Kentucky State Association. In the proclamation Mayor Cooley urged all residents to join in this observance and participate in a demonstration of recognition, support, encouragement and appreciation for the high standard of care that long term facilities are providing in the community. The signing of the proclamation was witnessed by Goldie Rorer, administrator of Mountain Manor, and resident, Seatta Foster, along with Charlotte Slone, administrator of Riverview Manor, and resident, Laura Gilliam. Each nursing home will have a schedule of events occurring each day.

Ag Department Foodstuffs Help Flood-Stricken

Bel county has been added to the list of flood-ravaged counties in Kentucky for which the Kentucky Department of Agriculture has made arrangements to provide food for victims driven from their homes. Agriculture Commissioner David E. Boswell said last Friday that USDA commodity food necessary to feed 1000 persons for five days has been made available by his department.

Additionally, in Floyd county, where the Department of Agriculture as part of Kentucky's disaster response effort has been feeding another 1,000 flood victims, enough food for at least five more days has been delivered by the Department.

An emergency feeding operation at the Senior Citizens Center in Jackson in Breathitt county is still in operation for dozens of persons not able to return to their homes.

And an emergency feeding center is now functioning in Belfry in Pike county, in addition to one supplied by the Department of Agriculture in Pikeville. Six hundred families being fed in Inez, Martin county, according to Commissioner Boswell.

The Commissioner pointed out that the commodity food is stored at storage points throughout the state, and at schools, hospitals, jails and other public and private charitable institutions.

"Under normal conditions," Commissioner Boswell said, "the Department of Agriculture administers the distribution of this food for health service and nutritional programs at these facilities. As a result of this statewide responsibility, the food is readily available in times of emergency such as this."

The emergency feeding centers are established at the direction of the disaster response team in Frankfort upon request of the county judge-executives in the stricken areas.

Boswell said that an accurate determination of the damage to Kentucky farmland caused by this week's flooding will not be possible for several days at least. "Further," he said, "any estimate of damage, with water still high in Eastern Kentucky, and some high water still to come in West Kentucky, would be premature."

Boswell pointed out that there is an established procedure through which the most accurate possible determination of flood damage can be made, so that eligible Kentucky farmers can receive appropriate disaster relief. He said that Kentucky Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Service office in Lexington has only brief and general reports from a few counties on flooding at present.

"Obviously, waters must recede from fields and farmlands before we can know the extent of the damage and before we can do anything about it in terms of disaster designation applications so that farmers can get disaster loans," Commissioner Boswell pointed.

Boswell said that each Kentucky county has its own agriculture disaster committee, administered by the local ASCS office. Surveys are being made on a regular basis and those preliminary reports are coming in now to the ASCS State Office, but they are inconclusive.

"When the disaster committees make a final report, state-wide, the ASCS will call a Kentucky Agricultural Disaster Board meeting, so that a determination can be made for each county about the degree of damage and whether or not that county will be included in a request for designation of disaster. I sit on the board. In that process," Boswell continued, "losses will be ascertained, both by county and, in some cases, by the individual farmers."

ASCS and the Farmers Home Administration will then respond by making available the kind of relief they determine will be necessary.

Boswell says this process will take several days or weeks, "but when completed, the scope of the flood damage will be known in its entirety."

The Agriculture Commissioner said that one of the worst problems the flooding will bring to Kentucky farmers is the delay in planting their crops, corn and tobacco for instance. "Every day's delay affects yield," he said, "and we're very concerned about that."

Perkins Repeats Call for Help For Flood Areas

Congressman Carl D. Perkins again called last Friday on President Reagan to send help to Eastern Kentucky. While traveling throughout the flood area, Perkins in a wire to the President said:

"Mr. President, let me again urge prompt action in declaring 13 Eastern Kentucky counties in the 7th Congressional district a national disaster area because of mammoth flooding this week. The extent of flooding throughout this area will exceed the 1977 record-breaking flood. This is the case because flooding occurred simultaneously in the Kentucky River basin, both the middle and left forks of the Licking River, Red River, and Big Sandy River basin, including the Levisa and Tug forks.

"Thousands are homeless, water systems are not functioning, roads and bridges are washed out. There is no food in many areas and suffering widespread. Because of simultaneous flooding of many river basins, emergency relief forces are spread too thin and taxed beyond their limitations. Many remote areas in great distress are being completely ignored. It is imperative that these counties be declared national disaster areas and all available federal agencies be instructed to extend assistance immediately."

AARP TO MEET

Members of the American Association of Retired Persons (A.A.R.P.), will hold a dinner-meeting at the Western Sizzlin' Steak House here, Friday evening, at 7 o'clock. The president, Jack Freed, has announced that Judge John Stumbo will be the speaker.

The boatride, sponsored by the local A.A.R.P. will be on Thursday, June 21. Those attending are asked to be at the boat dock at Dewey Lake by 10:30, on that day, and to bring a picnic lunch.

N. Ky. Relief Effort Aids Mud Ck. Flood Victims

Through the work of civic organizations and individuals in the Northern Kentucky-Greater Cincinnati Area, the trauma of recent flooding in the Mud Creek section of the county was lessened for a great many families.

The relief effort, which resulted in the shipment of tractor-trailer loads of food, clothing and home furnishings to Mud Creek residents last week, began as a food drive several weeks ago by the police department of the Kenton county community of Taylor Mill.

According to a spokesman for the department, a UPI news article on poverty and poor nutrition in the Mud Creek area gave rise to the food drive and community response to the project was good even though their was no thought of the flood disaster to come.

When news of the destruction and displacement of families wrought by last week's flooding reached those involved in the drive, news media from Northern Kentucky-Southern Ohio joined in to stress the suddenly increased needs of the flood-stricken area and contributions came pouring in from a wide area.

In addition to the timely distribution to flood victims, little Melissa Lawson, of the Trace Branch of Little Mud, whose family has never been able to afford surgery needed to straighten their daughter's crossed eyes, will now be able to receive the cosmetic operation through funding arranged by a Col. Kleete, who read of the young girl's plight in the UPI story. She is already scheduled to be taken to Cincinnati by the Floyd County C.A.P. where she will be examined and evaluated for surgery.

Honorary Degrees Go To Former Floyd Men

Edward T. Breathitt, former governor of Kentucky and now vice president for public affairs of the Norfolk Southern Corp., was the principal speaker last Saturday at Morehead State University's annual commencement.

MSU President Morris L. Norfleet conferred more than 1,000 degrees during the ceremony.

Honorary doctoral degrees were awarded to Breathitt, Jerry F. Howell, Sr. of Jackson, Ex-Governor Bert T. Combs, of Louisville and Dr. Cratis Williams, of Boone, N.C. (Both Howell and Combs are former county residents, and Williams is a native of Johnson county.)

Howell recently resigned his MSU Board of Regents chairmanship and membership after 16 years of service. Combs now serves on the Commonwealth's Council on Higher Education. Dr. Williams is the nation's preeminent Appalachian scholar and now serves as special assistant to the chancellor at Appalachian State University.

Most Schools Reopen After 6-day Layoff

Most county schools reopened yesterday (Tuesday), after losing six days on account of last week's flood. The high school and grade school at McDowell and elementary schools at Garrett and Drift were expected to reopen today (Wednesday). Martin and Allen grade schools, the hardest hit by floodwaters, will remain closed indefinitely.

Superintendent E.P. Grigsby, Jr. announced the reopening schedule Monday afternoon, after meeting with heads of departments and other school officials.

Because many roads and bridges have been washed out, bus drivers were being instructed to venture up hollows only as far as safety dictated, and parents would be expected to help their children make the necessary connections, Grigsby said.

He will be asking state school officials to grant the Floyd school district "calamity days" to cover the days lost to the flood, the superintendent said. If the request is granted, Floyd students will not be required to make up the lost days and the school semester will end on June 8, as planned.

Meanwhile, Judge-Executive John M. Stumbo, frustrated as what he termed the "disorganization" of American Red Cross workers who began arriving here last week, pressed the organization to open three flood-relief offices in addition to the office opened Saturday at Allen Central High School.

In a Saturday afternoon telegram to the Lexington Red Cross office, Stumbo claimed there were "over 1000 people standing in line at this time" at the Allen Central office. Some flood victims had to travel 43 miles and then stand in line four hours, the judge-executive told Red Cross officials. "It is too great a hardship," he said.

State Will Repair Flood Damaged Roads

State Transportation Secretary Floyd G. Poore announced that the state will make repairs to flood damaged roads in Floyd county. This will include 3.4 miles of repairs to various roads with slips, slides and replacement of washed-out sections of roads.

Poore said the state has already begun the work on these roads. This project will cost an estimated $27,180. It is being funded with Rural Secondary Special Emergency funds.

ship," he said.

The Allen Central office was one of seven disaster-assistance centers opened by the Red Cross in Kentucky over the weekend. They are providing vouchers enabling flood victims to buy limited amounts of food, clothing and household goods from merchants of their choice and to pay for shelter and repairs.

Stumbo said he initially asked for centers at McDowell, Betsy Layne, Prestonsburg and possibly Wayland as well as at Allen Central.

The judge-executive was one of many local officials pressing this week for a federal declaration of Floyd as a disaster area, a designation that would permit agencies like the Department for Housing and Urban Development (HUD) to provide badly-needed housing here. More than 1700 homes and stores were flooded in this county alone, and Gov. Martha Layne Collins' estimate of statewide damage at $11.5 million was much too low, Stumbo said Monday.

Insurance Premium Cut For Service Personnel

A reduction in premium costs for Servicemen's Group Life Insurance (SGLI) coverage will result in some 3 million persons sharing a savings of more than $47 million, the Veterans Administration announced today. The reduced premiums are effective July 1.

The monthly premium for maximum SGLI coverage of $35,000 will be $2.80. Presently it is $4.06. The decrease will result in an annual savings of $33.2 million for active-duty military personnel and $14.2 million for ready reservists with full-time coverage.

The SGLI program is supervised by the VA, but administered by the Prudential Insurance Company of America as primary insurer and participated in by other commercial companies.

Pastor's Program 25 Years On Air

May 30 is a special day for the Rev. Dan Heintzelman. It has been 25 years since he began "The Sunday Morning Gospel Hour" on radio station WDOC (now also WQHY).

About 45 minutes after the school bus went into the river in 1958, Heintzelman brought his Jeep and public address system to help. He operated his public address system and radio to communicate with the boats on the river. He stayed eight days and nights and his voice never gave out.

Gorman Collins, owner of WDOC, asked the preacher if he would like to open the station on Sunday mornings with Gospel music. He has been waking folk up each Sunday morning since with his selections of Gospel music, devotions, and pleasant words to help begin the day.

The program has prompted calls and letters from Kentucky and surrounding states, including Ohio, Virginia, West Virginia, Tennessee, and South Carolina. A sailor wrote he heard the program on board ship off the coast of New York.

"I appreciate the encouragement," Heintzelman said this week. "The calls and letters have meant much. I'm looking forward to beginning my twenty-sixth year of radio broadcasting."

Heintzelman is pastor of Spurlock Bible Church, an independent Baptist church. He will complete 30 years as pastor there, June 10.

Officials Pay Tribute To Veteran Teacher

When former Floyd countian Ellis Bailey retired recently after 30 years as a teacher—23 years as a seventh grade teacher at Rosemore Junior High School in Whitehall, O.—the city council and mayor of Whitehall joined in a resolution praising Bailey "for his dedication to the teaching profession and his inspiration to countless young people."

"The priceless knowledge and experience shared by Ellis Bailey has touched the lives of countless young people at one of the most impressionable times of their lives," the resolution said.

A native of the Brush Creek section of this county and a son of the late Leck Bailey, he taught four years in this county after graduating in 1939 from Caney Junior College at Pippa Passes and also taught three years at Groveport, O. before going to Whitehall.

He was married in 1939 to the former Marie Howard, of Gunlock. They have a son and two daughters, James Bailey, of Columbus, Duane, of Paulding, O., and Barbara Harrow, of Columbus.

KDA Assisting Flood Victims

The Kentucky Department of Agriculture has provided food for thousands of flood-stricken Kentuckians in several emergency feeding centers in the eastern part of the Commonwealth.

"We fed about 100 persons in Pike county, approximately one thousand in Floyd county, and an estimated 600 families in Martin county late Tuesday," said Agriculture Commissioner David E. Boswell.

The Commissioner added that scores of flood victims have been fed at an emergency center at Jackson in Breathitt county, starting Monday night. He noted that the USDA commodity food, the distribution of which is the responsibility of the Kentucky Department of Agriculture, was available at storage points near the emergency feeding centers in the stricken areas near Inez, Pikeville and some nine sites in Floyd county.

The Department of Agriculture is operating as part of an emergency response team assembled by the Military Affairs Division of Disaster Emergency Services.

Meantime, officials are watching portions of Western Kentucky as well for the need of the kind of emergency assistance administered by the Department of Agriculture. The emergency feeding centers are set up at the request of the county judge-executives in the stricken areas.

The commodity food is stored at schools and other public and charitable institutions for use, under normal conditions in health service and nutritional programs.

"It's possible that thousands more Kentuckians will have to be helped before this flooding recedes and families can get back into their homes. The food is available and we have sufficient supplies stored in key spots across the State," Commissioner Boswell said.

CARD OF THANKS

The family of Raymond Alton Robinson would like to thank everyone who was so kind in our time of sorrow. Thanks to all who sent flowers and food, and to neighbors who helped in every way they could and to the Floyd Funeral Home, for their efficient service. We would also like to thank Rev. Dan Heintzelman and Rev. Timothy Jessen for their kind words.

Representative Stumbo in 1982 calling for a solution to the overweight coal truck problem and for better roads.

RE-ELECT
GREGORY D.
STUMBO
STATE REPRESENTATIVE
95TH DISTRICT
MAY 29 PRIMARY

Representative Stumbo speaking on the "Broad Form Deed" in 1984.

During the past 4 years, Gregory D. Stumbo has been a strong voice in Frankfort. He is a young, qualified leader who has taken an active role in the legislature and the people of the 95th District have seen major accomplishments.

Consider this:

- ★ In 1980, as a "freshman", he sponsored a Constitutional Amendment that extended the "Homestead Exemption" to disabled individuals, that was adopted by the people of Kentucky and now is law. He was called upon to help draft the State Surface Mining Law to comply with the Federal Mandate, the so-called "Primacy" Legislation. Kentucky has achieved this goal and now over 200 million dollars will be spent on Abandoned Mine Lands.
- ★ In 1982 he was selected to serve as Vice-Chairman of the Energy Committee. He supported the program that provided assistance to low income people with their heating bills. He has been a leader in the fight against rising utility costs and has sponsored legislation that would have required the Public Service Commission to be elected, rather than appointed by the Governor. (In states with elected commissions the rates are 20% lower.)

- ★ In 1984 he sponsored the "Broad Form Deed Bill" which was enacted and thus remedied a problem that has plagued his native Eastern Kentucky for over 100 years. He also, in 1984, saw his dream of solving the overweight coal truck situation become a reality with the passage of legislation that he had worked on since 1981. Representative Stumbo believed that coal truckers should be able to earn their living without being illegal. He also believed that the mountain people were entitled to decent roads, and his single handed dedication to this cause resulted in the program which will go into effect in July of this year and generate 7 to 10 million dollars for the coal haul roads.

- ★ Representative Stumbo also saw a need for an adequate primary road system in Floyd County so the coal producers could get their product to market. He, with the help of other Eastern Kentucky legislators, made their concerns known and as a result, the six-year road construction plan recently released includes these projects for Floyd County:

- 4 lane for U.S. 23 from Prestonsburg to Paintsville
- Garrett to McDowell spur
- Inez to Auxier Road

- ★ He's fought for the working people, and miners. The U.M.W.A. and AFL-CIO have endorsed him.

- ★ During the 1984 session he supported educational reforms and has always stood in strong support for teachers, active and retired. The K.E.A. has endorsed him.

- ★ He sponsored an amendment that would have given a bonus to Vietnam Veterans.

- ★ As Chairman for the Liason Committee to the Appropriations and Revenue Committee on Natural Resources, he sponsored a line item amendment in the budget that gives $60,000.00 over the next 2 years to establish a clean-up program at Dewey Lake.

Over these past 4 years Greg Stumbo has been busy, but that's what he promised to do 4 years ago; to work hard for the people of Floyd County. He didn't make any wild promises because he believes we've heard enough of them. Instead he's been busy getting results.

Now Greg Stumbo is asking to be re-elected. On May 29, 1984 there will be an election and there is only one contested race on the ballot in Floyd County and that is for State Representative.

Over the past 4 years, Greg Stumbo has worked for you—
Take the time to vote on May 29th—It is important—

State Police End Task Force Work

State Police Commissioner Morgan T. Elkins recently announced the termination of State Police involvement in the Mines and Minerals Task Force on Illegal Mining.

The State Police had contracted with the Dept. of Mines and Minerals to provide law enforcement assistance in combating illegal mining in Kentucky. The Mines and Minerals Task Force was established in 1982 by the General Assembly in response to several mine fatalities occurring in unlicensed mines. The contract between Kentucky State Police and the Department of Mines and Minerals ended May 1 without renewal.

According to Elkins, "The task force has met each of its established goals." The primary goal of the task force was to reduce the frequency of deaths in illegal mines by forcing compliance with established safety inspection and licensing procedures. There have been no reported deaths in unlicensed mines since the task force's inception.

The task force, composed of state troopers and headed by Kentucky State Police Lt. David Whitehouse and inspectors from Mines and Minerals, began its enforcement activities in August 1982. Since then, they have closed 22 illegal mines with 19 of these closures ending in 31 arrests and seizures of $2,154,500 in heavy equipment.

Enforcement efforts have increased applications for licenses filed with Mines and Minerals and brought an increase in revenue from the coal severance tax. The Revenue Cabinet reports $274,233 in new billings for severance tax have been mailed to the newly licensed coal operators.

Alice Lloyd Alumni Had Annual Meet

The Floyd County Chapter of the Alice-Lloyd College Alumni Association held its annual dinner-meeting at May Lodge, Monday evening, April 30, with the president, Mrs. Anna Sue Stumbo, presiding.

Dr. Jerry C. Davis, president of Alice Lloyd College presented Dr. June Buchanan, president of the Caney Creek Community Center at Pippa Passes. Following a standing ovation, "Miss" June, to the delight her audience, spent most of her time reminiscing. She compared the well-remembered "Purpose Road" to "the road leading to Caney."

Mrs. Stumbo then presented President Davis, who gave much credit for the success of this unique school to the early work of Dr. June Buchanan and Mrs. Alice Lloyd. Dr. Davis told of the progress of this institution since its becoming, during his tenure, a four-year college, and of the buildings which are soon to be erected on the campus there.

Miss Sally D. Slone, director of Alumni Activities, and Adrian Hall, who works in the Admissions Department of A.L.C., spoke briefly. Miss Slone told of the goals of the Alumni Association, and Mr. Hall gave enrollment figures for the school year, 1984-85, adding that 243 applications had already been received from Floyd County.

The speaker for the evening, Dr. Palmer L. Hall, former superintendent of Floyd county schools, and presently retired from the faculty of Morehead State University, also received a standing ovation. Dr. Hall, who told the group he first went to "Caney" at the age of 13, related some of his many interesting experiences from then until he graduated.

It was announced during the meeting that as a tribute to Dr. Hall Alice Lloyd College, under the direction of his nephew, Adrian Hall, has established a Palmer L. Hall Living Endowment Fund.

Miss Ruby Akers presented a list of the officers selected for the year, 1984-85. They are: President, Arthur Haywood; vice-president, Neal Watson; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Eva Allen Hale.

Attending from the college were Dr. Jerry C. Davis, Dr. June Buchanan, Adrian and Olive T. Hall, Rachael Mullinax, Sally D. Slone, and Mitch Brashear. "Caney girls and boys" and their guests in attendance were Anna Sue Stumbo, Alma and Arnold Lowe, Carlos and Arthur Haywood, H.E. and Eva Allen Hale, Palmer and Oval Hall, Ruby Akers, Woodrow and Mabel Allen, William and Mildred Salisbury, Norma S. Stepp, Opal S. May, Audie and Oma Elkins, Shelby Draughn, Joyce O. Watson, Neil and Margie Watson, Heather Carrean Watson, Alice O. Martin, Docia B. The Killing Disease—Heartworms in Dogs

By PATTY DEMPSEY

It is the season to plant, sow, watch the trees and flowers burst forth in leaf and blossom, and the season to have your dog checked for a killing disease called heartworm.

Once limited to more southern states where mosquitoes breed in swampy areas, the heartworm disease now covers most of the United States.

Heartworm disease is transmitted from one dog to another by mosquitoes. A dog with heartworm disease is bitten by a mosquito, the mosquito bites another dog transferring the disease. If one dog in a neighborhood has heartworms, then other dogs in the community will probably have the disease.

"I had five cases of heartworm in one week," says Dr. Rudolph Ousley, Prestonsburg veterinarian. "There are at least two dogs with the disease brought in each week."

If left untreated, the dog may live a few months, depending on how active he is, such as hunting dogs. Or, the dog could live up to two or three years if it gets little exercise.

Symptoms may not occur in the animal for several months, but some signs to watch for are a soft, dry cough, shortness of breath, weakness, nervousness, and lack of stamina.

As the disease progresses, the dog has breathing problems even when resting, weight loss, and his ribs begin to show.

The blood test, which is necessary to determine if a dog has heartworms, is only 80% effective, but a second, more sophisticated test may be necessary."

If a dog is tested and found free of the disease, it can be given preventive medicine. In this area of Eastern Kentucky, the dog needs to take the medicine every day from March to December. Do not attempt to give the animal the preventive medicine without first determining that the dog is free of heartworms. If given, and the animal is infected with the disease, the preventive medicine can be fatal to the dog.

If preventive medicine is not given, then the dog should be checked by a veterinarian, at least once or twice a year.

If the dog does have heartworms, which can grow up to 12 to 14 inches long, with hundreds living in the dog's body, he can be treated. The treatment may cause damage to the dog's liver and kidneys, if he is not supervised and watched. Once on the treatment, usually it is necessary to tie the dog for six weeks and see that he does not overexert, and possibly have a heart attack or develop pneumonia.

Bow Fishing

Many Kentucky bow hunters turn in to bow fisherman around this time of year to take advantage of some exciting sport and to bring home some meat for the table.

The addition of a bow reel and a special fishing arrow is all that's needed to convert your deer hunting outfit to a bow fishing rig. Carp should be spawning in the shallows about now and they offer a challenging target for the bow fisherman.

Bow fishing regulations are few and simple. Any bow (or crossbow) is legal, but their use is restricted to daylight hours only. Closed waters in Kentucky are those one mile below Wolf Creek Dam (Lake Cumberland), 700 yards below Kentucky Dam and 200 yards below any other dam in the state.

Only rough fish may be taken and there are no creel or possession limits. Rough fish are all species except the black basses, rock bass, crappies, walleye, sauger, rockfish, white bass, yellow bass, musky, northern pike, chain pickerel, trouts or any hybrids of the above. A valid fishing license is required for bow fishing.

A bow and arrow may also be used to hunt frogs. The frog season, opens May 15 and will run through Oct. 31. There is a daily (noon till noon) limit of 15 frogs and a possession limit of 30.

Those who hunt frogs with a bow and arrow (or with a firearm) must have a hunting license. (Giggers and hand grabbers can get by with either a hunting or fishing license, but those who "fish" for frogs with rod and reel or pole and line must have a fishing license. The best bet is to buy a combination license in the first place and not worry about it.)

It's also legal to hunt turtles with a bow and arrow, so if you're partial to turtle soup there's no reason to pass up a shot at a turtle while you're out bow fishing or frogging—if you have a hunting license, which is required to take turtles with a bow or a gun.

With prices the way they are now, sportsmen have a real opportunity to help the family budget by bringing home wild game for the table. Frog legs and turtle represent some real gourmet eating and carp, buffalo and other so-called "rough" fish are delicious when properly processed and prepared.

Come to think of it, one of the big advantages of being a hunter or fisherman is that you can spend a day outdoors, get some exercise, enjoy yourself and bring home supper at the same time.

Three Blood Drives Slated This Week

Three blood drives are scheduled here this month, the Central Kentucky Blood Center announces.

The Home Medical Rentals has scheduled the first blood drive for tomorrow (Thursday) at its Prestonsburg office on U.S. 23, North from 12 noon to 5 p.m. At least 30 donors are needed at this drive to maintain a safe and adequate blood supply for patients in area hospitals. For more information, call Annette Harris at 789-2100.

The Highlands Regional Medical Center has scheduled its drive for Thursday, May 24 at the Inservice Classroom from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. At least 40 donors are needed at this drive to keep on target for the Highlands Regional Medical Center annual goal of 125 pints of blood. For more information, call Billie Goble at 886-8511.

The Big Sandy Pioneer Council also has its drive slated for Thursday, May 24 at the Prestonsburg Donor Center from 12 noon to 8 p.m. For further information call Pat Phillips at 886-1557.

A blood donation is a simple, relatively painless procedure that most are eligible to do. The donation takes less than an hour and it will help patients in area hospitals to a faster, more comfortable recovery. Heart surgery patients, organ transplant recipients or patients being treated for cancer are potential recipients of blood and blood components.

Law Protects Flood Victims, Armstrong Says

According to Attorney General David L. Armstrong, Kentuckians who have suffered extensive property damage from the recent severe flooding are protected from price gouging and other possible unfair practices of companies who contract to repair or rebuild their property.

"People who have been affected by the flooding should remember that they are protected by the state's Consumer Protection Act," Armstrong said. "This act was passed by the General Assembly in 1972 and prohibits unfair, false, misleading or deceptive acts or practices in the marketplace."

Armstrong said that, because of the extensive damage in many areas of the state, many consumers may be totally dependent on local contractors and building supply houses to rebuild or repair their property. "If the suppliers of these services were to suddenly inflate their prices to take advantage of the disaster situation, this could be termed price gouging and fall under the Protection Act," he said.

He urged that any consumer who suspects that he or she is a victim of price gouging should report it to his office for investigation.

He also warned property owners to be wary of the "fly-by-night" operations which move into a community following disasters. "Deal only with reputable, established companies in your community," he said. "Consumers have been ripped off in the past by unknown contractors who promise certain work, take advance money and then disappear."

Armstrong added that despite the urgency of the situation, victims should follow some basic common sense rules of consumer education.

Some suggested practices are:

*Get several estimates on the job.
*Get the contractor's name, address and telephone number.

*Check his or her reputation. The local Better Business Bureau is a good place to start.

*Get a list of previous customers of the contractor and contact them for references.

*Read over the contract before you sign and check the terms pertaining to cancellation and warranty.

*Never sign a blank contract.
*Ask about the type of materials to be used. Is there a manufacturer's warranty on them?

*Get all oral promises in writing and have the contractor sign the agreement.

Armstrong said that consumers with questions about price gouging and other suspect practices should contact his Consumer Protection Division, 209 St. Clair Street, Frankfort, Kentucky 40601 or call the toll-free Consumer Hotline, 1-800-432-9257.

Mr. Levans was one of 24 managers in the southern-east catalog group, which covers portions of a 10-state area, who received this honor. Pictured above, from left, are T.D. KEA Re-Elects Jon Henrikson

Kentucky Education Association President Jon Henrikson was re-elected to a second two-year term by KEA delegates attending the organization's annual convention here.

Henrikson, of Carcassonne, and KEA Vice-President Don Nall, Owensboro, were contenders this year for KEA's top office.

Henrikson is on leave as a social studies teacher at Letcher county's Whitesburg Elementary School. Nall teaches eighth-grade history at Daviess County Middle School.

Delegates elected David Allen, of Winchester, English teacher at Clark county's George Rogers Clark High School, to succeed Nall as KEA vice president on June 15. His term also is for two years.

Allen, who served six years on the KEA board of directors, is president of the Central district. He also has been president of the Clark County Education Association.

The other candidates for vice-president were Barbara Burrows, Louisville, teacher at Jefferson county's Ahrens Vocational School, and Dexter Meyer, Lexington, teacher at Fayette county's Jessie Clark Junior High School.

Insured Corn Must Be Planted by May 31

May 31 is the final planting date for insured corn in Floyd county, according to John Soper, district director for the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation (FCIC).

"Acres of corn planted by May 31, insured by FCIC (or by a private company reinsured by FCIC), must be reported by June 15 to receive full crop insurance coverage," says Soper.

Acreage planted after May 31 should also be reported on the June 15 acreage report (in the "remarks" section) as being planted too late for insurance coverage.

"The final planting date of May 31 is the latest date established by FCIC to plant and expect a normal crop to be produced. Crops initially planted after this date are not insurable unless a late planting agreement is signed by the final planting date," Soper said.

Farmers wishing to discuss local conditions, such as excessive moisture, that may affect planting should contact their local, authorized crop insurance agent as soon as possible.

During the Middle Ages, most European countries marked March 25 as the beginning of the New Year.

First Birthday

Bo Lee James Sturgill, son of Michael D. and Sandy Sturgill, celebrated his first birthday, April 22, at the home of his great-grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Ezra James, of Endicott. Attending were his parents, grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Bill James, and aunt and uncle, Rudolph and Teresa Ousley.

Since Bo's birthday fell on Easter Sunday, in addition to his birthday cake, he received a Easter bunny cake from his neighbor, Paula Newberry, that was baked by her and her children, Julie Martin David.

Bo received many nice gifts from friends and family.

Rental Plan Seeks Infant Car Seats

Kay Ragland, nursing supervisor at Central Baptist Hospital in Lexington, spoke at Highlands Regional Medical Center recently to groups interested in developing an infant car safety seat program.

Representatives from Highlands Regional Medical Center, the Magoffin County Clinic, Our Lady of the Way Hospital and the Big Sandy Family and Childbirth Education Association (who are coordinators of the program) attended the meeting.

Ms. Ragland gave information on organizing and running the program. She emphasized the importance of infant car safety seats with key facts:

In a 30 mph car crash, the impact on an improperly restrained child would be like falling from a three-story building. It only takes 60 seconds to buckle up a child.

Auto accidents are the leading cause of death in infants under age 4.

By using car seats, 80% of infant deaths could be prevented.

The next step to beginning a car infant safety seat rental program in the Big Sandy is the collection of donated car seats. The Prestonsburg and Martin Kiwanis clubs have become actively involved in this project. All donations of new or used infant car seats would be appreciated. For information, call Vicki McGuire at 886-3863 or Gary Vicars at 886-8566.

IN MEMORIAM
In memory of Bobby Dean Roop, who departed this life May 9, 1982.
May 9, 1984, you will be gone two long years. May 9, 1982, on Mother's Day, when the news came that you were in a car accident and they couldn't get you and Eddy Lyn out, oh, how sad it was. We will never forget you and will always love you and hope to meet you again someday when this life is over. Your chair is vacant here at home. No one can ever take your place.

IN MEMORIAM
In memory of our darling son, Dwayne.
May 20th marks the second year loss of Dwayne. It is a sad tragic day for us to remember, but every day Dwayne is remembered in our home.
May 20th through 24th was sad but beautiful. When I say beautiful I mean all the wonderful people sharing their hurt, tears, prayers, the beautiful flowers. I could mention many different things they did for us, but when I put them down and add them together. I always come out with love.
So many people sent flowers. We knew not who they were or where they live. We were unable to send thank you cards. I still have the cards with only their name. We thank you with all our hearts.
Allen Central School, we are proud of you. We thank you with all our hearts for the wonderful memorial plot you have decorated so beautifully for Dwayne. When I walk down that memorial lane leading to Dwayne's plaque, it brings so many memories to me—leaving on his senior trip, ball games, proms, planting trees. Dwayne loved this school and enjoyed doing things to beautify it.
I know you teachers, students spent many hours, hard work and money. Most of all it shows you have love for Dwayne as he loved you. It means so much to us. I wish we could find a way to show how much we appreciate what you have done. It seems so small just saying "thanks."
Sometime ago I read in the Floyd County Times where someone criticized this school. I urge you to go look at it. You don't have to leave the highway to really get a touch of what these teachers and children have done. But if you want to see something that will really touch your heart just take a little walk to Dwayne's and Scottie's memorial. Then if you have something bad to say about the school, you don't have a heart.
Teachers, thanks, for your time and efforts spent to educate Dwayne. I'm sure if he could have lived he would have put it to good use. Education is something no one can take away.
To the boys and girls who knew Dwayne and those just knowing of him, may God be with you wherever you go. Again thanks to all and may God Bless. We love you.

USAA Awards Winner

The United States achievement academy announced recently that Gwendolyn Hall, 18, has been named a 1984 United States National award winner in five categories—United States National Journalism award, National English Merit award for English IV, International Foreign Language award for German II, United States National Mathematics award for Calculus, and National Leadership and Service award.

She was nominated by Rita Osborne, journalism and business education teacher; Leona Fouts, English teacher, and Joyce Watson, foreign language and mathematics teacher. She has also been selected as an academic All-American Scholar.

A senior at J.H. Allen Central High School, she will graduate fifth in her class with 24 credits.

Her biography will appear in the United States Achievement Academy official yearbook and the Academic All-American Scholar Directory.

She is the daughter of Curtis and Bessie Hall, of McDowell, and is the granddaughter of the late Henry and Florence Slone Hall, of Bevinville, and the late George and Cora Newsome Fraley, of Printer.

She plans to study pre-medicine at Alice Lloyd College on a four-year memorial scholarship. She was recently selected as an recipient of the Christian Appalachian Project's annual community service scholarship.

Republicans To Elect
 New Officers This Week

The Republican State Central Committee will meet Saturday, May 19, at 10 a.m., E.D.T., at Masterson's in Louisville to elect a new slate of party officers for the next two years, State Chairman Liz Thomas announces.

In January, the state Republican Party took a new step by expanding the Central Committee, placing all newly-elected county chairmen and vice-chairmen on the governing board. Mrs. Thomas said the reason for the move was to establish a broader base of leadership within the party. The new committee will have 335 members.

The Central Committee will also select a national committeeman and committeewoman at the meeting.

Prior to the full committee meeting, the 39-member Executive committee will meet at 9 a.m.

Health Officials Issue Warning

Kentucky public health officials last week cautioned people living in flooded areas of the state against drinking contaminated water and issued instructions for emergency disinfection of drinking water.

John Draper of the Cabinet for Human Resources' Division of Consumer Health Protection advised people to take the following steps to ensure the safety of their drinking water if they suspect it to be contaminated.

To purify the water by heating, (1) strain water through a clean cloth into

FLOYD COUNTY HEALTH NEWS

By JANE BOND
 Health Educator

Cervical cancer is one of the most curable of all types of cancer yet it kills approximately 11,000 women each year. Women are urged to have regular checkups for cervical cancer by having a pap test. Women age 45 and over are especially urged to have regular pap tests since this is the high risk age for cervical cancer.

The Floyd County Health Department is having pap clinics on Monday, May 21, and Wednesday, May 30. The hours of these clinics are from 8:30 until 11:30 and from 1 until 2. These clinics are free services of the health department and are open to women of all ages. Those women age 45 are especially urged to take advantage of these clinics since they are in the high-risk age for cervical cancer.

Glaucoma is one of the leading causes of blindness in adults. It is a disease which strikes without symptoms. It is for this reason that regular checkups for glaucoma are advised. Those persons age 40 and over are especially urged to be screened regularly for glaucoma since this is the high risk age for the disease.

The Floyd County Health Department is having a glaucoma screening clinic on Monday May 21. This clinic is a free service of the health department and is open to persons of all ages but those persons age 40 and over are especially urged to take advantage of this free service.

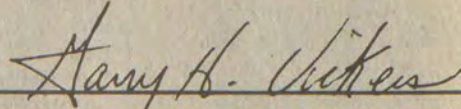

To Beat the Heat

The annual Ricky Skaggs Homecoming will be held June 30 at Louisa, Kentucky. The reason for the move from August to June is because of a more even flow into the July 4th celebration, plus the hope of avoiding the mid-summer heat wave of last year. Last August, the temperature was 105.

After a courtship that lasted almost a decade, Harry Truman and Bess Wallace were married on June 28, 1919.

Judge Harry Truman, shown here with daughter "Margie" and wife Bess in 1934, would soon be a U.S. senator.

Harry Truman, at 13, had already chosen his ideal.

She was Bess Wallace, who is shown here at age four.

By INK MENDELSON
Smithsonian News Service
"Dear Bess: This is a lonesome place..." The letter, written in a bold hand on pale green White House stationery and dated June 3, 1945, is likely the first Harry S. Truman wrote as president of the United States to his wife. President for less than two months, he was feeling blue because Bess and their only child, 21-year-old Margaret, had left 1600 Pennsylvania Ave. for the summer and gone home to 219 North Delaware St., Independence, Mo.

The letter is part of a treasure trove left behind by the president whose 100th birthday (May 8) is being celebrated this year. For years after his death in 1972, it was believed that Bess had burned most of his letters. But staff members of the Truman Library, taking an inventory of the Truman home in 1981, were astonished to find more than 1,200 letters spanning a half-century of American life in boxes stowed in closets, storage areas and the attic of the 19th-century Victorian house.

Truman was, his daughter, Margaret Truman Daniel, once said, a "demon letter writer." Over the years, when Harry and Bess were separated by the demands of farm life, war and politics, he wrote to her once a day—sometimes twice. Truman wrote constantly to the other women in his life as well—his daughter, mother, sister Mary Jane and favorite cousins, Ethel and Nellie Noland.

After her mother's death in October 1982, Daniel gave the newly found letters—the stuff of history—to the American people. Some family members objected to making public property of Harry Truman's most intimate feelings, his sometimes intemperate and intolerant remarks and his candid view of the world. Indeed, before her death in 1978, his sister burned hundreds of his letters. Daniel, however, agrees with her father, who always insisted that good history requires all the facts.

Historians are excited by this epistolary gold mine. "There's no better historical source than letters," historian David McCullough says. McCullough, who is working on a comprehensive biography of Harry Truman, is delighted with the find. "We can be grateful to Bess for stalling Harry for almost a decade before marrying him. More letters!"

Researchers who travel to the Harry S. Truman Library in Independence can now make the acquaintance of a certain 27-year-old Missouri farmer, who in January 1911 wrote to the young lady he was courting: "My dear Bessie: ...I don't think I'll ever make such much of a mark as a farmer or anywhere else but sometimes I have to come across."

To come across—to do what is expected, to do one's duty—was the principle by which Truman lived. On April 12, 1945, he had to come across. Franklin DeRoosevelt died on that day, and Truman, vice president for only three months and not a member of the president's inner circle, was forced to don the over-sized cloak of Roosevelt's responsibilities in a world at war.

Some would say Truman's whole life led him to the White House. Although he sometimes said he never held a political office he really wanted, a 1913 letter to Bess says otherwise:

How does it feel being engaged to a clodhopper who has ambitions to be Governor of Montana and Chief Executive of U.S. He'll do well if he gets to be a retired farmer. That was sure a good dream though, and I have them in the daytime, even night along the same line.

From his father, John, an ardent Democrat, Harry got his love of politics, his skill at farming and the eternal optimism of the born speculator. His love of reading, music and the arts he inherited from his mother, Martha Ellen.

The 33rd president was a fine pianist, a faithful student of history and a passionate fan of fine architecture. "Harry Truman was the only president in the 20th century who did not attend college," McCullough observes, "but he was a learned man."

Born in Lamar, Mo., Harry spent his childhood in Independence. At the age of 6, he had to wear glasses to correct his farsightedness. He began reading every book that came within his new-found sight. Through those familiar, roundish lenses, he spied 5-year-old, blue-eyed, golden-haired Bess in Sunday school and fell in love.

Truman carried a picture of Bess and six pairs of glasses to war in France in April 1918. There he led men into battle, learned about the world and, like thousands of American young men who saw Paris, left the farm forever. From "Somewhere in France," Truman wrote to Bess, "Paris is some town." When Harry returned home, he and Bess were finally married, on June 28, 1919.

High hopes of two army buddies opened the Truman-Jacobson Haberdashery in 1919. Post-war recession closed it in 1922. But dark days were brightened when Truman acquired a new correspondent—daughter Mary Margaret. In 1928, when she was four, he wrote:

My Dear Little Daughter: I am so very pleased that you are writing your daddy every day. I hope you keep up the habit when you are a big girl.

Elected presiding judge—an administrative position—of Jackson County, O., in 1926, Truman embraced public life and for a decade floated above the undertow of Boss Pendergast's Kansas City corruption. Sometimes he suffered headaches from the strain. He suffered too, for his constituents during the Depression. He wrote to Bess in 1933:

We are discharging some two hundred people and every one of them and all his friends will try to see me. I was sick last night after the session and lost my supper...

A year later, he was elected to the U.S. Senate. On their wedding anniversary in 1935, he wrote to Bess:

I am hoping to make a reputation as a Senator...But you'll have to put up with a lot if I do it because I won't sell influence and I'm perfectly willing to be cursed if I'm right.

He made a national reputation as a dogged investigator of waste and wrongdoing in the national defense program. And in 1944, Roosevelt, planning to campaign for a fourth term, let it be known in a roundabout way that he wanted Truman as his running mate. Truman resisted, writing to Margaret a few weeks before the Democratic convention: "Hope I can dodge it. 1600 Pennsylvania Ave. is a nice address but I'd rather not move in through the back door..."

To Roosevelt's emissaries, the Missouri senator responded: "Tell him to go to hell." Roosevelt replied, "Well, tell him if he wants to break up the Democratic Party in the middle of a war, that's his responsibility." Truman accepted, but he complained in a letter to Bess in August, "...the nomination was forced on me."

For the American people and for Harry Truman, April was indeed the cruellest month in 1945. Promise of Allied victory over Germany hung in the air, but the struggle against Japan dragged on across blood-soaked Pacific battlefields. The American people and much of the rest of the world had come to rely upon Roosevelt's charismatic leadership, and his death stunned and frightened them.

Hours after Roosevelt died, on April 12, the new president wrote to cousin Olive Truman: "I've really had a blow.... But I'll have to meet it. Hope it won't cause the family too much trouble."

He had a lot to meet. "Our present world begins with Harry Truman," McCullough points out. "He had to make the most difficult decisions of any president of our century and held in his hands a vast global responsibility."

Germany surrendered on May 7, and May 8, Truman's birthday, became V-E Day. Two months later, the Big Three—Truman, Churchill and Stalin—met in Potsdam in conquered Germany to plan the shape of the post-war world. Small agreements were made, but the Cold War was fast approaching. "I went to Potsdam with the kindest feelings toward Russia," Truman wrote his daughter in March 1948. "In a year and a half they cured me of it."

The president couldn't write to his family about what had to have been the loneliest decision of his life—the decision to unleash the atomic bomb on Japan in August 1945. But he never doubted the validity of the decision to drop the bomb, and, thus, in his view, to forestall the massive casualties on both sides resulting from an invasion of Japan.

V-J Day brought not peace but challenge. Truman led America toward recognition of a new international responsibility. The Truman Doctrine of aid to Greece and Turkey was put into effect to halt a Soviet threat, the Marshall Plan was launched to rebuild Europe, and NATO was created to shield the West from potential Soviet aggression. Political critics of his foreign policies would not stop him, Truman wrote his sister in 1947. "It is more important to save the world from totalitarianism than to be President for another four years."

Still, he fought with every breath against heavy odds in the 1948 campaign. In spite of press, pollsters, politicians and pundits, Truman was confident that he would beat the Republican candidate, Thomas E. Dewey. In June 1948 he wrote his sister Mary, "We are going to lick 'em and lick 'em good!" He took his case to the people on a 31,739-mile, 355-speech whistle-stop tour, and his long-time advisor, Clark Clifford, can still remember the excitement of that journey. "As the campaign went on, people were drawn to this indomitable figure—his spirit and courage. Week by week, we sensed the crowds growing ever larger." On Election Day, the man from Independence scored the most dramatic upset victory in American political history.

Although Truman gave one hell of a whistle-stop speech and was the first president to make a nationwide television address, he always needed to write. He kept diaries, wrote memos, set down autobiography on hotel stationery and scribbled notes on restaurant menus. Through personal correspondence, he could let off steam about "high hats" (snobs), "striped-pants boys" (diplomats), "military brass" and the "sabotage press."

He could express private opinions about such public figures as "Uncle Joe" Stalin, who was "trying to fool the world," or "old, fat Winston," who was "windy" but "keen" nonetheless, or France's General DeGaulle, whom he described as a "pinhead." He could also keep his family, often far away, close. He exhorted them to write.

Having so faithfully sown the seeds of communication-by-mail, the once-upon-a-time farmer was due a harvest. As the days of Truman's presidency dwindled and, having decided not to seek reelection in 1952, he prepared to go home to Independence, the fruits of his labors began to arrive at the White House. In his last letter from 1600 Pennsylvania Ave., he wrote cousin Nellie:

I have had a lot of fine letters from people I've never heard of and none of the mean sort. The public isn't sure what it has gained. The fear is that something has been lost. I wonder. We'll just have to wait and see.

Sincerely, Harry

Refreshments in Fellowship Hall.
EVERYONE WELCOME

The Maytown & Wayland United Methodist Churches

present the film seminar

"THE FAMILY: God's Pattern for Living"
a six-part 16mm film seminar with John MacArthur, Jr.

Produced by the Moody Institute of Science, a ministry of Moody Bible Institute in Chicago, these films present the Biblical mandate for the Christian family. Dr. John MacArthur, Jr., well-known pastor, author, radio and conference speaker, offers Biblical solutions to the issues that are breaking today's homes apart.

Each 50-minute film is introduced by Assistant Chief of Police of Los Angeles, Robert L. Vernon, who prepares the audience for Dr. MacArthur's message.

Each film addresses a different topic. "God's Pattern For Relationships" presents an overview of the specific roles of individual family members, and the necessity for submission to God's authority. "God's Pattern For Wives," and "God's Pattern For Husbands," focus on the Biblical roles of the man and woman in the marriage relationship. "God's Pattern For Children," and "God's Pattern For Parents," examines the inter-relationships between children and parents in the Christian home. The final title, "God's Pattern Broken—Divorce and Remarriage," faces a difficult subject with sensitivity and Biblical perspective.

Encourage your friends to come with you to see each film.

Proclaims Soil Stewardship Week

County Judge-Executive John M. Stumbo (seated) signs a proclamation designating the period, May 27-June 3, as Soil Stewardship Week. Standing (right) is Clark Allison, Floyd soil conservationist.

John Cabell Breckinridge, who served with James Buchanan from 1857 to 1861 was, at 36, the youngest man ever to become Vice-President.

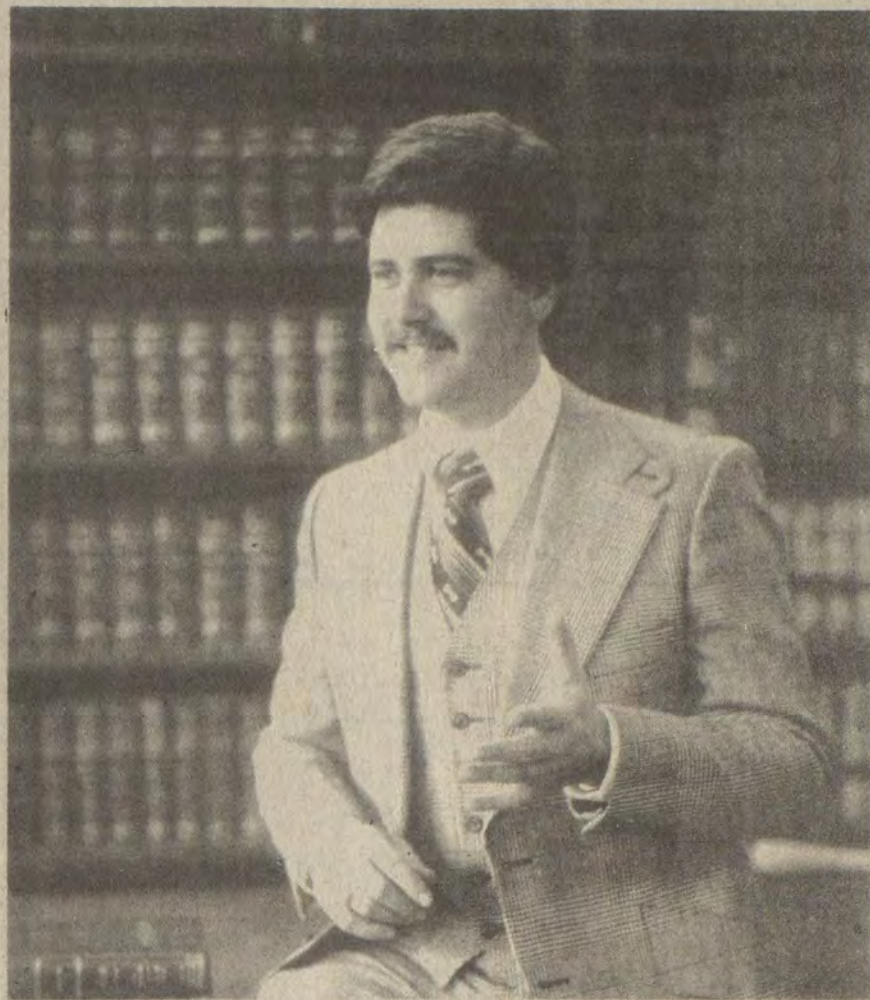

Welfare Overpayments
Total's $16 Million
Slated for Collection

No organization can afford to ignore a $16 million legal debt, and the Kentucky Cabinet for Human Resources is no exception. That's the amount owed the cabinet by persons who have received more welfare benefits than they were entitled to, and by absent parents who don't pay their child support obligation. The cabinet is using modern collection methods to find those who owe it money and require repayment.

"We collect from those who have received more than their legal entitlement to Aid to Families with Dependent Children benefits and food stamps, and from parents with delinquent child support payments," said Larry Hood, manager of the Department for Social Insurance's Collection Branch. Hood said six cabinet employees work full time in his branch to contact those owing money and work out a repayment schedule. "We get the case record, store the basic information about the person and how much is owed in our computer. Then we go to work to collect it," he said.

Hood emphasized that if a repayment schedule is not worked out, cases are pursued in court. "Our efforts are vigorous and working with computers makes the job easier. When we're not successful, we turn the debt over to legal counsel for action," he stated. The amounts owed range from several thousand dollars down to just a few dollars with the average amount being around $400. "Even small debts may be taken to court," Hood said.

IS THERE HELP FOR PARENTS WHOSE CHILD IS TERMINALLY ILL?

The imminent death of a child due to a terminal illness is an agonizing situation for parents. It was out of a similar life-experience that an organization called "Carelighters" was founded.

Lore & Paul Prager founded Carelighters after their youngest son, Kevin, suffered for two years with terminal cancer. The purpose of the organization is to help other parents who have heard the sentence of death pronounced for a child. Carelighters currently operates out of Ingalls Memorial Hospital in Harvey, Illinois. The parents operate a 24-hour hotline (312-789-1020) for parents to call for any kind of help. They also meet monthly to share feelings and offer each other support.

If you have any such concerns, we invite your inquiry in person or by phone.

Nursing Home Construction Moratorium Extended a Year

Kentucky's State Health Planning Council last week voted to extend the current moratorium on nursing home construction and remove certain limitations on the certification of new home health service agencies.

All three issues and other changes in the long-term care policies of the 1983-'86 State Health Plan will be released this week for a 30-day public review period leading to a public hearing scheduled June 13 at Frankfort. Immediately after the hearing, the council will meet to consider public comments and make final decisions on long-term care policies to submit to Gov. Martha Layne Collins. The council seeks a one-year extension of the current moratorium on new construction or establishment of skilled nursing, nursing home, intermediate care and personal care beds and institutional beds for mentally retarded people. The present moratorium expires June 30; the new one would be in effect from July 1, 1984, to June 30, 1985.

Exempted from the moratorium would be beds to replace those in facilities failing to meet life safety codes.

William Hourigan, chairman of the council's Plan Development Committee, said the council was "reluctant" to extend the moratorium but felt it was in the public's best interest to do so.

"We thought last year's one-year extension would give us time to study the long-term care situation and determine what the needs are," Hourigan said. "Then, because of litigation related to the State Health Plan, we could not complete the study. We feel we need to be better prepared to make responsible decisions on the issues, and this new extension would provide the time we need to gather facts and involve more people in the process."

The extension is the third since the long-term care moratorium took effect in July 1980.

New Home Care Services

Current standards allow the state's Certificate of Need and Licensure Board to approve certificates in the same review cycle for no more than two home health agencies in a given geographic area. No new home health certificates of need can be granted in an area until existing agencies there have had their certificates of need for at least six months.

The council's action, if approved by the governor, would remove those restrictions. Certificates of need would be approved according to current and projected needs for in-home health care, based on data provided by existing home care agencies.

Mandatory Assessment

The council recommended that the Cabinet for Human Resources require a needs assessment of each tax-supported applicant for admission to a long-term care facility. If the assessment indicates that home care services or informal resources would meet the client's needs, and if in-home services are available, Medicaid payment would be made only for in-home care.

The assessment would be mandatory for all tax-supported applicants other than those supported by Medicare. The service also would be available to other Kentuckians who want help in deciding on appropriate care.

Bob Nelson, manager of the cabinet's Health Planning Branch, said the council's actions are in agreement with state government policies supporting the development of in-home services as an alternative to additional institutional long-term care services. He said the policy is based on the need to control costs and to serve people who want to continue living with their families or in their communities.

Human Resources figures show that the state's Medical Assistance Program is paying more than $100 million per year for 10,000-plus clients receiving intermediate-level care in nursing homes. The average cost per person per month is around $800. Medicaid's average cost per month for a person receiving home health care is close to one-fourth that amount, about $225.

"Theoretically, the state could save a half-million dollars for every 1,000 people who receive home care instead of institutional intermediate care," said Nelson. "Nationally accepted figures indicate that 30 percent of the people at that level of care could continue living at home with home health services and family support."

Exercise During Pregnancy

By LUELLA KLEIN, M.D., President The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists

Last year, a young woman led the University of Indiana basketball team to a championship as she finished the season six months pregnant.

Although I don't recommend championship basketball as a regular activity for expectant mothers, her story does make an important point about exercise during pregnancy. You can exercise during pregnancy at the same level as before you became pregnant for as long as you feel comfortable.

Exercise is an important part of good health, and that holds true even during pregnancy. Staying active for your nine months will probably help some of the minor discomforts of pregnancy like bloating and constipation, may make your labor a little easier, and can make it easier for your body to regain its pre-pregnancy shape.

Most likely you are the best judge of how much exercise you should do during pregnancy. A good rule of thumb is continue to exercise as you did before pregnancy with some modification in the later months. If you didn't exercise before pregnancy, I don't suggest starting a rigorous new athletic program. It's probably a good idea to talk to your doctor about it during your first regular check-up.

If you don't have a regular exercise program, there now are different programs especially designed for pregnant women. Generally, walking, swimming, and mild aerobics are good for any woman even up to the ninth month.

In most cases, you won't have to cut back at all during the first 12 weeks of pregnancy as long as you pay attention to how your body reacts. Pregnancy is not the time to exercise "till it hurts." In the middle three months when you gain nearly half of your pregnancy weight, you may have to reduce the level of your activity somewhat to accommodate your weight gain and modify some sports because of the change in balance. Comfortable, loose clothing, good footwear, and a good bra are important too.

In the last three months, you, your body, and your doctor are the best judges of how much you should exercise. You should avoid any activity involving high speed and hard objects such as racquetball or competitive tennis or a risk of a fall in sports like downhill skiing, water skiing, or horseback riding.

In 1820 Charles Forson Durant became the first man to drop leaflets from a balloon. He dropped copies of his poems, which told of the joys of flight.

The Department of Energy reported recently that as of March, 1981, America's stocks of gasoline were at an all-time high: 286.9 million barrels.

Governor Requests Federal Aid For Flood Stricken Counties

Governor Martha Layne Collins has asked President Reagan to declare at least 14 Kentucky counties as federal disaster areas as the result of last week's flooding. The governor made the request for almost $12,000,000 in federal aid to the President after she herself had spent four days surveying the damage in Kentucky.

"When you consider the amount of damage that my cabinet secretaries and I have personally seen in Kentucky's counties during the past few days," the Governor said, "there is little question of the need of assistance from the Federal Government for both the public and the private sectors."

In making the formal request, the Governor was quick to point out that it was the first and preliminary request for federal help. "Until all the water recedes in all of Kentucky counties, it will be impossible for us to make a final request," the Governor said. "This preliminary request is for those counties and damages that we can verify today. As waters recede in the next few days, and our assessment teams can make valid inspection of the damage, we may be adding more counties to the list of those forwarded to the President for his action."

(The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers estimates the damage in the Big Sandy and Kentucky River basins alone at $234 million.)

After making the request to Washington last week, the Regional Office of the Federal Emergency Management Agency sent more than 40 field workers into Kentucky to determine the exact amount of the damage done in the flood stricken counties. Their initial inspection work was expected to be completed by last Friday, with their data to be analyzed this week and the results sent along to Washington for a final decision on the request for aid by the President.

"Affirmative action by the President will ensure that Kentucky and its people will be better able to cope with the massive recovery effort that must be made," Collins said. "Without assistance from Washington, many of our counties, and most of our people, will have a difficult time recovering from the flood damage."

While Kentucky is waiting for the Presidential Disaster Proclamation, State Government has been doing as much as possible to assist local officials and residents recover from the flood. In addition to activating the Kentucky National Guard to assist in flood evacuation and recovery, Governor Collins also directed Kentucky's Transportation Cabinet to assist local governments by supplying manpower and equipment to clean up after the flood waters had receded. The Governor directed the Cabinet for Human Resources to issue replacement food stamps to those who had lost their previous allotment to the flood.

All of the Governor's actions to assist local governments and the people of the flood ravaged area of Kentucky followed her four-day personal inspection tour of the affected counties. The Governor and various members of her cabinet personally inspected flood and wind damage in Laurel, Russell, Franklin, Breathitt, Lee, Perry, Pike, Floyd, Nelson, Larue, Grayson, Hart, and Ohio counties.

The effects of the floods of 1984 on Kentucky's economy are yet to be determined. However, early reports indicate that as much as 70% of the state's farmland has been affected by the extremely wet spring weather. Ohio county, alone, reported more than 60,000 acres of farmland under water as the result of the flooding. "We must address in some manner, the devastating blow our farmers have suffered," Governor Collins said. "Coupled with last year's drought, this year's flooding and wet weather could be the final blow to many small farmers," she added.

Corps Announces New Fees

The Army Corps of Engineers has a new set of recreation fees for public use of the lakes that it manages across the nation, including charges for certain daytime facilities.

The new fee schedule includes restructured fees for camping, reservation of group picnic shelters, visitors to fee campgrounds and special events.

The public has been paying for the use of certain campgrounds at Corps lakes for several years.

The Corps' Acting Huntington District Engineer, Major Carl Tweedt, said the new fee structure is in response to the Administration's efforts to reduce the cost of operating the federal government, and place more services on a "pay as you go" basis.

Persons with a Golden Age Passport (senior citizen) or Golden Access Passport (handicapped) pay only half of the regular camping fee.

Maj. Tweedt said group picnic shelters may be reserved daily for a maximum period of 10 a.m. to 9 p.m., or for part of that time, for $25. Payment must be received by the Corps' lake office where the shelter is located at least one day prior to the day of use.

The Corps does not reserve campsites, Tweedt said, and they are available on a first-come, first-served basis.

The Corps will accept personal checks, money orders or travelers checks, or cash if paid in person prior to the day of reservation, according to Tweedt.

A picnic shelter may be reserved for a maximum of two consecutive days by an individual or group.

A sign will be posted on each reserved shelter to inform the general public of that arrangement. At all other times the shelters will be available to general use.

Tweedt said that everyone, including charitable and youth groups, is subject to the shelter reservation fee. Golden Age and Golden Access passes will be honored for reserving shelters only when all members of the group have them.

Visitors to fee campgrounds will pay $2 per private vehicle containing one to six persons; $2 for the first six persons in a van or bus, plus $1 per additional person; $1 per person over 12 years of age on foot or on bicycle.

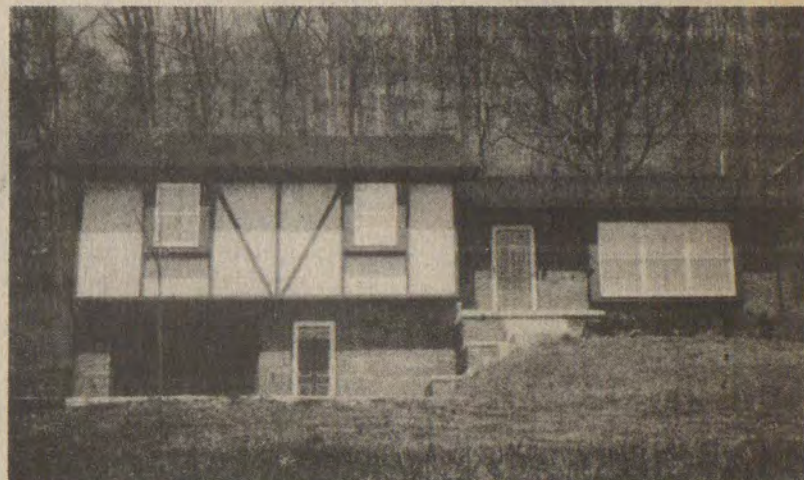

The charge for "special events" on Corps projects is $25. Examples of special events are folksong or arts and crafts shows and boat regattas.

Picnic shelters available for reservation in the Corps' Huntington District include two at Dewey Lake and four at Grayson Lake, both in Kentucky, and five at John W. Flannagan Lake in Virginia. They may be reserved by calling the appropriate lake office.

The 1984 fee for Dewey Lake campgrounds is $7. The camping fee entitles a family (2 adults and their children) to the use of one campsite. Each additional adult camper will be charged $1, according to Tweedt.

Most of the Corps campgrounds will open on May 1. But, since recent rains could affect lake levels, Tweedt recommended that you call the particular lake office before departing on a camping trip.

Soap Beat

Elissa Leeds loves her chance to be feisty

By Nancy M. Reichardt

Elissa Leeds

"It's a relief to finally be able to react to situations like an adult," says Elissa Leeds, who portrays Steffi Brand on "General Hospital." "I've always portrayed nice young girls, so Steffi is my first chance to play a girl who is feisty, independent and strong. She's the first 'heavy' I've portrayed, and I'm loving every minute of it!"

Born and raised in Manhattan, Miss Leeds has been in show business since she was 15 months old. At first, she did a lot of commercials and a theater role. Before long, she'd joined the soaps, beginning with "Another World" where she created the character of Hope Bauer (who later moved to "Guiding Light"). Next, Miss Leeds appeared as Rachel Bachman on "How to Survive a Marriage," and she originated the role of Brooke English on "All My Children."

After leaving "AMC," Miss Leeds headed for tinsel town where she landed roles in nighttime TV series, including a leading role in the short-lived "Dorothy."

"At the time I'd never lived away from New York," she says. "I hadn't even been outside of the city very often. Moving to Los Angeles was very exciting, both personally and professionally."

Movie acting is another dimension she's explored. Miss Leeds appeared in the feature film "Splash" and has a part in the upcoming film "The Woman in Red."

She will also be appearing in the CBS television movie, "My Wicked, Wicked Ways," portraying a young Bette Davis in the film based on Errol Flynn's autobiography.

"I viewed as many of Miss Davis' early films as I could," she explains. "I studied them for hours, trying to talk and walk like her. But I had to give up emulating Bette — she's unique. In the end I just tried to be her."

When George Jones recently celebrated the official opening of "Jones Country," his 95-acre music-park complex in Tyler County, East Texas, more than 6,000 enthusiastic friends, family members and fans were on hand to help. Jones' guest of honor was the recently recuperated Johnny Cash, who headlined the day-long lineup of musical talent.

During the show, Jones and Cash performed a duet, lending their voices to rousing versions of such Cash classics as "I Still Miss Someone" and "I Got Stripes." Jones performed a spirited set of his own, too, and the day's lineup also included Cash's talented wife June Carter as well as Bennie Barnes, Connie Cato and The Hinsons.

"Now that we have our own park, we have to worry if other artists are gonna show up," Jones' wife, Nancy Sepulveda, said, making a joke referring to her husband's own past problems with concert no-shows. "Yeh," quipped Jones. "Now the shoe is on the other foot!"

Jones married Miss Sepulveda in March 1983, and since then she has been instrumental in aiding his drug and alcohol abuse rehabilitation, stopping him from financial ruin and helping him construct his new music park. "It's Nancy," Jones said as he smiled with pride, hugging his wife and posing for photos. "Nancy did it all."

Jones announced plans to perform at his park (which features a 200-foot-wide stage, an excellent sound system, 200 picnic tables, an outdoor dance floor and bleacher seating for several thousand) every other weekend throughout the season's schedule, ending in October. Several other headlining acts will also appear during the coming months.

Boleyn Again Decorated • Other Troopers Honored

Roy Boleyn, the state trooper who last year was awarded the Governor's Medal of Valor for extraordinary heroism in a Perry county gun battle, was again honored Monday at ceremonies held in Frankfort's Sports and Convention Center.

The Guthrie Crowe Medal was conferred on Boleyn, now a paraplegic as the result of wounds received in the Perry gunfight. The decoration is made for wounds sustained under fire. The 33-year-old Boleyn, a native of Knott county, is a resident of Floyd county and at one time was assigned to duty in this county. He had been a trooper nine years when his career as an officer was ended by a bullet fired in the Perry county encounter early last year.

Eight troopers were named to receive the KSP's highest service award for heroism, the Medal for Bravery. Two of the eight were also decorated for injuries sustained under fire.

KSP Commissioner Morgan T. Elkins listed 13 other troopers to receive medals and citations for outstanding service.

The presentation of KSP awards is made once annually to recognize those officers from within state police ranks who have performed "above and beyond the call of ordinary duty," Elkins said.

In the past, the awards were made in December, but, effective this year, the date is being permanently changed to coincide with the observance of National Peace Officers Memorial Day and Police Week. Both observances were established by an act of the U.S. Congress to honor the law enforcement profession and those federal, state and local officers who have been killed or disabled in the line of duty.

National Peace Officers Memorial Day always falls on May 15. Police Week begins on the Sunday of the week in which May 15 falls. Police week, this year, will be observed between May 13-19.

The eight troopers named to get the bravery medal are:

—Trooper Bobby Gosser and Trooper Roger D. Cowherd from the KSP Post at Harlan for "extraordinary courage" in the pursuit of an armed fugitive last Nov. 2 in Bell county. Cowherd shot and fatally wounded the man as he attacked Gosser with a rifle. Cowherd, 24, is a native of Campbellsville and has been a trooper since 1982. Gosser, 36, is a native of Russell Springs and joined the KSP in 1975.

—Trooper Alan D. Atcher from the KSP Post at Elizabethtown for extraordinary courage in the attempted rescue of a four-year-old boy from a burning house near Bardstown last Dec. 12. Although the rescue effort was unsuccessful, Atcher refused to leave the blazing structure until, virtually overcome by smoke and threatened by a collapsing ceiling, he finally was forced to withdraw. Atcher, 31, is a native of Fort Knox and has been a trooper since 1975.

—Trooper Floyd L. Hunsaker and Trooper Mikey J. Turnbow from the KSP Post at Hazard for extraordinary courage under fire on Jan. 4, 1983, in Perry county. The two are being cited specifically for their efforts to rescue a fellow officer (Trooper Roy Boleyn) who was lying in the open, exposed to hostile fire after being shot and critically wounded. Hunsaker, 24, is a native of Illinois and has been a trooper since 1982. Turnbow, 27, is a native of Mayfield and is currently assigned to the KSP Post there. He also has been a trooper since 1982.

Both Hunsaker and Turnbow will also receive the KSP's Guthrie Crowe Medal for injuries sustained during that 1983 gun battle.

—Trooper Donald R. Woods from the KSP Post at Mayfield for extraordinary courage on Dec. 31, 1982, in Graves county during an encounter with a man who pulled a pistol as Woods was attempting to arrest him and thrust it into Woods' side, threatening his life. Instead of drawing his own weapon in self-defense, Woods grappled with the suspect and tried to disarm him by physical force. The attempt failed, and Woods finally was forced to draw his service revolver and fire, wounding the suspect fatally.

Woods has been previously decorated—in 1980 for the capture of an armed and dangerous escapee from an out-of-state prison, and in 1982 for saving the life of a drug overdose victim. A native of Paducah, Woods, 32, has been a trooper since 1977.

—Trooper Tommy D. Jordan from the KSP Post at Madisonville for extraordinary courage under fire while attempting to disarm a barricaded gunman on Dec. 11, 1982, in Clay county. Without resorting to the use of his own weapon, Jordan managed to disarm the suspect despite being directly threatened by him. A trooper since 1974, Jordan, 32, is a native of Gideon, Mo. He also was decorated, in 1978 for his performance during a 1975-76 coal strike in McCreary county.

—Trooper Charles L. Fritz from the KSP Post at Harlan for extraordinary courage under fire during a confrontation with a barricaded gunman in Bell county last Oct. 1. Although being fired upon, he refused to return that fire until all other efforts to talk the suspect into surrendering had been exhausted. Only then did he finally open fire himself, wounding the suspect fatally. Fritz, 31, is a native of Maysville and has been a trooper since 1979.

The eight recipients of the KSP Medal for Meritorious Service are:

—Trooper Wayne M. Neal from the KSP Post at Henderson. A state policeman since 1974, Neal, 31, is a native of Owensboro. He is being cited for defending the life of another trooper during a raid on a field of marijuana in Hancock county.

—Lt. Jerry D. Lovitt, Det. Nelson C. Hatton and Det. Walter A. Chisholm of the KSP's Division of Special Investigations, for their performance in the criminal investigation that led to the 1982 conviction of Harlan County Sheriff Paul Browning, Jr. for conspiracy to commit murder. Lovitt, 38, is a native of Williamsburg who joined the state police in 1969. Hatton, 49, has been a trooper since 1959 and is a native of Richmond. Chisholm, 41, is from Franklin and has been a trooper since 1968.

—Trooper Donald E. Pillow from the KSP Post at Hazard. Pillow was cited for disarming a man armed with a rifle who was firing into a public building. A trooper since 1982, Pillow, 27, is a native of Scottsville.

—Det. Michael J. Carhart, 33, and a trooper since 1972, for disarming a gunman and safely freeing two hostages being held at gunpoint. Assigned to KSP Post at Ashland, he also is a native of that city.

—Sgt. Joseph Steve Duff, 34, a trooper since 1971, for successfully disarming and capturing a barricaded gunman. Duff is assigned to the KSP Post at Harlan and is a native of Kenvir.

—Trooper Mark W. Merriman, 25, from the Morehead Post, for the attempted rescue of a motorist trapped inside his vehicle after it overturned in a Powell county river on May 8, 1983. Merriman is a native of Georgia and has been a trooper since 1979.

The four Troopers Medals will be presented Capt. James E. Cromer of the KSP Special Investigations Division, Sgt. Terry L. Gray, from the Ashland Post, Trooper Gregory S. Gay, from the Richmond Post, and Trooper Manuel D. Irizarry.
